NEW DIETETICS AND FOOD ADMINISTRATION DEGREE PROGRAM

A new Bachelor of Science Degree program in dietetics and food administration will be offered at Cal Poly according to Carl C. Cummins (Dean, Human Development and Education). Objective of the new program, which will be offered by the Home Economics Department for the first time next fall, is to provide preparation for dietetics and food administration in institutional and commercial food service programs.

Dean Cummins said the new major is expected to provide an educational background for careers in dietetics and food administration, for entrance into approved internships in the field, and for membership in the American Dietetic Association.

Ruth H. James (Head, Home Economics) said the new curriculum has been planned as an extension of the food administration-dietetics course option, which has been available to home economics students at Cal Poly for the past several years. It will utilize many of the faculty and facilities of the Home Economics Department, as well as the faculties of the Biological Sciences and Food Industries Departments.

The new dietetics and food administration curriculum will become the third degree program offered by the Home Economics Department. More than 650 students are currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Science Degree and Master of Science Degree programs in home economics.

Dr. James pointed out that graduates of the department's dietetics and food administration option have been unusually successful in obtaining internships and graduate study fellowships in recent years. Thirty-three of those who completed their bachelor's degree studies last spring and applied for them are currently involved in internships.

BUSINESSMEN INVITED TO CAMPUS SEMINAR

Businessmen and investors throughout Central California will have a chance to learn about management of their income and sales dollars during the Independent Business Seminar at Cal Poly next Monday and Tuesday (Jan. 22-23).

Members of the Cal Poly business faculty and the local business community will lead discussions designed to help local businessmen understand "What Makes Your Business Tick?" That is the theme of the conference.

Seminar chairman Alex Madonna, owner of the Madonna Construction Company and other enterprises located in San Luis Obispo, said that the purpose of the conference is to keep leaders of the Central Coast business community up to date on the latest techniques and developments in financial management.

CHILD CARE CENTER INVITES CHILDREN OF FACULTY, STAFF

Faculty and staff of the university are invited to register their children for the new Associated Students, Inc., Cal Poly Child Care Center from 7 to 9 p.m. this (Tuesday, Jan. 16) evening in Sierra Hall, according to Roy Gersten (Director, ASI Business Affairs), who said the center will open its regular operations at 8 a.m. tomorrow (Wednesday, Jan. 17).

Gersten pointed out that children of faculty and staff, as well as those of the university student body, are eligible to use the Child Care Center, but that those of students will have first priority. Faculty and staff whose children attend the center will also be required to become associate members of the Associated Students, Inc. Registrations will also be received between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Thursday and Friday.

Funds for operation of the new child care program are being provided through a subsidy from the Associated Students, Inc., and the hourly enrollment fees that will be paid for the children who participate. The remodeled facilities in Sierra Hall are being provided by the university under terms of a two-year lease costing $1 per year, and utilities will be paid for by the ASI.

The center will operate eight hours a day and five days a week under the direction of Mrs. Alva Davis, who has extensive experience in supervision of child care programs. Preschool children can be enrolled for either 2, 3, or five days a week, and will be involved in both learning and social experiences as part of the normal program of the center.

Those wishing more information about the ASI Child Care Center are invited to contact Mrs. Davis in her office in Sierra Hall or by telephoning 546-4726.

Cal Poly faculty members who will lead sessions during the two-day program are Edward H. Barker (Dean of Business and Social Sciences), and Charles Andrews, Paul Cone, and Harold Miller (all Business). Arthur Bourdon, a certified public accountant with offices in San Luis Obispo, will also be a discussion leader.

The two-day seminar is co-sponsored by Cal Poly, the San Luis Obispo County Telegram-Tribune, and the Society of California Accountants. The $10 registration fee includes refreshments for both evenings.

Meetings on both nights last from 7 to 10 p.m. and are open to anyone with an interest in independent business management. They will take place in the university theater.

Additional information and a free folder containing information can be obtained by contacting the School of Business and Social Sciences, 546-2704.

