PARKING POLICE

by ROBERT CANTINO

Dowu Willen, one of the parking police on campus, said that a parking permit is required to affix a permit to the windshield of your car. Students who do not have a permit may be ticketed. Mr. Willen pointed out that parking permits are distributed to students in September and that those permits are good for the entire academic year.

The purpose of the program is to increase awareness of proper parking procedures. According to Mr. Willen, the parking police have had a positive effect on the parking situation.

The parking police are a part of the Student Activities Board (SAB) and are responsible for enforcing parking regulations on campus. They are empowered to issue citations for violations of these regulations, which may include parking without a permit, parking in a restricted area, or parking in an illegal manner.

The parking police are also responsible for maintaining records of all citations issued, which are used to calculate fines and to determine the level of parking violations on campus.

The parking police are trained to handle a variety of situations, including verifying the identity of individuals who have been cited, explaining the rules and regulations governing parking, and answering questions from students about parking policies.

The parking police are also available to assist students who are experiencing difficulty finding a parking space on campus.

The parking police are an important part of the campus community, and their efforts are a testament to the commitment of the university to providing a safe and welcoming environment for all students.

New referral system helps answer questions

by TOM MARRAH

The Student Roundhouse, a student information service created by the ASI officers of this university, was launched last year, but it will require student support and involvement to reach its full potential.

According to Dennis Johnson, ASI vice-president, the new program is designed to answer questions and provide assistance to students on an ongoing basis. The program operates from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., 7 days a week. It is staffed by volunteers who are available to answer questions and provide guidance on a wide range of topics, such as academic issues, financial aid, and personal concerns.

The program offers several benefits, including a 24-hour helpdesk, a telephone number for students to call, and the ability to schedule appointments with staff members to discuss specific issues.

The Student Roundhouse is available to all students on campus, regardless of their major or class standing. It is designed to be a resource for students who need help with a variety of issues, and it is staffed by knowledgeable and supportive volunteers who are available to assist students in any way they can.

The Student Roundhouse is a valuable resource for students on campus, and it is a testament to the commitment of the university to providing a supportive and inclusive environment for all students.
Youth power at polls

In 1972, 25 million Americans between the ages of 18 and 35 will be eligible to vote for the first time in a presidential election. Considering the fact that two of the last three presidential elections were decided by less than 500,000 votes, the youth vote will have a considerable impact on the upcoming election.

This newly won right to vote will give young people a real chance to voice their opinions on the needs and concerns of this country. On this campus there should be a deep concern for the student voter, and I feel that these voters should have an integral part in American democracy. A registration drive on this campus is necessary.

I am establishing a “Voter Registration Committee.” The appointed chairman is Terri Vanlerberghe and she can be contacted at the ASI office. This committee will consist of about five members (none of which have been appointed yet) with the purpose of organizing a complete voter registration drive. The drive will be conducted in a non-partisan manner. The top qualifications for membership in this committee would be the motivation to do the job and the time to do it.

The target project of this committee will be an attempt to reach three groups on this campus: 1) unregistered, incoming freshmen; 2) upperclassmen who did not register last year; and 3) students registered at their parent’s address who wish to change their registration.”

There is a national non-partisan organization conducting and assisting in voter registration around the country. It’s called “The Student Vote.” Cal Poly’s committee will be working closely with this national organization which will give assistance in the way of supplying materials (posters, etc.), media spots, as well as advice.

The Voter Registration Committee’s work will not end with the registration drive. The name and function change—it will be the “Get-Out-The-Vote” Committee. The entire registration drive will be futile unless people get out and vote. Remember, you’re now a voting citizen.

“The test of any publication is how well it is read. That is whether or not you the reader merely skim through the pages or settle down for intimate personal. Great commercial publications go up or down on the basis of professional readership surveys. Vast sums are spent to determine if your readers read the whole thing, part of the thing or none of the thing.

In the journalism department student journalists often wonder if their efforts are read. Discussions go into great depth on the alleged readership of the Mustang.

I have often taken part in these discussions, arguing vehemently that the newspaper has a large and loyal readership. Until last week I had little proof that it was so, but now I do.

By last Thursday afternoon it must have been pointed out to me at least 80 times that I had run problem, and it has been neatly rolledup and waiting.

The only problem I have now is how do I follow this act? I suppose I could try fuschla or something like that, but it is only luck that yellow was available this week.

Taxes rising for students

by RUSSELL ALLEN

An open letter written by ASI Press, Rob Baggett, printed in the June 1973 issue of the student newspaper. The article discusses the negative impact of rising taxes on students' budgets and the government's plans to increase utility taxes. The author questions the fairness of the proposed tax increases and expresses concern about their potential to negatively affect students and other citizens.

