Prop. 14, the so-called Wine Tax Limitation Initiative, is the first of nine initiative scheduled to appear on the ballot for voter approval on Nov. 7.
A "Yes" vote on this initiative constitutional amendment is a vote to limit ad valorem property taxes, to change various, other taxes, and to revise the system for the financing of public education and social welfare services.

A "No" vote is a vote against the proposed changes.
Proposition 14 would prohibit the state of California from imposing a property tax except when no other funds are available to pay debts or liabilities existing next July.

The measure would also limit living expenses to $120 per month and $1,170 assessed valuation to $2 for counties, $3 for cities, $4 for consolidated cities and counties, as additional, $5 for schools and 80 cents for special districts.

Taxing agencies which exceeded these limits in 1971-72 could retain their 1971-72 tax rate except those for welfare, education and indebtedness, through 1976-77.

Household furnishings and personal effects would be exempt from taxation, and property taxes would be limited to 1.76 per cent of market value for all purposes other than payment of debts and liabilities.

The measure would also prohibit property taxes for social and 86 to 90 on others.

A severance tax on minerals equal to the combined rate of state and local sales taxes would also be imposed.

According to Legislative Analyst A. Alan Pink, these changes in the tax structure would result in an increase in state costs by $8,258 million, leaving a revenue gap of $273 million.

City and county revenues would be reduced by $161 million, and local property taxes would be reduced by $5,301 million, or 43 per cent.

Opponents of the measure contend the proposition "means higher taxes for the average citizen. California needs tax reform, but not this proposition, which shifts that tax burden from large land-owners to homemakers and renters.

Proponents say, "This is your last chance to lower your home taxes and guarantee that taxes will not drive you out when you retire."

Prop. 15

Proposition 14, another initiative on the November ballot, regards state employees' salaries.

A "Yes" vote on this initiative would include the constitution new procedures for establishing the salaries to be paid state employees and for regulating employer-employee relations between the state and its employees.

A "No" vote is a vote against

Vietnam War insights

Editor:
Do you know: President Nixon talks of withdrawing all troops, while the Pentagon admits many simply shifted to Thailand for bombing operations from there. An international shell game? Since March his "residual force" numbers 160,000—not the 37,000 in South Vietnam alone. Miss Bess, numbers 150,000—not the opposition from there? An Inch. Do you know:
Nixon asked of Laos to help in Vietnam, and has returned after truce only. Allowed to observe bombing as a neutral state. The public was first informed of the air strikes in Laos in Spring, 1967. SIX YEARS AND 60,000 BOMBS AFTER THEY BEGAN?
Today newsmen are not allowed to observe bombing operations in Laos and Cambodia, where two-thirds of the tonnage since Nixon's inauguration has fallen. According to French, Swedish sources, the U. S. is bombing thikes in Vietnam, and has been for years. That in Korea we did this also.
The escalation of frenzied bombing attacks by means of the most flechist weapons ever invented is to keep the promise to end the war? That we can brace ourselves for the next turn-of-the-screw: the tactical nuclear bomb? Just a tiny one.

Contradictory comments by Evans are criticized

Editor:
It seems a shame that Kathy Beatley has come to use her own defense on her right to speak out in the Mustang Daily.
But with Pete Evans preaching from the pulpit that she did it illegal, it was a natural reaction. Mr. Evans in his political ramblings asserted that Miss Beatley was off base—in this because she didn't support George McGovern. Mr. Evans seems to talk out of both sides of his mouth. At one point he says students should speak their minds, "get involved." Apparently this advice is only for those who agree with him (George). When Mr. Evans lost the election a year ago he promised us the same. It seems to me, "if you can't beat 'em, sue 'em!"

Sue Evans for Kathy Beatley!
Don't be misguided by those few students who would deny you your views. I can assure they are in a small minority.

Students support Professor Krejaa

Editor:
We, the undersigned, support Cal Poly biology professor, Dr. Richard Krejaa in his candidacy for fifth district county supervisor. San Luis Obispo is one of the few remaining counties along the coast that has yet to see the huge problems that attend rapid growth. County supervisors, by their decisions regarding land use, can retain the unique quality of life—or they can follow the unfortunate trend set in other counties.

We believe that Dr. Krejaa has proven his desire to retain the things that make life worth living in San Luis Obispo County. He has advised civic groups and county officials regarding the wise use of water and land resources. He was instrumental in founding the Environment Center in San Luis Obispo and involved in forming this school's Ecology Action Club. Dr. Krejaa has knowledge and concern for the students, faculty, administration and employees of Cal Poly.