All public telephone prefixes in the 415 and 714 telephone code areas can now be dialed as ATSS ten-digit calls, according to information received from Barbara Ciesielski (General Office Supervisor). Mrs. Ciesielski urged university employees to use the ATSS for numbers in those code areas.
NEWSPAPER ARTICLE HAS KIND WORDS FOR CAL POLY STUDENTS, FACULTY, AND STAFF

Cal Poly students, faculty, and staff came in for words of praise in an article published recently in the Encinian, a weekly newspaper with a circulation of 20,000 which is published in the San Fernando Valley community of Encino.

The article by Ira Raines, whose daughter is a student on campus, refers to the university as an "academic oasis" with an administration and faculty that is a "family of dedicated, sensitive and proud professionals" and students who "generate a warm, friendly environment, exhibit, spirit in activities, purpose in learning and pride in belonging."

Excerpts from the article, which is headlined "Academic Oasis - Voice of the Silent Majority" and appeared in the Dec. 6-7, 1972, edition of the Encinian, read:

"... Nestled in the hills, overlooking the serenity of this California community, sits an educational institution of higher learning that reflects a model environment. This 12,000 student-body campus has not surrendered its small college appearance to the benefit of its inhabitants and to the credit of its planners. Void of high-rise school and dormitory buildings, the facility blends new and old low-slung buildings with the lush landscaping liberally in abundance throughout the area. The campus is large enough to accommodate its moderate size citizenry but small enough to walk its length in less than 15 minutes. A refreshing configuration in these days of high-rise complexities.

"The administration and faculty is a family of dedicated, sensitive and proud professionals. They are dedicated to their profession, sensitive to their students, and proud of the educational heritage of Cal Poly. An atmosphere and record that is clearly visible to the observer. Their leadership and inspiration contributes to the excellence in educational opportunities and wholesome social activities of campus life. An environment worthy of praise.

"With all these attributes, the real strength and most significant asset of this campus structure is its student population. The young men and women inhabiting Cal Poly are in many ways similar to their counterparts in other academic communities with one notable exception. Their attitudes. It is reflected in all their endeavors. They generate a warm friendly environment, exhibit spirit in activities, purpose in learning and pride in belonging. They are the ones who give life and meaning to Cal Poly ..."

PROGRAM ON VOLLEYBALL SLATED TONIGHT

Rudy Suwara, a former member of the U.S. Olympic volleyball team, will lead a discussion on volleyball as a participation sport at 8 p.m., today (Tuesday, Jan. 16), in the Men's Gym on campus.

Sponsored by the campus chapter of the California Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation and the Cal Poly Volleyball Club, the meeting is open to the public. There will be a 50 cent admission charge for non-members of the two organizations.

Suwara, who is volleyball coach at the University of California, Santa Barbara, will present films and demonstrate volleyball techniques. Members of the audience will be invited to participate in demonstrations. Films of intercollegiate and international volleyball competition will also be shown.
CAMPUS GROUP WILL STAGE BIKE-A-THON FOR MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS

Cyclists will huff and puff over San Luis Obispo roadways on Saturday, Jan. 27, so that victims of Multiple Sclerosis may someday themselves be able to pedal bicycles. Sponsored by the Cal Poly Circle-K Club, the 28-mile Bike-A-Thon will begin at Mission Plaza in San Luis Obispo, travel along Johnson Ave. and Orcutt Rd. to Lopez Dr., and return along Highway 227 (Edna Rd. and Broad St.) to the starting point.

Donors will pay to the Multiple Sclerosis fund a pledged amount for each mile that their sponsored bike rider covers. The mile rate varies according to the sponsor's wishes. Application blanks are available at the activities office in the Julian A. McPhee College Union at Cal Poly, and at the SLO Transit Authority, the Record Exchange, Copeland's Sports, Serendipity, Stereo West, and the Tropicana and Valencia West student residences, all in San Luis Obispo.

James Marchal, president of the Cal Poly Circle-K group, says all bike riders are invited to join in the Bike-A-Thon. Participants obtain their own sponsors.

ADDITIONAL SERVICE TIME APPLICATIONS FOR SOME P E R S MEMBERS

Faculty and staff who were appointed half time or more prior to Aug. 1, 1961, and entered the Public Employees Retirement System six months after appointment, may, prior to retirement, apply for the additional six months service time by contacting PERS directly and paying whatever costs are necessary, according to an announcement from the Personnel Office.

