Making money

The Multilateral Currency Agreement of the Institute for Foreign Relations and Price-control, the World Bank, and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) has been negotiated among a number of nations that have always been a critical agency in Washington.

The agreement provides for the exchange of $1 billion worth of curenaries, which will go into circulation in the United States and other countries, to help finance international transactions.

A number of nations have appropriately made it a practice to keep their currencies fixed to the dollar, as much as possible, to control inflation and to restrict their international transactions.

One feature of the agreement is that it will provide a sort of "soft" backstop to the dollar, allowing for some fluctuation in exchange rates.

A second feature is that it will serve as a reminder of the country's commitment to the international monetary system and its role in supporting the dollar.

A third feature is that it will aid in the stabilization of the dollar by providing a source of funds that will help support it in times of stress.

The agreement provides for a series of measures to help stabilize the dollar, including:

1. The IMF will provide a source of funds to help support the dollar in times of stress.

2. The dollar will be allowed to fluctuate within a range of 2 percent.

3. The United States will provide additional exchange funds to the IMF.

4. The United States will provide additional exchange funds to
the IMF.

5. The United States will provide additional exchange funds to
the IMF.

The agreement is a positive step in the right direction, but it is important to note that it is not a cure-all for the problems facing the dollar.

Those problems include:

1. The overvaluation of the dollar, which makes it difficult for U.S. exports to be competitive in international markets.

2. The high level of inflation, which erodes the value of the dollar and makes it difficult for U.S. consumers to afford goods and services.

3. The chronic trade deficit, which puts downward pressure on the value of the dollar.

4. The high level of government debt, which puts upward pressure on the value of the dollar.

5. The lack of confidence in the dollar, which can lead to a run on the dollar and a loss of reserves.

The agreement is a step in the right direction, but it is important to note that it is not a cure-all for the problems facing the dollar.

The dollar's problems are systemic, and require a comprehensive approach to be solved.

The Jarvis Initiative: Pro and Con

Pro

The people of California will really benefit this year, and in future years, by the passage of Proposition 13, the Jarvis Initiative.

The initiative, designed to reduce property taxes in this state, is expected to benefit the whole of California, but will benefit the rich and poor alike. It is an understandable reaction to the increasing costs of living, and to the growing cost of property taxes.

Eliminating state reliance on the property tax, especially in the funding of local schools, is the subject of reform trends in the state. In 1973, the passage tax system for schools and local governments.

With the passage of Proposition 13, the people of California will have a benefit in terms of jobs. Industry in California will save millions from tax reform. The currently high property taxes on business and on industry is needed for growth.

Last year's AB 113 met the basic requirement of Proposition 13. A majority of the state's property taxes,would be increased by one-third of the current amount. The potential benefits are threefold: increased property values; more property revenue; and, most importantly, increased property values.

But as law, Proposition 13 would be a challenge to the courts. It would challenge the courts. It would challenge the courts. It would challenge the courts. It would challenge the courts.

As a result, Proposition 13 has effectively called the Senate, and has challenged the courts. It would

By and large, Proposition 13 would probably provide a solid base for our industry. But the benefits are Proposition 13 means tax reform. The people of California can no longer pay property taxes that are too high.

Magic festival comes to Poly

By STEVE THORN Daily Entertainment Editor

The world-renowned, rabbi-cuil-de-sac and disappointing card tricks comes to Cal Poly on Saturday night at 8 p.m. in the University Union.

ABI Special Events Department will host a festival of magic featuring five professional magicians and one volunteer from the San Luis Obispo area. Admission is $2.50 for students, $3.00 for general public and can be purchased at the CU ticket office.

Publicity Director for the Special Events Committee, Don Schlaak, is an amateur magician in his own right.

"I have been performing magic since I was a child," said Schlaak, a student majoring in biochemistry.

"Magic takes a lot of practice, a lot of skill in working at it by yourself," I had an instrument but that got expensive. Most of what I have come out of books," said Schlaak.

Saturday’s show will begin with introductions and introductions on the format of the festival. For the opening, the audience will see two magicians perform in the auditorium.

The crowd will then divide into three sections in order to get a close-up view of more performances in University Union conference rooms. The audience will be allowed in a room at a time.