We believe Dr. Krejaa's opponent Mr. Blako has, in his position as San Luis Obispo city councilman, shown a lack of desire to preserve the present quality of life in this city. He has constantly voted in favor of annexations, large developments, and cementing or cultivating the creeks. In addition he has consistently shown a disregard for student needs, by opposing the eighteen year old vote, TO&F's, and other student issues.

We believe the choice is clear. Please vote for Dr. Richard Krejaa for county supervisor in the fifth district.

Local burger gets top bill from expert

Editors:
In Journal: "Injustice I say. Having eaten hamburgers from Coast to Coast and in foreign countries, not to mention all the places mentioned in the article "Hamburgers—to have and to hold," I was very disappointed that my very favorite hamburger is beyond compare. A hand made patty weighing a full pound served on an onion roll, tomato, pickles, onions, French Fries and a deviled egg ... all for less than a dollar. A culinary delight, pleasing to all the senses and full of good Karma.

Take It from a 300 lb. Burger Expert, the Outpost blew it on this one.

Teacher seeks harbor position

Candidate for the Port of San Luis Harbor Commission, A.E. Andreoli, voices the opinion that he sees no need for extensive development of the San Luis harbor and feels that the more untouched it is by developers, the more it can be enjoyed.

Andreoli, an aerodynamics teacher at this campus, said he’s running for the Port of San Luis Harbor Commission so he can “hopefully influence the outcome of decision making” that affects the harbor.

The Harbor Commission decides what the harbor will be used for and how the supporting tax money will be spent. According to Andreoli, the commission controls the natural harbor extending from near the lighthouse at Avila to Shell Beach. He said the harbor is supported by a tax base of about one half of San Luis Obispo.

Andreoli said several of the five commissioners have held the position for almost 16 years. He also said the commission’s philosophy in the past has been to emphasize the development of facilities. He feels that this thinking is not in agreement with the taxpayers.

According to Andreoli, within the past few years a board issue was offered to the district that included extensive harbor development, such as a breakwater and landfill, and they substantially turned it down.

He feels the taxpayers main complaint is that they would be paying money for development of a harbor that gets more use by tourists and those living outside the district than by those in the district.

Andreoli said if extensive development is undertaken, many areas of the harbor, such as those around boat slips and landfill, would be off limits for everyone for security reasons.

He feels there is no need for extensive development and that the harbor should be left alone as the district and others can enjoy the natural beauty. Andreoli said in a growing area like this one a strong feeling usually exists that the words “bigger and better are synonymous.” He cited an example of developers wanting to build ten houses where there should really be only one.

He disagrees with this thinking. He feels where this feeling prevails, the question of what the public wants should arise. He doesn’t think the commission has really satisfied the public’s wants here in the past.

Andreoli recalled the area he used to live in near Los Angeles— an area much like San Luis Obispo. He said over the years he witnessed the extensive development of that area and saw its effects on the environment. He doesn’t want that to happen up here. He wants to keep the area here a “nice place to live.”

Voters take a look at issues

Sample ballots do not make much sense to many voters to muddle through. A yes vote for one measure means approval, while on another a vote yes means opposition. What confusion!

To help with this the League of Women Voters will present a non-partisan approach to the initiatives and referendums on the November 7 ballot at 7:30 p.m. in room 304 of the College Union.

Three members from the league will present the 18 initiatives not debated for Speakers Forum on October 19.

KCPR to air Student Lobby

Former ASI Pres. Pete Evans will explain the activities of the Student Lobby on KCPR’s University Forum tonight at 7 p.m.

According to the Student Lobby code, the organisation’s main purpose is to promote interest in all governmental affairs through direct student interaction. This interaction occurs through the lobbying efforts of Joe Hay, legislative advocate for the California State University and College Students Presidents’ Association, who in turn is aided by research and analyses from the Student Lobby Committee. Hosting the University Forum will be Craig Hines, who urges all listeners to call in during the program and ask questions.

Irish conflict explained

Ireland today is torn by conflict. This conflict has resulted in the injury and death of individuals on both sides. Dr. James Pitta of the history department here will speak on the conflict in Ireland and its history beginning with the first British invasions during college hour Thursday, Nov. 3, in Chumash 304.

Pitta, who acquired his Ph.D. from UCLA in 1979, disagrees with the factions on both sides of the Irish conflict according to Cheeser Barrett, president of this university's History Club, which is sponsoring the event. According to Barrett, Pitta feels that both sides exhibit a "lack of trying to understand" each other.

Barrett stressed the point that Pitta is highly qualified in this field, being "one of the leading instructors" of British history.

An alternative to the water-cooled nuclear power plant and the state of nuclear fusion research will be presented tonight at 8:10 p.m. in Conv 307 by Dr. John Norman, an expert in the field of nuclear research.

