City council

by Randall Pry

The TGIF has again come under fire from local residents as well as the city council. This time the problem is centered around a lack, or absence, of restroom facilities.

The controversy developed out of a public hearing into the environmental problems caused at Laguna Lake park by mini-bikes and motorcycle riders. It was reported that the riders were tearing up the park grounds as well as creating a noise nuisance. A parallel was drawn as to the same problems created by functions such as TGIF’s, particularly following Police Chief Erwin Rodger’s request for direction on the part of the city council in the matter of the issuance of permits for such gatherings.

In addition to the problems of noise and traffic, the debate centered around the inadequacies of the restroom facilities at the park when confronted with the large crowds that usually attend these functions.

Dr. C. Dennis Hynes, a biology instructor and Laguna Lake resident, introduced a case against the use of the park by groups staging TGIF and related happenings. Hynes cited examples of persons using the lake and surrounding vegetation in lieu of the public restrooms. His manner grew quite heated as he went on to say that the problems generated from the gathering of young people for such things as TGIF’s should be a concern to the city council to help alleviate; not to act merely to stifle such activities.

The council acted by passing a resolution, in this case specifically applicable to a “Be-in” scheduled for this week-end at Laguna Park, requiring the persons responsible to provide extra toilet facilities at their own expense.

So the fate of the TGIF, or Be-in, is still uncertain. The lines pro and con have become clearer, however, to the residents who are affected on one side, and the people who like to party on the other. The outcome will be decided on the merits the city council uses to affect a compromise, if there is a compromise.

Financial aid: educational incentive in Work Studies Program is offered

By giving students jobs in municipal government, financial aid has become an educational incentive in the Work-Studies Program.

It began last year when two Social Science students, working under the program, operated the Grover City Recreation Hall.

“The response was great and we immediately saw what a useful educational device this was,” said Dean George Chacas of the School of Social Sciences and Business Administration.

By giving students jobs in municipal government, financial aid has become an educational incentive in the Work-Studies Program.

The biggest boon to the program came when educators like Chacas realized that city and county governments have a place for part-time student help.

The Work-Studies Program is nothing new, says Larry Wolfe of the Financial Aids Office. On-campus jobs have helped students for years; but, the off-campus jobs have been at the Paso Robles School for Boys and the Men’s Colony.

After the success in Grover City, administrators began expanding In that direction. Pending new contracts, nine new jobs will be added to the four already secured, in Pismo Beach, Arroyo Grande and the San Luis Obispo Planning Department.

“It’s important to realize that these are education-related jobs,” stresses Chacas. The job ties into the students field-of-interest, and it helps stimulate civic improvement. The student and the community benefit each other.

New tune for new man

by Paul Tomagac

The owner of the only guitar that ever got tried in the Colorado State Supreme Court will be strumming it and telling you all about it today at the College Union patio during College Hour.

Verne Bullock got busted in Colorado for use of heroin. Twice. The second time usually carries a “life sentence” price tag with it. He lucked out.

Bullock, a professional singer for eight years, last year received a phone call from his brother who told him to git and split to California. He did. His guitar didn’t.

Used as his cache for “smack,” his guitar, complete with a “Verne Bullock” name tag, was Exhibit A for the Supreme Court. But by a stroke of something that some people still call luck, became a free man.

Last June, Bullock really became free. It was during that month that he was picked up hitchhiking from Big Sur to Los Angeles by some long-haired trucking in an old van. As they coasted by San Luis Obispo, Bullock passed some drugs to a fellow long-haired traveler. “No thanks,” he smiled. “I’m a Christian.”

Not too long afterwards, Bullock crashed. When he “woke up” a few hours later, the traveler asked him if he wanted to go home to see his family. “No thanks,” he smiled. “I’m a Christian.”

Then they drove to a Christian commune known as the Virgin House. He was greeted at the door by “Devon,” an ex-doper, himself. Bullock’s welcome was warm—“the house is yours. There’s a bed upstairs and food in the refrigerator.”

After sleeping for some hours, he went downstairs only to find the “brothers” in the middle of a Bible study. As he listened, he sensed something radically different in their lives compared to his own. Though appearance-wise they looked the same, they had something deep inside that was missing in his own life. It was the peace.

Verne Bullock in his twenty-three years had gone through nearly every drug. He had tried nine different religions. He had made it as a professional singer. But still no peace.

That day, Verne Bullock saw peace in the shape of a man he had heard about all his life. Later that day, he gave his life to Jesus Christ.

That was June, 1971. This February, 1971, Verne Bullock travels throughout the coast singing and sharing with people the “new life” he has found.

Last month, he traveled to Oregon. This month he will be singing in California and Uah. Next month he will be in Washington and again Oregon.

But today, Verne Bullock is here at this school. At 11 o’clock he will be in the College Union patio. Verne Bullock has been everywhere, but today he will be here. Where have you been and where will you be at 11 o’clock?

