Honored profs rebuke Dumke

The Ministers of Time, Nothing, Creativity, Peace and Defense look down from priest. The affair took place yesterday above as another of the ministers invited a student to stick his finger into the blue paint and become a student to stick his finger into the new Student Union.

Director explains rules

Larry "Voss, director of personnel relations here explained the new change in the personnel grievance procedure as handed down by the chancellor's office.

Under the new procedure, a grievant could appeal his case up to one year, the grievance panel was made up of members holding full professor status from each school.

The site plan for the gas station also included a request for a right-of-way over a small, wedge-shaped piece of city-owned land. Running the length of the proposed site, this strip of land would create considerable traffic hazards. In addition, Alex Madonna, owner of the Madonna Inn, stated that a station would only worsen a traffic situation that already exists.

Instructors sign stern public letter

Five Cal Poly instructors are among 67 distinguished faculty members throughout the state college system who signed a controversial letter rebuking Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke.

The letter, made public Wednesday, accused Dumke of "autocratic policies" that threaten to destroy faculty morale in the 18 state college systems.

The 67 signers of the letter, including the five from this campus, have been past recipients of outstanding professor or distinguished teaching awards. In signing the letter they urged Dumke: "Before the damage is irreversible, display a readiness to moderate that absolutist position which you seem to have assumed and which has begun to infect our campuses."

They added, "We have all been dismayed to witness during the past year a series of policy recommendations and administrative actions that have stripped the faculties of responsibilities previously delegated to them."

"None of us will be proud to teach in an institution in which dissent is punished and authority is presumed to be unassailable. Nor can we teach well if we cannot teach proudly," the letter continued.

The letter cited as an example for concern the recent ouster of the English department Chair­man, Eugene Zuwalt, at Fresno State while armed guards stood by. The letter said that the Fresno State incident "has had a stunning impact on our campuses."

The chancellor is taking away the responsibilities of the faculty he is denying."

(Continued from page 1) property separated the site from the Madonna-access road, and subsequently the plan for the station called for a right-of-way for an exit on the access road. The City Council felt that the developers had presumed too much in planning to take advantage of city property, besides the fact that such an increase would increase the traffic hazard.

After turning down the permit for the station, the City Council made plans for the landscaping of the strip of land in cooperation with Madonna, who indicated that he would also landscape his property directly across from the city land in a complementary manner.

BSU ignores Negro History Day but will remember Angela Davis

by Ahmed Zu-Bellos

Negro, legally defined in the 18th century, means slave. Thus the term is looked upon with scorn by most of Black America. Today is Negro History Day, however, the Black Students' Union (BSU) is merely turning a token eye toward the event.

Richard Jenkins, BSU President, questioned what is supposed to happen on Negro History Day. "Nothing but tokenism," he said, "just another day that Slippy Dick (Nixon) sat aside for his Niggers."

Most of the BSU's immediate attention is focused on January 24, Angela Davis' birthday. Nationwide demonstrations are being planned for what has been proclaimed "Angela's Day." Jenkins said, "The World Federation of Teachers (WFT) (in Budapest) has called upon all teachers' organisations to take an active part in the fight for Angela's freedom."

The WFT represents millions of teachers in Europe, Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Jenkins also noted that the California Federation of Teachers passed a resolution citing Angela as a "victim of academic repression as a result of her political beliefs, activities and affiliations."

be happy to discuss it later in length.

Crulshanks was awarded the Distinguished Teachers Award in 1966.

Overmeyer: "First I believe the letter is accurate. I am concerned with new personnel policies that shift from the faculty's responsibility to police themselves to the chancellor's office.

"In 600 years of college experience, it is shown that when an institution is politicised, the search for truth is lost and the dissemination of knowledge is lost."

Overmeyer received the Distinguished Teacher Award last year.

Ward: "My reason for support is based on my concern over recent recommended changes in the personnel grievance procedure, and recent events at Fresno State as I understand them. While I acknowledge the increase in faculty responsibility in formation of policy and self-governance that has taken place in recent years, I was concerned over the turn of events in recent months."
