Editorial

When P. Sheldon Harden announced his resignation from head football coach at the University of California at Berkeley, on October 29, 1961, said, "I couldn't seem to get the ball rolling."

Harden had the task of picking up the pieces in six years. His only winning season was a 6-6 mark posted in his first year in 1955. Harden's record of 16-44-2 during his ten years at Berkeley had largely been the result of the student-athlete blowout, which resulted in a 3-25-1 record during Harden's tenure at the school.

It's rather obvious that the administration was patient with Sheldon Harden in view of his six-year tenure as coach.

And in view of that, President Kennedy must be re-elected before the new coach can produce a winner. However, it must be emphasized that President Kennedy wants a winner and it's conceivable he'll do everything until he gets one.
