President Robert E. Kennedy, who will confer the degrees, will also introduce President Thomas H. McGrath of California State College, Sonoma, who will deliver the Commencement Address. President McGrath is an alumnus of Cal Poly who earned a vocational certificate in 1939 before the university began conferring bachelor's degrees. He later attended and earned degrees at Santa Barbara State College and Claremont Graduate School.

Others scheduled to participate in the Commencement program are Academic Vice President Dale W. Andrews, who will present the degree candidates, Joseph M. Petite and Jacqueline C. Hayes, who will represent the degree candidates; and Father Joseph Zenk and Rev. George Aki, who will present the invocation and benediction, respectively.

Copies of a bulletin listing courses offered by Cal Poly during the 1972 Summer Sessions are now available. The bulletin gives a full description of the more than 90 courses scheduled in one-week and four-week concentrations.

All lead to quarter unit credit and will allow students to take several courses and still have time for a vacation, according to Don M. Morris (Associate Dean, Continuing Education). Tuition for the self-supporting summer sessions courses is $16 per quarter unit.

Any adult who meets the course requirements may attend the classes in any of several combinations of the one or four-week programs.

In addition to a pre-session of one-week workshops starting on June 19, a first summer session beginning on June 26 and a second summer session starting on July 24 are planned. A one-week session of workshops will open on Aug. 21.

Application forms for the 1972 Summer Sessions are contained in the bulletin. Students only have to submit the form and then register and pay their fees the first day of their classes. Full state university and college admissions procedures are not required.

Dr. Morris explained that the summer sessions are separate from the regular tax-supported Summer Quarter to be offered by Cal Poly starting July 1 and continuing through Sept. 14. Students for that program must follow normal state university and college admissions procedures and be admitted to the university.

Copies of the Summer Session Bulletin and other information about summer programs at the university may be obtained from either the admissions office, Adm-206, 546-2311, or the Continuing Education Office, Adm-311, 546-2053.

GILBERTSON WILL HEAD AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

O. S. Gilbertson has been named head of the Agricultural Education Department. He succeeds H. H. Burlingham, who will retire on June 30 after 24 years as head of the department. J. Cordner Gibson (Dean of the School of Agriculture and Natural Resources) announced the appointment last week.

Dr. Gilbertson joined the Cal Poly faculty in 1968. He was educated at the University of Minnesota, where he received his Bachelor of Science, Master of Arts, and Doctor of Philosophy Degrees, all in the field of agricultural education. He has had experience as a high school vocational agricultural instructor at St. Charles, Minn., and on the faculty of the University of Minnesota.

The Cal Poly Agricultural Education Department prepares men and women for careers as high school vocational agricultural teachers, a role traditional with Cal Poly since 1933. There currently are 60 enrolled in the program.

At Cal Poly, students planning careers as vocational agricultural teachers, enroll in one of 14 majors in agriculture in their undergraduate years, and then complete their education in the agricultural education program. The program includes one quarter of practical experience as a student-teacher in a high school vocational agricultural department.
SUMMER PROGRAM ANNOUNCED FOR HIGH SCHOOL JUNIORS

A program that will make it possible for qualified high school juniors to enroll in Summer Quarter classes at Cal Poly has been announced. The pilot project, will allow high school juniors who are recommended by their principals to enroll in regular courses on the same basis as regularly-enrolled college students, according to Everett M. Chandler (Dean of Students).

Dr. Chandler said under the program students completing their junior year of high school will initially be limited to courses leading to degrees in engineering and technology or in agriculture and natural resources, including courses in science, mathematics, English, and other subjects required for the specific degree objective.

Describing the program as an opportunity for advanced school students to get early college experience, Dean Chandler said if this year's pilot project is successful it will probably be expanded to include other areas of study.

In order to be eligible for the program, high school students who have completed their junior year of study and have a 2.8 grade average must enroll for 12 or more units of college study and either live in campus residence halls or with their families or relatives.

They must complete the normal State University and Colleges Admissions Application, pay the regular $20 application fee, secure a recommendation from their high school principal, and declare a major in a field offered either by Cal Poly's School of Agriculture and Natural Resources or by its School of Engineering and Technology.

Those accepted for the program, which will begin July 3 and continue through Sept. 14, will be required to pay regular Summer Quarter registration fees amounting to $52.50 and, with their parents, attend a special orientation and counseling meeting at the university on the evening of Friday, June 30.

Detailed information about the pilot program for high school juniors can be obtained from principals and counselors at high schools throughout the Central California and Central Coast areas. It can also be obtained from the Cal Poly Admissions Office which is located in Room 206 of the Administration Building on campus.

INTERDISCIPLINARY EFFORT BENEFITS SANTA YNEZ INDIAN RESERVATION

Students in the School of Architecture and Environmental Design and the Social Sciences Department have been cooperating in an interdisciplinary service project for the Indians of the Santa Ynez Reservation near Solvang. Patti Anderson, a social sciences student, initiated the project under the direction of Ann C. Fowler (Social Sciences Department). Miss Anderson visited the Indians repeatedly and learned that a play area for the children was urgently needed.

Students in Robert Beauchamp's (School of Architecture and Environmental Design) class prepared drawings and models, so that the Indians could select the designs for the project. The structures actually built this quarter include an obstacle course for young children and a decked structure with steps and ladders for older children. Beauchamp's class built the structures of wood to compliment the natural environment.

Cal Poly's Associated Students, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and City of San Luis Obispo, University of California at Santa Barbara, various professional architectural organizations, and the Indians of the reservation all contributed money for this project. Miss Anderson hopes that a permanent program of cultural exchange and physical improvement can be established between Cal Poly and the Santa Ynez Reservation.
