Carter meets with collegiate press

By BETSY SUHMAN

"You're not a very distinct year" for the collegiate press, he said. "You used to be a risk to me. You used to be somebody who was not too sure of yourself. You were a bit more accepting of the new administration this year." He added, "I'm not sure if that's because of the new administration or because of the new president." He went on to say that the collegiate press this year has been more accepting of the new administration. He added, "I think that's because they've seen the new administration in action and they've seen it work." He went on to say that the collegiate press has been more accepting of the new administration because they've seen it work.

On the other side of the fence, Water's criticism of the magazine was that it was too critical of the administration. He said, "We've been too critical of the administration. We've been too critical of the students. We've been too critical of the faculty. We've been too critical of the staff. We've been too critical of the university." He added, "I think that we've been too critical of the administration. We've been too critical of the students. We've been too critical of the faculty. We've been too critical of the staff. We've been too critical of the university." He went on to say that the magazine should be more positive and that it should be more accepting of the new administration.

The roadies have already checked the road. The chairs are set, the curtains are drawn. The镜子 are shining and the lights are on. The roadies are working togetherness.

"I don't know if I've met with a group as well as this in the last 10 months," she said. "I've had a wide range of questions, each with a different perspective. The roadies have already checked the road. The chairs are set, the curtains are drawn. The镜子 are shining and the lights are on. The roadies are working togetherness.

"I'm very happy to be here," President Carter. "I've never been a national leader before."
EDITORIAL/OPINION

Let them have their canal

The Panama Canal, a 48-mile long ditch through the isthmus of Panama,was a major achievement in engineering and technology, and continues to be a vital link in global trade. It connects the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and is used by ships to avoid the long and perilous journey around South America.

The Panama Canal has been a source of national pride for Panama, and a symbol of their nation's strength and resilience in the face of foreign interference.

Let them have their canal.

Little Brother knows best—so he thinks Big Brother, in this case, is the United States, and Little Brother is Panama. Big Brother has always tried to control and influence Panama, often through direct military intervention or economic pressure. The Panama Canal is a significant example of this.

In the 19th century, the United States built the canal and insisted on having a perpetual lease on it. This meant that Panama had to rely on the United States for economic survival. This created a dependency that lasted for decades.

In the 20th century, the United States continued to maintain a military presence in Panama, and used the canal as a strategic asset. This led to tension and conflict with Panama, especially in the 1950s and 1960s.

In the 1970s, Panama gained independence from the United States, but the canal remained a source of friction between the two countries.

In the 1990s, the United States and Panama negotiated a treaty that allowed Panama to take control of the canal in 2000. This was a significant victory for Panama, and a testament to their national pride and resilience.

The Panama Canal is a symbol of Panama's struggle for independence and sovereignty. It is a reminder of the importance of self-determination, and the right of all nations to control their own resources and infrastructure.

Why can't people leave things alone?

The rain was here once more. After the long, hot, dry summer, it was a welcome sight. I couldn't help but smile as I watched the drops fall onto the leaves of the trees in our yard.

I love nature. There is nothing more beautiful than the sight of raindrops falling gently from the sky. It's a reminder of the cycles of life and death, and the ever-changing seasons.

But as much as I love nature, I also recognize that we have a responsibility to protect it. We cannot take for granted the beauty and resources that nature provides for us.

The rain was a good reminder of this. It was a reminder that we must always be mindful of our impact on the environment, and that we must do our part to protect it.

This year the whole infield and all the grass were removed and replaced with new dirt, and we added a new set of lights, so everyone could see better on the nights when it was too dark to play. We also added some new seating areas, and we're hoping to attract more fans to our games.

The new lights have been a big hit. We've had some great crowds recently, and we're looking forward to seeing even more fans at our games this season.

We hope you enjoy watching our team play, and we hope to see you at the games this season.

Let's not forget to thank the people who work hard to make sure our games run smoothly. Without them, we wouldn't have a team to celebrate.