Norman will lecture on water desalination by reverse osmosis during College Hour tomorrow in Science E-27.

amending the constitution as proposed. This measure would apply to all employees and retired employees of the state, including the University of California and California State University and Colleges, except persons elected by popular vote or appointed by the governor.

Proposition 18 would amend the state constitution to require that the state Personnel Board, University of California regents and trustees of the California State University and Colleges determine the prevailing wages in private industry for comparable work done by state personnel.

These pay scales would be placed in the state budget and would not be subject to gubernatorial veto. They could be reduced only by a two-thirds vote of the legislature.

The amendment also would provide for written agreements between government agencies and state worker associations covering non-economic or civil service items. In the event of a dispute, either party could request binding arbitration.

Proponents of the proposition contend it will take the politics out of state payroll, stop costly work stoppages, and keep the lid on state payroll.

Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post estimated that the proposed amendment would have cost the state an additional $1.3 million in 1973-74 if it had been in effect.

RATs sponsor trio of tournament attractions

by TOMMY PARKER

They scored big with the Trans-Am Trike Race—four years running.

Now, that bunch that goes by the name RAT, the Recreation Tournament Committee has come up with a trio of attractions they hope will do even more to capture your attention.

If you are a bowler who strives for perfection with every ball you roll—a person who comes close to scoring a strike but fails by obliterating only nine pins instead of the perfect ten—RAT has developed something that might boost your game score.

Running now through Friday, Nov. 10, is the RAT No-Tap Tournament, a bowling tournament where nine pins count as a strike.

Tournament, information is as follows: a contestant bowls three games, his final score. Nine pins knocked down on the first ball count as a strike and no second ball is thrown.

One out of every ten bowlers may qualify for the finals and the bowler who makes the most strikes in the qualifying round will be declared the winner.

Entry blanks are available at the games area desk and contestants may enter as many times as they choose. Each entry costs $1.30 for three games.

Anyone may enter—men, women, staff, professors, anyone. There are two separate divisions for competition.

JUDGING TEAM

Cow Palace champions

by OREGON STATE UNIVERSITY, Extension Service.

Chicago here we come! After winning three firsts, two seconds, and the championship during the Grand National Livestock Expedition at the Cow Palace in San Francisco, the livestock judging team had made their journey to Chicago possible.

The team consisting of Lee Pitts, Mike Hall, John DeRuiter, Jerry Hathaway, and Mark O'Keefe placed ahead of teams as far east as Texas and New Mexico.

With firsts in swine, horse, and reasons and seconds in beef and sheep the team won the contest by 11 team points.

Individual winners overall were Lee Pitts, second; Mike Hall, third, and John DeRuiter, fourth.

The contest was decided on reasons, according to John DeRuiter, team member. The judging classes were good, and the team who had the best talks came out on top.

Oregon will be the last two contests before the Chicago competition, said DeRuiter.

The team will travel to Utah on Saturday for competition next week. The Portland contest will be held in two weeks.

The huge Palace Club sign (left) beckoned out to visiting San Luis Obispoans during the past weekend. Among those visitors were Gene LaCompte (right) who packs his band equipment at the University of Nevada football stadium. Once set up, Mustang band members, who on their own trekked to Reno, started right up under the direction of drum major Charlie McDowell (center). The Mustang band was one of three at the game as in total musicians nearly outnumbered paying customers.

One spicy weekend— Reno style

Truth is stranger than fiction. Take last weekend's football game featuring the Mustangs at the University of Nevada at Reno—a game that was practically a sidelight to a wide variety of other happenings. Forty members of the Mustang Marching Band were part of these extracurricular activities, in the best tradition of "It's a Mad... Mad...Mad...Mad World," they caravanned to the gambling city for a couple of days of relaxation.

Relaxation? Not really. Half of the group left late Friday and half left around 4 a.m. Saturday. Of the Saturday group, some joined the vehicle caravan while others deviated to other cities to pick up friends.

The full details of what happened on route may never be told. Charlie Appleby's carload stopped off in Barstoga and spent a few hours touring the city of Oakland—unintentionally. Mike Kempf and companions lost their map of San Jose and, following Gene LaCompte's car, traveled 20 miles the wrong way near Tracy before the error was discovered.

If that wasn't enough, the two drivers passed the time playing cat and mouse across five lanes of freeway. Tim Partch, Glenn Parks and company picked up a young lady and a home-cooked breakfast in Davis. Jack Dueck's car had performance problems and, that fixed, he dropped a muffler.

"Every time I hit a bump," he said, "the muffler hit the ground." But just as in "Mad World," one by one the different oars came together as they neared Sacramento and it was a smart looking caravan that made a wrong turn onto a deserted field near the Reno stadium.