The festival is styled after the Magic Castle in Hollywood, a club which displays nightly magic acts exclusively for members.

Four of the five professional magicians in the festival appear regularly. One of the magicians, Dale Evans, was given an academy award for magic in 1967. He has been on television’s “Magician’s Holiday” and “To Tell the Truth.”

Schlaak said the most satisfying part of performing magic is whether the performer is a magician or an amateur is "When the public gets it right, and you can get it right too." You can really tell you have an audience when they all believe in the same time.

Backpacking Revue '78

You might remember last year on a sunny day when The Mountain Air presented its Backpacking Revue in Santa Rosa Park. It was such a success (and we had such a good time) that we have another one planned for this year.

We have some terrific displays on hand, and representations will be on hand to show you what is new in backpacking and camping for the lovely summer ahead. You'll be able to taste the latest freeze-dried foods (they're like eating in a gourmet restaurant under the stars) you'll see the lightest and finest tents and stores and packs—and a variety of bicycle touring accessories too.

Inner city life shown at PCPA

Unlike the scene written in the gymnasium and primary school parking lot in New York, in the price of the scene, where 11-year-old Mira, played by Allana Jordan, and Will McFarland, played by Michael Dass, meet and fall in love in PCPA's cast, it is a heart-warming tale of the power of love. The story of the two young lovers is a collection of events that take place in the city and primary school parking lot in New York. The lives of the two lovers, Mira and Will McFarland, are depicted as a collection of events that take place in the city and primary school parking lot in New York.

The feelings expressed in the play are similar to those expressed in any love story. The love story is filled with the events of the city and the events of the lives of people who are trapped in the city.

American League

Boosting his and a strong armed pitching corps will be the hallmark of this year's American League Divisional Leaders.

The Boston Red Sox are projected to take the East in a galaxy over the World Champions New York Yankees while the California Angels, led by a starting pitching tandem, will win the West.

American League East

1) Boston Red Sox: UPS promises to be an encore year for the big Boston last. Last year's team compiled an awesome .627 home run, one of the highest ever, and with a repeating return, this year's version should do just as well.

2) New York Yankees: The defending World Champions once again have a manpower advantage and the staff to be a little short in starting pitching. This should be the pivotal factor keeping them below Boston.

3) Baltimore Orioles: Led by some solid hitting, the Orioles appear to be the best of the others.

4) Cleveland Indians: The club is young with authority by Ken Singleton, Lee May, Greg Gagne, and Gary Peters. The club is built on hard-hitting Eddie Murray who won last year's American League batting championship. After five years of back-to-back hitting, the team is a quality double play combination. After a weak start, the club may move up a notch or two in the standings.

5) Detroit Tigers: The club is a hit hitting, a few people of the club have a chance to be a pitching powerhouse, will be second to the Tigers.

6) Minnesota Twins: Free agent Larry Biele, last year's AL batting champion, at $350,000 in salary, will add considerably punch to the Twins' lineup.

Cliff Young Award winner, Sparky Lyle, probably the finest, probably will be the boat of the root.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

With a multitude of talent, in both pitching and hitting, the race for the National League pennant will be closer than many experts project. Among the leaders of Philadelphia and Los Angeles will once again take the lead for the National League in October for the National League title.

National League West

1) Los Angeles Dodgers: With a strong and assorted pitching staff, coupled with a hard hitting club, the Dodgers are the West's representatives.

2) Pittsburgh Pirates: The addition of Terry Forster, ($6.5) to an already effective offensive team, the Pirates will make Los Angeles all the harder to catch this year.

3) San Francisco Giants: Although the Reds have one of the best pitching staffs in the league, the old one last year, this year's pitching will be their downfall.

4) Atlanta Braves: It seems this team is on the rise.

National League East

1) Philadelphia Phillies: Billy Williams, a left-handed hitter, will be the key to the team's offense. The team has a good batting order.

2) Houston Astros: The team is trying to build around the star, Bob Bruce, and the club will be competitive in the division.

3) Chicago Cubs: The team, with the addition of Ron Santo, should improve their offensive game. The Cubs will be a contender.

4) Minnesota Twins: A solid pitching staff, with the club's free agent Larry Biele, last year's American League batting champion, up to $350,000 in salary, will add considerably punch to the Twins' lineup.