Wallbanger's whooping weapon

by PAUL SIMON

A young researcher named Dr. Harvey Wallbanger has uncovered a method for determining the most equitable solution to the vast ideological differences that threaten to split the nation during this election year. He calls it splitting the nation.

To discover the secret of this enterprising engine, I visited Dr. Wallbanger at his top-secret research center.

What is your plan, Dr. Wallbanger?

"It's really simple, you see. We divide the country along ideological boundaries, providing liberals and conservatives with their own states."

What about moderates?

"Ah-ha! I'm glad you asked me that question. A borderline buffer zone would be established along all borders for fence-straddlers; sort of a CLZ or Conservative-Liberal Zone."

Thinking the good doctor a little touched, I asked why in Spino's T. Agnew he would want to perform such a surgery.

"Just think of it," he replied. "Isolationists can practice that philosophy in the liberal state without endangering the national security of the more conservative elements of society. And conservatives can continue sending enormous sums of money to police the world and uphold their prestige without endangering their own national security from liberals."

Now I think I've got you, Ben. George McGovern would lead the "liberal" state and Richard Nixon would preside over the "conservative" regime.

"Not exactly. It's true McGovern would be president of the government but the conservatives could lock him around any more..."

Rubbing his grape-stained hands in glee, Dr. Wallbanger shouted, "Just think of it. Jack Anderson would be able to conspire at will in the "liberal" state, but, of course, since everything will be in the open he will find nothing to worry about. Then he'll amino into the "conservative" state by the end of the month and all other trouble-makers will be trapped in prison, with the help of the FBI and Martha Mitchell."

"Imagine, an entire state without internal dissent; full of loyal, patriotic citizens giving all their income to the good of their government—and loving it. "And imagine both countries would be satisfied. In the "conservative" state, there would be no protests because the government couldn't allow it, and in the "liberal" state dissenters could protest to their heart's delight."

"Your ideas sound pretty far-out, Dr. Wallbanger, but how do you propose to achieve the division. And how will you convince those who won't do anything that isn't on their own, like George Meany?"

"That's easy. The November elections will continue. The states that McGovern carries will belong to the "liberal" state and those that Nixon carries will go to the "conservative" state. And Meany will simply cease to exist."

"Holy Goldwater, Dr. Wallbanger, there don't seem to be any drawbacks to your plan."

"Well, to make myself perfectly clear, there is, in fact, one slight problem that I have anticipated. You see, if the "liberal" state has become isolationist and is spending money for social concerns rather than for defense, there is a possibility the barracks "conservative" state will wish to spread its sphere of influence and at the same time protect the "liberal" state against the threats of Communism and the domino theory."

"In other words, the United States could become the newest Vietnam."

Wolf is spared not the coyote

The cancellation of a Department of the Army procurement of over a quarter of a million parks hounds with wolf fur muffs may have saved Americans over $1 million in tax money and the lives of approximately 10,000 wolves, or "about one-half of the total estimated North American wolf population," to fill the huge order.

Duty of disciplinarian

by SUSIE FRENCH

Hopelessly, most of us won’t accomplish the feat of meeting Larry Wolf, head coordinator of student discipline. But for those of us who stumble into his office by chance, and under better circumstances, we are sure to wonder how he got stuck in the discipline department.

After meeting Larry Wolf you might wonder why he would choose to be head of student discipline. Job like this one seems to be reserved for ex-Marine drill sergeants rather than quick-to-smile individuals who can actually make you feel comfortable. Sergeant rather than quick-to-smile individuals who can actually make you feel comfortable during an interview.

“The Sen Luis Obispo County discipline department is not a popular place among the students. Students have no respect for us!” said Wolf.

Although the students have no respect for the discipline department, Larry Wolf has a great deal of respect for his masters in English so he can leave student discipline and become an English instructor.

“Prior to last fall,” said Wolf, “each residence hall had their own student board and I just reviewed the cases. However it was terminated because of too much inconsistency between halls.”

Wolf also said many of the disciplinary measures undertaken depend on the circumstances and the attitudes of the surrounding students.

“I prefer that the student resident advisors have discretion over whether or not the students are violating the rules because they are closer to being part of the peer group.”

When a student is concerned with major violations against the State Penal Code or the Student regulations, the university still has the prerogative to take administrative action.

For example, most cases dealing with possession of marijuana have resulted in suspension for a period of time. The way to meet Mr. Wolf that would be less serious that most would be to accumulate a number of parking tickets. With an excess of five tickets you would receive a formal notice. That would be a good place to stop because any more might find you with a cancelled parking permit.

