Free tax aid available now for students

Senior accounting majors are providing free income tax assistance of up to $8,000. In its fourth year at Poly, the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program (VITA) operates out of Mustang Lounge from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. All forms and assistance needed in filing out income tax returns are available free.

"Since we are not licensed accountants, we cannot provide actual preparation of tax forms but do offer any help needed," said assistant Laura Gilroy. All VITA aides have received special training and have completed tax courses in the Business Administration Department.

Taxpayers wanting VITA assistance are advised to bring their last year's returns, W-2 wage statements from employers and the tax booklet they received in the mail.

Gilroy suggested several tax tips for taxpayers:

1. No taxes are to be paid if income earned is below $2,000 but a return should be filed to claim any withholding tax deducted from paychecks.
2. Waitress, busboys and other earning tips must report this to the IRS.
3. A duplicate copy of any forms filed should be kept as a guideline for next year.

Old and new city buses go opposite directions on routes through San Luis Obispo. Photo by Ken Chen.

Volunteers needed

Garden spaces growing

"Attention will be focused on low income families. Our model garden will donate its produce to needy community garden project members," said Jacobs.

"If the position declared by the Egyptian government is a real one, then I would have some doubts," said Peres.

"We hope ridership will increase 50 percent with these changes," said Hird.

"If the community garden decides to change its rules to make it easier to cut off debate, the system will give half-hour service to most of the city."

by DENISE COLLTON

"Give a gift to nature and plant a garden. If you cannot find space in a touch with Community Gardens, we can help," says Larry Jacobs, Community Garden Project Coordinator.

"If it is just a starting one, I would have some hope," said Peres.

WASHINGTON, (UPI) — The Senate today voted to shut down a Conservative-led filibuster which has blocked consideration of a rules change making it easier to cut off debate.

"Renters will sign an agreement which says he promises to be considerate of his neighbors and to keep his land clean. A student's land will still be his own even if he is unable to attend it over summer break," Jacobs says.

"The garden program will be presented to the city council for approval by a citizens advisory committee on Monday night. Community gardens have received support from Obispo Beautiful and ECO-SLO environmentalists.

"Our plan is to open the garden and then sold to the gardeners at a low price," said Jacobs.

"I hope our plans are approved swiftly—in time for spring planting," Jacobs says.

Petterson, Gurnee win

Former Cal Poly student Steve Petterson has won a San Luis Obispo City Council seat, it was reported Tuesday night. With 3,441 votes, Petterson will take the place of John Brown, who stepped down from his seat on the council seat with 3,441 votes. Incumbent Mayor Kenneth Schrock was re-elected over his opponent Wilbur Danley, with both votes to Danley's 3,547.
Editor:
After reading Annete Jarvis’s letter the feeling is that by boycotting grapes and lettuce, and protesting Frank Fitzsimmons appearance she is helping the farm workers. Let us go a little deeper into the problem.

The overriding obstacle in how to improve worker conditions lies in the farmers inherent inability to pass along cost of production increases to the consumer. As a result vast industrialisation of agriculture has occurred.

There is no coincidence that the mechanisation of many California crops coincided with the birth of the agricultural labor movement. An economist would phrase it as, “Labor replacement through capital substitution.”

Let us analyse what this would mean to the workers—1) The more he produces “more pay” the quicker he will be replaced by a machine and 2) When he is replaced by that machine he must enter and compete in a job market which is already overcrowded with a qualified and unemployed labor force.

One can be assured that the predictable outcome of the activities of the United Farm Workers and the Teamsters will be an industrialised agriculture in California.

Industrialisation agriculture will displace hundreds of thousands of workers.

Just as the invention of the mechanical cotton picker and the depression started a large exodus of Mexican-Americans from rural and suburban areas to the urban ghettos.

One cannot believe that Annete Jarvis’s support of UFW is anything but a well intentioned desire to help improve the lot of all farm workers, as well as that of the remaining operations of the “family farm.”

Accordingly, one should consider the totality of the problem and review the economic and social validity of a course of action which treats the symptom rather than the disease.