Your support means the world to us, and we're grateful for your continued support.

Thank you.

The majority of students on this campus might not be aware, but yet in the room near the Yee Dee office, the President-elect is planning his next move for his new administration. There are no official plans, of course, but there are informal plans in the air. The students in the room are mostly interested in the possibilities of what might happen, and the importance and influence that Student Government will have in the future.

One of the things that can be said with certainty is that the students are-tabs of the Student Government. They are not sure of the possibilities of what might happen, and the importance and influence that Student Government will have in the future.

Kennedy: University activities fill off-hours

But my wife and I are so involved with Poly that most of our social activities that we enter the year are related to Poly. We've got two kids, I have all sorts of correspondence, and I have two. One lives in San Francisco and a small child and they stay frequently, we go dinner together. We see more people quite often. I have a daughter who lives in Sacramento who has three kids. I have a son who lives in Thousand Oaks with four children and a daughter at San Diego State. His wife has one child. I see them more frequently and occasionally some of them are out of state and most every one of the classes in which they're located, I have either to go to or half an hour after place or I have to be there.

In the fall, I'm often there usually about
fin. month Two.

CONCERT GOERS Lacked SOPHISTICATION

BY TONY TRAPPA

Daily Daily Writer

Cal Poly students many have been left wondering as to why they could not find seats in the Concert Hall.

Concert goers lacked seats. Although some seats were available next to the stage and in the balcony, the seats were largely empty. Many students resorted to standing in the aisles, especially in the back, as they could not find seats to sit.

During the final encore of the concert, the audience was treated to a brief speech by Dr. David Stiles, the university's provost. He mentioned that the concert hall was at capacity, but that some seats were still available.

STUDENT HOUSING APPROVED IN CONCEPT

Construction of a new student housing facility was approved in concept at the Campus Planning Commission. The project would provide housing for approximately 800 students and was estimated to cost $40 million.

ELECTIONS

The daily administrative board will decide today on the candidates at the University Club. The club will host the election tonight at 8 p.m. voting for their mayor.

Wrestlers take fourth straight regional title

By JIM ALVERNA

The Cal Poly wrestling team maintained its dominant position in Western Regional tournaments, easily winning the 1978 version over two weekends at Cal State Fullerton.

Coach Vaughn Hinchchick’s squad finished with 16 and four-quarter, Portland State, which had finished second to Poly in both previous three regional tournaments, was third with 14 and three-fourths.

While winning their fourth straight Western Regional tournament, the Mustangs qualify seven men for the NCAA Division I national tournament March 16-18 at Canoga Park, Maryland.

Unlike the 1977 tournament in which the Mustangs qualified seven men, Poly had its share of trying moments this year.

One was at 141 pounds where John coasted his first match of the season against a number of Nevada-Las Vegas wrestlers.

A second was at the consolation championship after losing on a decision.

Actually, it wasn’t all bad by any means. Poly won four matches and came home with five individual titles.

The best bets for Poly this year are led by Steve Cotton, who is making his third appearance in the tournament.

Cotton has placed second twice and is a favorite to win this year.

Poly’s chances for placing improve this year if further progress is made by the other individuals who will go to the tournament.

Cotton says it’s time to go for the customary six.

Hitchcock won his first in 1977 while Johnson and "Chainsaw" won their first last year.

Champions their first time in the regional were Ted Overstreet at 131 and David Jeff at heavyweight.

Narrowly missing titles were Gary Malarkey at 119 and Eugene Wats at 170. Hinchwick lost by decision to Idaho State’s Tracy Moore while Wats was a 1-14 loss to San Jose State’s Donnie Harris. Both wrestlers automatically defended their runner-up positions with second place following the finals.

The Mustangs will prepare for the national tournament with hopes of improving on their national position of 11th last year. Last year Poly qualified all ten wrestlers for the NCAA meet and had a grand total of 12 and one-half points while finishing fifth in the team standings. No Mustang placed within the top 22 finishers of any weight.