Most of the smaller discipline problems are sifted out in the two main functions various stages before they become part of the shuffle paperwork on Larry Wolf’s desk.

He performs two main functions investigating cases. A misdemeanor has violated either the State Penal Code or the student conduct regulations, and presenting such cases at the hearings.

Wolf usually deal with theft, abusive behavior, possession and use of drugs, and gambling or violation of the parking regulations which fall under violation of the state penal code. Violations dealing with alcoholic beverages are part of the student regulations established by the school.

When such a case is brought to Wolf’s attention he must determine if it is deserving of a formal charge. If the case is not dropped it is presented to Pres. Kennedy and at his consent a hearing is set. At the hearing Wolf presents the case and acts as prosecutor. However most cases are taken care of more simply. Usually warnings are issued for violations of campus regulations unless there have been multiple violations and a formal complaint has been received. In these cases a hearing is held.

Student input on evaluations

Plans to develop a university wide student evaluation of faculty members were discussed at the first meeting of the Ad Hoc Student evaluation of Faculty Committee.

The committee will make guidelines which will set general standards and procedures for each department to operate its own student evaluation of faculty program.

Hilary Findley, AS1 representative, said he would like to see the faculty evaluated “yearly or perhaps more” and the evaluations to be “used in personnel considerations for the university.”

Another student member, Pam Brown, said she was pleased to see that “stigs are finally being taken to allow students to have an effective input in the evaluation of teachers.”
ASI cash livens office

by PAULA QUALLS

Orange and yellow-orange are the colors making for a bright and pleasant atmosphere in the ASI office this year.

ASI Pres. Robin Baggett attains in an office decorated with a new wall-to-wall bookshelf constructed by the Foundation Carpenters, a maintenance group on campus, an orange two-seater couch, several chairs, and a beige desk. From the windows of his office Baggett can take in a view of the Administration building and the Santa Lucia women's residence hall.

The outer office is equipped with four desks for the other ASI officers which includes one full time secretary Peggy Keep, Paul Tokunaga, co-ordinator of communications, Mike Metring, head of the Finance Committee, and John Lange, Chief Justice over the student Judiciary.

Across the hall into what was once a conference room is now ASI Vice-President Denny Johnson's office also in the same decorum as the main office.

Expansion of the ASI office was done, it was explained, to make it possible for more students to become active in the student government.

The ASI office last year with Pete Evans as ASI president was very similar to what it is now, except the Malcolm X, Angela Davis and Women's Lib posters are no longer hanging on the walls.

A special fund set aside for furnishings and decorations was started several years ago by the Student Affairs Council.

Roy Oersten, director of Business Affairs for the ASI said, "Of the 15,000 in the fund approximately $3,000 has been spent."

The $3,000 dollars has been dwindling since the ASI office moved into the College Union. Some of the money has gone for Johnson's new office and for three new desks in the ASI office.

Girls, hot permits ...

(Continued from page 1) Violators are usually cooperative when confronted face to face. Still it is not at all uncommon to come across an angry violator screaming profanity because of a two dollar fine. Fortunately for Willi these individuals are always all bark and no bite.

One year the parking officers and the security police issued 25,000 tickets. According to Willi these tickets are given out because of the students' carelessness instead of an officer's quota. There is no such thing as a quota but there is such a thing as carelessness, he said.

The other parking officer seen driving the Pushman scooter is Officer Carlos Ramirez. Though his job is to chock the parking time zones and bicycle lanes he occasionally does other work.

Tutor program is successful

The tutorial program started this summer by the ASI is working "as well as could be expected" according to Robin Baggett ASI Pres.

The program offers free tutoring in chemistry, physics, math, statistics, economics, accounting, and computer science daily from 2 to 3 p.m. in C.U. room 220.

The daily turnout averages 45 people, with one or more tutors helping in all subjects. Chemistry and math are the biggest in demand.

Recently Ramirez found two dogs suffocating to death because their owner had the window shut completely during the hot day.

Acting quickly on the situation, Ramirez notified the Security Office to get in contact with the Humane Society. Ramirez somehow was able to get the car doors open to help save the unconscious dogs.
Foreigners' fees hiked

by ALFRED RUCKER

At one time the state of California had the most attractive and lowest tuition fees for attending college than any other state. This was the opinion of one foreign student who came to this country to get an education that was unavailable to him in his home country.

Kuria Manyore from Kenya, Africa graduated from this university with a bachelor's degree in general agriculture in the summer of 1971. In 1972 he received his master's degree also from the International Club which is made up of foreign students. Most of the students were told that the talk of increasing tuition first started he was concerned. At that time he was president of the International Club which is made up of foreign students.