That was just openers. Next the Reno High School Band forgot their instruments and the Star Spangled Banner had to wait until halftime. The Poly band, of what there was of it, came through with a march down the track and into the stands where Mustang rooters nearly outnumbered their opponents.

The game was on and Mike Amos ran a punt back 83 yards for a touchdown.

And then it was halftime and Poly hadn't scored again and the Reno High School band performed in 30 mile an hour winds that blew away some of the members' music sheets and nearly some of the young musicians.

The fans loved every minute of it. They also dug the band's stirring rendition of "Shake" and an amusing soul dance by the cheerleaders even though young Susie Walker later sprained her ankle and trainer Steve Yoneda helped her out with some tape.

Back to the football game and a bone-chilling wind, blocked punts, a successful runner named O'Leary, no Mustang completed passes, a battered Mike Thomas who refused to remain out of the game and, finally, a flat 14-12 victory.

Half an hour later at 400 Highland the game was just as boring on the taped delay on television but the outcome was the same.

The action picked up that night as 40 band members, a winning football team and dozens of dazed-but-happy Mustang boosters and other fans hit the town...and the casinos...and the bars. Harrah's was all San Luis Obispo for a while, or so it seemed. Everywhere you turned was a familiar face.

A few football players came home with silver in their pockets and a journalist-turned-slot-machine-enthusiast hit the jackpot for $1,200. Most didn't fare too well, although the Mustang Boosters have yet to report in.

Back to 400 Highland for the band members and the River Inn for the team. At the 3-bedroom house on Highland wall-to-wall sleeping bags illustrated the noted togetherness of the band. At the River Inn...well...some were still playing the slots, one player successfully, as Coach Joe Harper shouted "all aboard" for the return bus trip Sunday morning.
Whatever your bag, you might have found it at the ball game. For Steve Graybekl (No. 70, top) it was huddling with the offensive line on the sidelines. For the band, it was marching uniformless before the game (top, right). For the cheerleaders, it was showing off their horseshoes to an appreciative partisan crowd (below).

Story and photos by Paul Simon

Most who participated in the Reno journey might agree it was strange. For instance, band member Tim Parich (above) stopped to enjoy the serenity of Donner Summit on route to the fast-moving city. Then, at the game, cheerleader Leslie Walker injured an ankle and had it wrapped in tape by trainer Steve Yoneda (left, bottom). The football action, too, was at times wild, as Mustang Chris Smoland leaps high to block his second punt of the game (right, bottom). Mike Guerra (48), also was there for the play.
Showdown for powder puff grid teams is near

by RANDY WHITCOMB
Cal Poly women are preparing to demonstrate their skills with the pigskin as powder puff football gets under way. The first game of the year is slated for Wednesday, Nov. 8 at 7 p.m. in the Mustang Stadium.

Training for the teams began last week as the freshmen and sophomores are preparing to battle the juniors and seniors. Eligibility for the team requires one-hour training sessions once a week for five weeks.

Potential players work out between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. in the stadium on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Melva Irvin, the women's PE instructor in charge of the game, says that few of the girls on the teams are PE majors. They get girls majoring in everything from home economics to mathematics.

The men getting the teams into shape are Kirk Hubbard, Kent Leland, Dick McMath, Les Patton and Don Weller. These volunteers are responsible for selecting the team members and molding them into well-coordinated teams.

Patty Fenton, a PE major here, is chairman of the operation and is responsible for the set-up and organization of the game. Regular officials will be used to keep unnecessary roughness down. This school has not had much trouble in the past but other campuses have had problems with fighting and dirty playing in powder puff games.

According to Irvin, past games have drawn a good turn-out and the coming game is expected to do the same. A $10 entry admission fee will be charged.

Soccermen blanked, 4-0

The Mustang soccer team had barely recovered from its heartbreaking 3-1 loss to Loyola University before traveling to Fresno Pacific College on Saturday.

They found themselves up against a team which, as far as coach Carmen Sacco could see, was without a weakness. With a strong, quality team Fresno Pacific was a sharp contrast to the Mustangs.

With three of its star players--Hamadi Lam, Raymond Weber and Mel Berdell--out with injuries, Sacco was forced to employ the services of four more candidates from the disabled list in a sincere effort to field a working machine.

When it was all over and the dust had settled, the Mustangs found themselves up 4-0 in a game they could not have been expected to win.

The boys from Fresno Pacific had lost only one previous game to Santa Barbara and, Sacco feels, could very well end up in the top spot in their division.

In preparation for the Fresno Pacific game, Sacco put his crippled team through normal workouts, but not the daily running distances from three to one and a half miles.

The Mustangs get a desperately needed rest this weekend, then swing back into action in their final home game the following weekend against a strong team from Fresno State.