Thanking you for your consideration.

Ralph P. Lauchetti

A closer look

Editor:
I can agree with one point Alison Harvey made in her Wednesday editorial: the giving of 98 per cent A’s, B’s and C’s does not prove that “an extensive amount of learning is taking place.”

If federal meat inspectors graded 98 per cent of all beef as “prime,” we would be justified in suspecting that a great deal of utility grade beef was being mislabeled.

Her other assertions are shallow, nasty generalisations and old turkeys served up with an extra of sophomoric sauce.

She believes that those who can, do, and that those who can’t teach—a tired old aphorism. Does Mr. Harvey believe every slogan she has?

In fact, a great many of the factors she has had experiences in industry, government and business have been all fired before they took up teaching. What does she expect the teachers of humanities, such as historians, to do, “make history.”

Their role is principally to foster an awareness of our past and our potential, an awareness of who and what we are as inheritors of our cultural tradition. Apparently, Ms. Harvey is not interested.

She seems to think it a bad thing that students can get good grades by telling the teacher what he wants to hear.

In most disciplines (note the word “most”) a variant of the above matter. The teacher’s job is to teach it, and questions can be seen in perspective only against this background.

As long as the instructor does not require the student to accept his private interpretations of debatable points, he is entitled to ask students to show that they have learned the subject matter.

Is the history of the United States irrelevant to Ms. Harvey?

She praises about some shadowy entity, “real learning.” What is it?

She only says that it is “interesting,” unlike the things she feels to be learned so that “reputable professional would try to memorize.”

Who are these “professio­nals”? Didn’t they, in fact, learn those same things? Does she know that they regret the waste of time? Is everything of value “interesting”?

We have barely scratched the surface, but we’ve seen more than enough. Her assertions do not support her call for action, but they do lead to a different important question:

Can’t we ask that editors do more than rant? They may be statements of opinion, but shouldn’t they rest on firmer ground than the flip remarks exchanged over a glass of beer?

We have barely scratched the surface, but we’ve seen more than enough. Her assertions do not support her call for action, but they do lead to a different important question:

Can’t we ask that editors do more than rant? They may be statements of opinion, but shouldn’t they rest on firmer ground than the flip remarks exchanged over a glass of beer?

I believe that the Mustang Daily will accept submissions from editors outside the常规 staff of U.C. Santa Barbara. In most disciplines (note the word “most”) a variant of the above matter. The teacher’s job is to teach it, and questions can be seen in perspective only against this background.

As long as the instructor does not require the student to accept his private interpretations of debatable points, he is entitled to ask students to show that they have learned the subject matter.

Is the history of the United States irrelevant to Ms. Harvey?

She praises about some shadowy entity, “real learning.” What is it?

She only says that it is “interesting,” unlike the things she feels to be learned so that “reputable professional would try to memorize.”

Who are these “profes­sionals”? Didn’t they, in fact, learn those same things? Does she know that they regret the waste of time? Is everything of value “interesting”?

We have barely scratched the surface, but we’ve seen more than enough. Her assertions do not support her call for action, but they do lead to a different important question:

Can’t we ask that editors do more than rant? They may be statements of opinion, but shouldn’t they rest on firmer ground than the flip remarks exchanged over a glass of beer?

I believe that the Mustang Daily will accept submissions from editors outside the常规 staff of U.C. Santa Barbara. In most disciplines (note the word “most”) a variant of the above matter. The teacher’s job is to teach it, and questions can be seen in perspective only against this background.

As long as the instructor does not require the student to accept his private interpretations of debatable points, he is entitled to ask students to show that they have learned the subject matter.

Is the history of the United States irrelevant to Ms. Harvey?

She praises about some shadowy entity, “real learning.” What is it?

She only says that it is “interesting,” unlike the things she feels to be learned so that “reputable professional would try to memorize.”

Who are these “profes­sionals”? Didn’t they, in fact, learn those same things? Does she know that they regret the waste of time? Is everything of value “interesting”?