Manyore recalled that when he attended college in his country because only students who have straight A's can attend. He received his master's degree also in the Summer of 1971. In 1972 he was president of the International Club which is made up of foreign students.

Manyore said, "the tuition was so increased. All was not lost because the talk of increasing tuition first started he was concerned. At that time he was president of the International Club which is made up of foreign students. Most of the students were told when they left college at the end of Spring Quarter because most of the legislature was on their side the chances were very slim that the increase was forthcoming. Such was not the case however, Manyore said. When students returned tuition had been increased. All was not lost because a loan fund was established to aid the students, he said. Many could not afford to pay the increase and so some dropped out of school, while others transferred to different colleges where they could get a job to finance their schooling.

When asked what he felt was the purpose of the increase Manyore said, "the tuition increase was I feel to prevent more foreign students from coming to this country to get an education."

He said, "if it was not for California I could not have finished college but the way things are going now only the wealthy can afford to send their children to school here."

Manyore said he feels the exchange cultures, but that has forcing students over here and forcing students from coming to this country to get an education.

ROCK REVIEW

Foghat shakes 'em up

by CYNTIA LYBARGER

Just because it's summer doesn't mean that we aren't entitled to a good rock concert. This was proven true Saturday night with the appearance of Foghat and Victoria in Chumash Hall.

Victoria, a long-haired lass with a vibrant voice, opened the evening's fun with a personality and talent described as uninhibited—to say the least. She accompanied herself on piano and guitar along with two other personas on electric bass and oello.

On the whole aho produced a refreshing sound that seemed to rise up from the very depths of her personality. Her music often began softly, then swelling to reach a height of inner emotions and then just as quickly diminishing.

Victoria truly is an excellent female performer on stage and appears to have a much-needed ability to handle audiences. She stated once on stage that she wanted to bring the audience from "your up-down to your up-up" in the series of songs she sang.

A sad thing about her performance was the attitude of a small minority of the audience that often shattered the mood she was trying to create and therefore hindering the enjoyment of other people. Too bad some of the people who insisted on talking during the concert and getting up and walking around didn't come in later when Foghat performed — then it would have been completely permissible.

Foghat, an English rock group with members from Savoy Brown, succeeded in "turning on" the audience after only about 30 seconds on stage. Their boogie beat acted as a kind of electricity that brought nearly everyone in the near-full auditorium to their feet vibrating and literally "rocking out." This pace continued for what seemed like an extremely short time, (but actually we'd just lost track of time) and the group was brought back on the stage by the enthusiastic audience two times before the concert ended.

For those who attended Saturday night, it was an evening of fun and excitement which left you a little breathless. If you didn't go, all I can say to you missed a fantastic experience, and you still have a chance this summer at a good rock concert on September 4 when Cold Blood makes an appearance here.
Least known athletes

by WILLIE RAMIREZ

As summer school rapidly comes to an end, athletes begin getting into shape (or their runners respective sports. Should be the tough ones on this themselves, though, and they Irving. Other players look like (ree-throw line stuffs a la Julius Maravtch's and others trying an opposing jersey. They're ready to kill anybody in its strenuous workouts, and football, and each team was held the other day, I viewed a pretty well-matched. On one it. The sport is called cross-country, although intramural sports going on, but you do see people in a variation of particular. This sport isn't in the Intramural program, although it. The feeling is still in my man-to-man competition, but there's that's all gone now. I also believe me, that's what's still driving me on. When I read about Jim Ryun's (the world record holder in the 1600 and 1500 meter run) great comeback, I couldn't help but give it a try. He has to be one of the greatest comebacks in sports history. As an 18-year-old high school senior, he competed in the 1969 Tokyo Olympics. In 1967, he set world records in the mile 3:53.1, 15000 3:31.1, as well as in the 880 1:46.8 and 4400 meter 8:53.2.

Entering the 1969 Mexico Olympics, he had a beat with mononucleosis and finished second to Kipchoge Keino in Kenya. In 1971, he had some horrible races in 1980, whereas he dropped out or finished dead last quite a few times. He quit running altogether in 1980. In 1971, he decided to make a comeback, although he was thirty pounds overweight. After constant workouts, he made it back to 160 pounds, and then ran in a few races in 1973. His progress was up-and-down, but in his last two races he has run extremely well. His last mile race was 3:53.3, third fastest of all-time. Only he has run faster in this event, with Halt four at 3:50.1. He now the favorite going into his third Olympics, this time in Munich, Germany. After all this writing, I hope you've gotten a better outlook on cross-country, since most people consider it only a pesty sport. Runners put a lot of hours into their workouts: whether on the track or over cross-pastures. They're a unique breed.