Close open door policy

Many months of effort by individuals and groups have gone into changing the residence halls antiquated "open door policy." Thus far, the doors have remained open--much to the chagrin of a growing number of residents. The other holdout, Cal Poly Pomona, recently allowed its residents to close their doors. This leaves Cal Poly S.L.O., the only state college that still retains the policy of open door visitation. It would seem that Cal Poly students are at least as responsible and mature as other students in other colleges. Surely the college students who are equipped with the intelligence and drive to be in college are responsible enough to have closed door visitation. The double standard of being treated as college men and women, yet as children, concerning open door visitation, must end. It is unimaginable that college students, many of who are of legal age, cannot be trusted with a little privacy.

There are several positive steps which are open to those residents who would like a change in these policies. The first involves writing to Dean Chandler and other administrative people, or Tony Turkvich, A.S.I. vice president, expressing your concern. It seems as though the top administrative people consider the residents content with dorm rules and policies. Secondly, attend the second meeting of the Inter-hall Council Closed Door Committee at Trinity Hall, 7:30 tonight. It is this committee, and your support for it, that will determine if we can close our doors this year. You should have your right to close your door.

Sincerely,
Dale Bradshaw

Beauty is only skin deep;

Why must there be so many queen contests? They are truly disgusting and dehumanizing to women. Don't the contestants care if they're objectified? Everywhere I look I see pictures of girls in contests, and am reminded to vote for the most beautiful candidate. What for? Just so someone can wear a crown on her head and have her ego boosted momentarily? Why are there only contests or elections for females? Who ever heard of exploiting the male body? I don't know why so many people define beauty as mere physical appearance. This type of people would say that a physically attractive person with no inner warmth is beautiful, and plain people ugly whether they are warm and friendly or not. I know; I've lived it every day of my life. The teenage beauty will have nothing left when she's an old lady because physically beauty fades with age. Maybe people who judge others on first sight could vote in such elections; but because I don't know any of the candidates.

Glen Holstein seems to have come up with a new definition of the Puritan ethic, which others think of as materialism. Many people believe the idea the inner reality is superior to that which is observed. Most philo-ly is based on it.

Wild mustangs are vanishing

Legislation is being introduced into the U.S. Congress to stop the massacre of wild horses in Nevada, Wyoming, and several other states. These horses, animals, are our country's heritage, are quickly being hunted and trapped to be sold as dog food. To date, the only laws restricting the destruction of these wild horses, which incidently is the symbol of Cal Poly, prohibit hunting them by motorized vehicle. Strangely enough, a large amount of money is spent during hard winters to drive away from private airplanes to small bands of wild mustangs trapped by the snow in the valleys of the Rocky Mountains. It is time for action. Everyone here at Cal Poly is 18 or older and can vote in federal elections. Everyone here has an obligation to save our western heritage, our school's mascot, and our ecological balance. If YOU let the wild mustang die, then I say let the spirit of Cal Poly die, too.

Write your congressman in Washington D.C. and demand protective laws for the wild mustang.

Wrestlers win twice

Two more California schools fell victim to the Mustang wrestlers when San Francisco State and Stanford dropped matches to the Green and Gold. Two victories extended the Mustang dominance over California schools to 96 straight wins without a loss.

In the afternoon match San Francisco State lost, 31-2. The Gators were completely overwhelmed by most of the Mustang wrestling action. Steve Gardner (150) continued posting a 7-6 decision. Glenn Anderson (142) smashed his opponent, 21-2.

Marcello (134) followed with a 5-3 decision against his opponent but blitzed him, 13-0. The only Mustang loss came when Shearer lost his match, 3-1. Gardner followed that match and drew, 7-7. Torres won his match by default when his man suffered a shoulder injury. Torres was leading the match at the time, 6-0.

The roof continued to cave on the Gators when Ron Shearer (158) made the win streak by posting a 7-4 decision. Lee Torres (158) made the win streak by posting a 7-4 decision. All thirteen Colts hit the scoring column when the fresh basketballers ripped Taft Junior College 111-46 Tuesday night. The Colts shot 58 per cent from the field the first half in streaking to a 60-21 margin. Horace Williams pumped in 12 points and Roland Roundswell chipped in nine in the half.

Two victories extended the Mustangs bid for top places. With two games remaining to be played, the Mustangs are making bids for prime positions in the California Collegiate Athletic Association final basketball statistics. In team statistics the Mustangs rank first overall in the nation in its class.

The competition was held at Burbank last Saturday and was sponsored by the National Rifle Association. Shooting 1479 out of 1600, Art Carpenter, Brock Wagstaff and Richard Tognazzini joined Marcello on the winning team. Their score when compared to scores of other teams competing in sectionals across the nation should place them almost in the top spot, according to Tom Carpenter, Rifle Club president. The marksmen squad equaled last year's winning total. Also winning first place at the meet was the expert team of Sam Thomas, Richard Roll, Tim Andrews and Tom Ging. In NRA pistol competition last Saturday at Lompoc, Eastman earned second place while Dave Esposto earned his sharpshooter ranking. The team travels to San Mateo to an area NRA monthly match this Saturday.
