EDITORIAL

Whoa, Judiciary

In our first editorial of the actual year, we stated that the Mustang Daily would work closely with the Associated Students, Inc., to the end of better serving the student body of this college. However, we add that if the Mustang Daily was inefficient in its portrayal of student matters, it would make no money at all one of us. A thorough delineation of the powers of the Student Judiciary and of the prerogatives of its justices is needed.

The dispute over the appearance of a political advertisement in this newspaper involving the California College Republicans and Youth for a New America was reported on two occasions in the pages of this newspaper: as a "libelous affair," the Student Publishers' Board felt the code was not within the precincts of all, and the opinion was rendered as far as it could go.

However, the case was presented to the Registrar-President and to the Student Executive Cabinet. Leonard Pederson and the Student Executive Cabinet had the opportunity to operate of this newspaper in the form of an injunction privilege. But the Mustang Daily does not have the authority to sell the code. The code is not to be sold.

It is now a matter that we consulted the advertising as an editorial decision of our own.

In conclusion of the Student Judiciary case, Leonard Pederson must be brought to the attention of the ASI with student matters, it would make no money at all one of us. A thorough delineation of the powers of the Student Judiciary and of the prerogatives of its justices is needed.

The Mustang Daily is an organ that portrays students on all sides of an issue and should properly be removed to the voice of the entire student body rather than the mouth piece of one student group. This newspaper does not recognize the right of the Student Judiciary to go against it if it is within its right to do so. This is a new idea for the Student Judiciary.

Of course, the Mustang Daily must operate within the parameters of law, but it is not to be seen as such laws are there.

Indeed, the administration and Student government have made this newspaper responsible only, but the Student Publishers' Board so that we may be free to operate within the confines of good management, and the Mustang Daily has been brought to the attention of the Student Executive Cabinet around a recent Student Publishers' Board meeting.

In our opinion, the most important thing that may be said about the action of Leonard Pederson and the issuance of the injunction against the CCR is that it was a proper and reasonable thing to do. It was a party to that conversation.

If the Associated Students, Inc., established guidelines within which the Student Judiciary would operate, the Student Executive Cabinet would not be subject to arbitrary injunctions from what is now the Student Executive Cabinet.

In the light of the preceding, we strongly urge:

1. That the Associated Students, Inc., establish definite guidelines within which the Student Judiciary would operate, the Student Executive Cabinet would not be subject to arbitrary injunctions from what is now the Student Executive Cabinet.

2. That Associated Students, Inc., thoroughly investigate the appearance of political advertisements in this newspaper and the events of Nov. 1 through Nov. 6. And if all allegations are true, it seems there is a case to be made against the Student Executive Cabinet's decision as an elected ASI officer through the misrepresentation of the Student Executive Cabinet. Much work needs to be done to clarify the facts of the CCR case, which would be helpful to the student body.

3. That the Student Executive Cabinet has the opportunity to operate of this newspaper in the form of an injunction privilege. But the Mustang Daily does not have the authority to sell the code. The code is not to be sold.

Will initiative become student right?

A recent recommendation to the Student Executive Cabinet suggests the idea of an initiative being placed on the Student Affairs Council ballot as a student right.

"Contemplation is thoughtful day's College Onion Forum presided over by Owen Servatius.

"We need to do a little more than Die smallest wrong.

"In whole life is obligated by love of the family and by all indications, students would add an entirely new article for initiative.

"I like to enjoy nature as for December.

Great success for first play

The reviewing stand

The community's theater received a popular welcome Saturday night when the first of its productions, "Hey You! Light Man," opened at the S.L.O. Junior High Gym. Yes, the audience was sizable and the applause was overwhelming. The play was a success, a triumph for the theater group and for the theater itself.

The play's success was due to a number of factors. First, the play was well-written and well-directed. The script was lively and engaging, and the direction was clear and effective. The actors were all excellent, bringing their characters to life in a way that made the play enjoyable and entertaining.

Second, the production was well-mounted. The set design was top-notch, and the costumes were well-chosen. The lighting was good, and the sound effects were appropriate.

Finally, the audience was enthusiastic. They were engaged and responsive, and they made the performance a success.

In conclusion, "Hey You! Light Man" was a resounding success. It was well-received, and it bodes well for the future of the theater group. The theater itself is a fine venue for the arts, and it deserves to be supported.

Prejudice here?

Editor

Is writing this letter in a specifically prejudiced manner or is she just trying to stir up the students and draw attention to herself? I believe the latter is more likely since she tends to be a rather impassioned person who often speaks her mind.
