ASSI president against tuition

Mike Elliott, ASSI president, opposed tuition in an interview recently. Elliott's opposition to tuition is based on the principle that education should be free for all students. He believes that tuition would create an economic barrier to education, making it less accessible to those who cannot afford it.

Elliott explained that the national trend towards tuition is unacceptable because it undermines the principle of education as a public good. He cited examples of countries where education is free and contrasted them with the cost of education in the United States. Elliott emphasized that tuition would exacerbate existing inequalities and would be unfair to students from low-income families.

In conclusion, Elliott called for a reevaluation of the current system of funding education and for the exploration of alternative models that prioritize access and equity over cost. He urged ASSI members to join him in advocating for a tuition-free education system.

Campus Interviews, Monday and Tuesday, February 6 and 7

On Tuesday, Feb. 7, Thomas Gartland, who, prior to serving two years in the Peace Corps, gave two programs for Boys at High School, will give a vantage reading of the poetry of Thomas Hardy.

Mr. Gartland says he "discovered Hardy's poetry while working with BBC headquarters in London during the war. He was a Peace Corps Volunteer, he tells how to work and brown sugar techniques, and more important, the use of English language and tried to write the kind of English poetry that Hardy wrote.

He feels that Hardy's prose has overshadowed his poetry but that eventually Hardy will be regarded one of England's most significant poets.

Har many friends take this means of wishing LEIGH H. HAGG, a very happy birthday.

An interesting addition to the community is the new Buleo Motors in SLO.

"A very happy 21st birthday."

The new Buleo Motors is located at 895 Higuera and is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

What do you think of faculty evolutions?

Peg, Cal Poly-B.A. student: I really think we should hire them. But I don't think the department heads or deans should use it as a reason for firing anyone. The evolution isn't going to all of a sudden make the department heads or deans look good.

Ray, Student—Pre-Ed: I think it will be interesting to see how the students will react to this. It may affect the way they feel about their teachers in the near future.

Bill, Arboretum-Jr.: It will be interesting to see how the students will react to this. It may affect the way they feel about their teachers in the near future.

Reagan's 'fiscal crisis' challenged

Dr. Rosen, president of the Cal Poly chapter of the American Professor Association, recently addressed an audience of faculty members and students. He discussed the importance of higher education and the need to cut back on government expenditures.

Dr. Rosen, who spoke at the annual meeting of the American Professor Association, said that the government's budget deficit is threatening to undermine the quality of higher education. He called for a reduction in federal spending and an increase in tuition and fees to help pay for the cost of education.

The question of how much the government should spend on higher education is a complex one. On the one hand, many argue that the government has a responsibility to ensure that every American has access to a university education. On the other hand, others believe that the government should not be involved in the provision of higher education.

Reagan, who has been criticized for his proposed budget cuts, defended his administration's policies. He said that the government must continue to cut back on spending in order to balance the budget.

The debate over the government's role in higher education is likely to continue for some time. It is clear, however, that the current fiscal crisis will have a significant impact on the future of American higher education.

Pseudo-super patriots

After the previous editorial, which was addressed to the student body, and the next one, which was addressed to the professors, I would like to address the pseudo-super patriots.

I have heard it said that the student body should be made up of super patriots. I do not agree with this statement. As a student, I believe that we should be able to express our opinions without fear of retribution. If we are unable to express our opinions, then we are not free.

The right to freedom of speech is a fundamental right of every citizen. It is a right that we should cherish and protect. If we are not able to express our opinions, then we are not free.

I hope that you will consider this statement and that you will support the right to freedom of speech.

Sincerely,
Rita Miller