We have barely scratched the surface, but we’ve seen more than enough. Her assertions do not support her call for action, but they do lead to a different important question:

Can’t we ask that editors do more than rant? They may be statements of opinion, but shouldn’t they rest on firmer ground than the flip remarks exchanged over a glass of beer?

I believe that the Mustang Daily will accept submissions from editors outside the常规 staff of U.C. Santa Barbara. In most disciplines (note the word “most”) a variant of the above matter. The teacher’s job is to teach it, and questions can be seen in perspective only against this background.

As long as the instructor does not require the student to accept his private interpretations of debatable points, he is entitled to ask students to show that they have learned the subject matter.

Is the history of the United States irrelevant to Ms. Harvey?

She praises about some shadowy entity, “real learning.” What is it?

She only says that it is “interesting,” unlike the things she feels to be learned so that “reputable professional would try to memorize.”

Who are these “profes­sionals”? Didn’t they, in fact, learn those same things? Does she know that they regret the waste of time? Is everything of value “interesting”?

We have barely scratched the surface, but we’ve seen more than enough. Her assertions do not support her call for action, but they do lead to a different important question:

Can’t we ask that editors do more than rant? They may be statements of opinion, but shouldn’t they rest on firmer ground than the flip remarks exchanged over a glass of beer?

I believe that the Mustang Daily will accept submissions from editors outside the常规 staff of U.C. Santa Barbara. In most disciplines (note the word “most”) a variant of the above matter. The teacher’s job is to teach it, and questions can be seen in perspective only against this background.

As long as the instructor does not require the student to accept his private interpretations of debatable points, he is entitled to ask students to show that they have learned the subject matter.

Is the history of the United States irrelevant to Ms. Harvey?

She praises about some shadowy entity, “real learning.” What is it?

She only says that it is “interesting,” unlike the things she feels to be learned so that “reputable professional would try to memorize.”

Who are these “profes­sionals”? Didn’t they, in fact, learn those same things? Does she know that they regret the waste of time? Is everything of value “interesting”?

We have barely scratched the surface, but we’ve seen more than enough. Her assertions do not support her call for action, but they do lead to a different important question:

Can’t we ask that editors do more than rant? They may be statements of opinion, but shouldn’t they rest on firmer ground than the flip remarks exchanged over a glass of beer?
Bus service (continued from page 1)

Most important is dependability. The old buses were prone to breakdowns. San Luis Obispo Transportation Inc., subsidized by the state, has upgraded the system, and today runs only two buses and when one breaks down, other vehicles, such as taxi cabs, had to be pressed into service.

The new buses, made by a different company, will break down less often, while the old buses will serve as replacements during breakdowns and refueling periods.

Weather-and-tear on brakes will be reduced by an interesting system of the buses.

A magnetic coil will be engaged to slow the spin of the drive-shaft when the driver wishes to stop. Just before he comes to a final stop he will release the magnetic field and brake normally.

The new buses are also equipped with more standard safety features than the old ones, and are slightly larger.

Other services offered include the daily-pass, established last December, which can be purchased for 50 cents and will give unlimited riding for one day.

On April 1, the monthly-pass will come in on a trial basis. At the cost of $3 you can purchase unlimited riding for a month.

All of these additions are designed to increase passengers. It is a sad fact that the system is operating at a deficit.

"No one expected that the system would be self-supporting," said Hird. "Right now we're averaging 800 riders a day, while at the beginning, last April, we felt that 500 would be a good number."

The city assures that the system earns 70 cents per mile run. Up to now the system has earned barely half of that.

Soon the rate will go to $1 per mile, and the hoped-for increase in ridership will just keep it earning 50 cents per mile.

There is no expectation of a time when the system will be self-supporting.

---

 Emeritus honors granted

Emeritus members of the campus community are granted certain rights, privileges and benefits that include library services, use of staff dining facilities, campus parking privileges and use of the campus post office. Dr. Robert E. Kennedy. Harold O. Wilson, named vice president emeritus has completed more than 30 years as a member of the university faculty. Last year he served as educational advisor to the staff of former Gov. Reagan.