The announcement, which pointed out that the retirement system will allow a convenient payment plan for the additional costs, suggested that requests be addressed to "Public Employees Retirement System, Membership Division, 1416 Ninth St., Sacramento, CA 95814." Persons returning to state service where previous contributions were withdrawn, may re-deposit such contributions with interest and reclaim the previous service time toward retirement.

Inquiries regarding these matters may be directed to the Personnel Office, Adm-110, 546-2236.

POSITION VACANCY LISTED BY A S I

The Associated Students Officers Office has a full-time position open immediately for a Clerk Typist IIA. Applicants must have a genuine liking for and the ability to work with students and student officers. Duties include acting as receptionist, keeping track of appointments, and other typing and office duties as required. Further information about the position, application forms, and appointments for an interview may be obtained by telephoning 546-2011 or 546-4761.

Those wishing them can pick up copies of the forms needed for filing federal income tax returns in the Personnel Office, Adm-110. Forms for use in filing state income tax returns will be available there in the near future.
BELAUNDE'S HIGHWAY TURNS INTO FINANCIAL GOLDMINE FOR PERU

When Fernando Belaunde Terry of Peru started talking about the Marginal Forest Highway, all he got was snickering and cries of "a highway from nowhere that leads to nowhere." But 15 years later, the now exiled president's highway is proving to be a financial goldmine that is helping to bring financial aid to the poor and stability to the South American country.

Belaunde will speak on foreign affairs at Cal Poly on Thursday, Jan. 25, at 8 p.m. as part of the university's Convocation Series. Cal Poly, the student council of its School of Architecture and Environmental Design and SCARAB, the honorary society for architecture students, are joint sponsors of the program. The public is invited to attend the talk set for Chumash Auditorium of the Julian A. McPhee College Union. Admission will be free.

Now 60 years old, Belaunde took office as Peru's constitutional president in 1963 after being chosen by popular election among his nation's citizens. The successor to a military junta that had ruled Peru before his election, he was credited with a number of reforms intended to narrow the gap between the "have" and the "have not" before his government was deposed in 1968. Since that time, he has resided in exile in the United States.

As leading architect in Peru's capital, Lima, Belaunde first proposed the highway in 1957. He was troubled by the fact that most of South America's population lived along the coast while fewer than five per cent lived in the back country of the jungle heartland. Much of the continent was not being used despite its being one of the largest arable land masses. But now, thanks to a highway "that leads to nowhere," that South American land is beginning to be more populated and more prosperous.

The 3,500-mile highway, which runs through Columbia, Ecuador, Peru, and Bolivia, did not begin to take shape until after a 1963 feasibility study showed that the road would bring 1,500,000 settlers to unused land along its route. The study also showed that the road would pay for itself with new agricultural output, including bananas, beef, rice, tea, and coffee.

It was his students that persuaded Belaunde to run for the presidency. After he won, Belaunde turned full force toward the making of the highway, charming journalists, bankers, and other prominent, influential leaders. Soon the money began to flow. In building the highway, he used some of the Incan principles by having villagers build the access roads to their village. Also the Peruvian army was used to help cut costs.

Houses and living complexes sprouted along the highway. New industries flourished to bolster the Peruvian economy. The highway was a success. Agricultural productivity increased to help feed the growing nation.

Belaunde's idea for the Marginal Forest Highway has prompted other such roads in other parts of the world. And just as the highway is proving profitable, so are others in Thailand, Uganda, and Brazil. Thanks to Belaunde and his ideas, man is looking once again to the country road, one of the most basic paths to progress, to help solve the complex growth problems of the developing world.

Typewritten copy intended for the next issue of Cal Poly Report must be received prior to 12 noon Friday, Jan. 19, in the Office of Information Services, Administration-210.

VISTA GRANDE GETS NEW TELEPHONE NUMBER

The Vista Grande restaurant which opened for business last week, has a new telephone number, according to John Lee (Foundation Food Services Director). Lee urged those having frequent business with the restaurant to make note of the new number, 546-4784, and begin using it immediately. Although table reservations are not required in the restaurant, they can be made by using the new number.

The return of excess supplies of inter-campus mail envelopes is being requested by the General Office. Offices and departments that have quantities of the envelopes in excess of their current needs are asked to return them to the Duplication Center, Adm-129.