Faculty members honored are:

These receiving staff emeritus honors were employees of the Cal Poly Foundation. Mrs. Juanita Freidchick was employed by the El Corral Bookstore since 1964 and Mrs. Claire Huffman had been with El Corral since 1966. The eight persons given emeritus status have a total of more than 140 years of service on the Cal Poly campus.

---

Campus events

The music of Tim Weisberg and the duo of John Baus and Rodney will be presented in Chumash Auditorium of the University Union on Saturday, March 8 at 8 p.m. Advance tickets, on sale until Friday, March 7, at the University Union ticket office, are $3 for students and $5 for the public. Prices at the door will be $4 for students and $6 for the public.

Weisberg is a well-known flutist who displays a combination of rock and jazz. Since first receiving recognition at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1969, he has released four albums and played with such acts as Focus, Dave Mason, The Mahavishnu Orchestra and Paul Butterfield.

He has also appeared on two television programs: "Midnight Special" and "Mighty Joe".

The sound of John Baus and Mark Rodney is "folkjazz" as they both sing and play acoustic guitars. The duo has been touring the United States playing Carnegie Hall, Bitter End, Fein Forum, and Troubadour.

Art work by 16 faculty and staff members of Cal Poly's Art Department will be displayed from Monday, March 10 through Friday, April 11, in the University Union Galerie.

Titled "Assembled," the exhibit will include works of painting, drawing, ceramics, sculpture, photography and metalworking.

---

Security

544-6162

These students can help you get money when you need it.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

What's the catch? There isn't one. These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.

These students are bankers. Just a few of more than 50 Bank of America Student Representatives trained to help other students with their individual banking needs.
Mustang netters whip Fresno State

Fresno State was the latest victim of the Mustang netters Tuesday by an 8-1 score. The win gave Ed Jorgenson's crew a 4-1 mark for the season.

Pete Lambert opened the rout with a 6-3, 6-4 win. Jim Martin won his match 6-4, 6-4. Tom Zurn was a victor 6-3, 6-1. Craig Parton won easily 6-1, 6-1 and Charles Duson came away a winner 7-6, 6-3.

The Mustangs only loss came in the third singles match where Lou Brewer defeated Mustang Rudy Van Solinge 6-3, 6-3.

In doubles competition Lambert and Martin defeated Fresno's Dennis Alexander and John Davis 6-4, 6-4. Zurn and Patorn beat Brewer and Larry Douglas 7-4, 7-4. Van Solinge and Duson also won 6-1, 6-3 over Gary Faglido and Dave Combs.

The Mustangs will try for their fifth and sixth straight wins on the road this weekend. They will play at Cal State Hayward Friday and San Francisco State Saturday.

70 G price tag on latest Rolls model

LONDON (UPI) - Rolls Royce unveiled its latest model Wednesday, a two-door sedan. The price tag said $30,000, making it the world's most expensive production automobile.

But wait, the salesmen said, the price includes taxes. And, he added, if you've got the money to pay for it and at least a year to wait for delivery, you'll be happy to know it gets 14 miles per gallon.

The Shah of Iran and 119 others are in line ahead of you for the new Camargue so, since it takes six months to make one and only one or two are coming off the line weekly, you had better hurry.

Sports shorts

The Mustang golfers ran their record to 3-1 Monday by defeating Cal State Bakersfield 295-302. Freshman Doug Johnson led the Mustangs with a two over par 74. Tom Dowd had a 73. Low man for Bakersfield was Hank Kienzle with 75.

The Mustangs will try for their third straight win at Cal State Hayward Friday and San Francisco State Saturday.

Tired of commuting?

We're only a ten minute walk from campus, so why not stop by and see what we have to offer.

STENNER GLEN

1060 Foothill Blvd. 644-4540

Classifieds

Advertisements

Looking glass wants original homa and some silver for $25.00. Can be sold or given. 543-2506.

Lost & Found

30c per word minimum. Classifieds closes Monday at 3:00 P.M. All ads must be in by 3:00 P.M. Monday.