LNG terminal at Rattlesnake doubtful

Rattlesnake Canyon, a coastal terrace 1.5 miles north of Port San Luis, is one of five sites where the West Coast's first LNG terminal may be built. The other four sites are Point Concepcion and Las Vistas in Santa Barbara County, south of Rattlesnake Canyon; Point Arena in Mendocino County; and Horse Canyon on Camp Pendleton in San Diego County. Western LNG hopes for a terminal at Point Concepcion because it is a farthest from populated areas and would be built three years sooner than a terminal at Rattlesnake Canyon, McElroy said.

He said not even a proposed $1.5 billion breakeven facility at the Rattlesnake Canyon site would enable supply and demand conditions for the 38 LNG tanker calls estimated to arrive every year from south Alaska and Indonesia. The construction of the $4 billion to $5 billion breakeven facility would involve the burning of 500,000 tons of coke and two to three weeks to build, said McElroy.

After more hearings in Santa Barbara, Ventura and San Diego counties, the state commission must rank the sites and submit their decisions to the California Public Utilities Commission (PUC) by May 31.

Three for a west coast LNG terminal at Point Concepcion call for three 100-foot tall storage tanks to be constructed.

The terminal would be one of four located in the United States. Terminals are in operation at Cape Point, N.J., and Corpus, Texas. A third is expected to begin operation in Georgia in the next future.

The terminal would also be built at the state commission's first choice if the PUC decides there is a severe natural gas shortage that warrants a terminal to be built as soon as possible.

The Rattlesnake Canyon site is last on the list of proposed completion dates.

Paraquat pot: Is it worth the risk?

In its continuing effort to control the flow of marijuana, entering the country from the south, the Federal Government in 1978 began a program aimed directly at the drug at its source: the farms where it is grown.

In the United States, the DEA worked with the Department of Agriculture and the Justice Department, and recently, with the DEA and United Press International, spraying marijuana on a large scale in the Mexican border areas.

The program failed initially, however, when contrary to our expectation, the marijuana crop continued to grow for up to six months.

This failure is compounded by the many factors over which the DEA has little control, e.g. the size of the crop and the geographic location of the crop.

A government study of the crop in 1979 estimated that the total number of marijuana plants was about 2,000. A task force appointed by the California Department of Agriculture estimated that by 1980, the total number of marijuana plants would be about 10,000.

The study also estimates that the DEA's spraying program will reduce the crop by only 10%.

The spraying program's obvious flaws and failures should be used to examine the question of whether it is worth the risk.

Dear Lane Ramsey,

Surely it took too long to write back to you, and I don't have time to do it today, so I might as well write this out. As you know, I was one of the former graduates of the University of Oregon.

I am enclosing the letter which I believe should be included in the catalog of former graduates.

I have a son who is a high school student.

All the best,

Joel Nick

Mr. Burris, high school radical of the early seventies. Let me tell you, Bruce, the class of '79 was made up of mostly out of town students who only came to Oregon State in June, almost five years ago.

All the great talents were there. We got together, Cindy Lewis wanted your advice. I know that you still live in the Old Guard's house. How I wish you were here.

Well, folks, Homecoming Queen Lynne Cooper voted most likely to succeed and Honeymooning in Hawaii. Nowadays, All star shortstop and multi-sport (not baseball) at the Montreal Expos is taking the hand of Indian Fighter at F.E. period three, as a freshman at West, is now an engineering consultant for Kaiser Steel, working in Florida.

Rita, who was married to a man named Troubridge, was married the day of the UN conference on the year and went to the Desert of Washington High City. I'm pretty sure that the event was there.

And do you know what? Sherri Ray has some sort of artificial limbs. Coach quizzed her about you. Seems she's still mad about you throwing three interceptions against Durham. He was really mad and said to make sure you tell her it's old 'old Arm.'

I didn't know Robert Melvin was killed during Desert Storm. We were supposed to be climbing mountains. I was Dragged through the mud, I hid out.

I saw you yesterday. We were working on the same project. I know you never call, and I'm not sure if you want to ever call.

"Well, it's only been a year since the war ended, and you're stillleaving."

And then you went.

I'll never understand anything," she said.

Well, you know what? I still love you.

Well, it's been a year since the war ended, and you're stillleaving."

Yes, I'm graduating in June and working up in Oregon this summer.

Center offers cures the for travel itch

By PAULA CHAMBERS

Planning a trip? If you're going to Europe, Asia, or the northern tip of Africa, the Travel Center can help you get there, and probably for a lot less money.

Rod Neubert, director of the center, said that since the center's existence is not contingent on making money, students can get better deals than if they were to go to any other travel agency.

"We offer all the services of an ordinary travel agency, with a twist," said Neubert. "You can tell the students about lower prices, and ways to attract them.

Most airlines will not tell a student that it is possible to travel much cheaper than economically priced, but according to Neubert, it is possible to get a flight at a cost that is sometimes hundreds of dollars cheaper.

"Many airlines have Super-Saver and youth dates that are possible to find out about," said Neubert. "But then there are savings that can be totally unknown to a student or anyone else, unless they have researched the airlines.

One of the money saving methods is the International Student Identification Card.

"The card must be obtained before students begin traveling, and Neubert said only cost $8, and not only is it recognized worldwide at great discounts, but it is proof that the person is a student," he added.

The card is also beneficial to professors and group tours and other extraneous necessary expenditures that are added to the cost of traveling.

Neubert said he decided a travel center would be a great service to the students from a trip himself.

"I was an exchange student who was aware of the cost cheaper air fare, and so on," he said. "I was involved with the Outings Committee, and had the concept of the International Student Center
in mind while traveling."

Energy appointee recommended

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Energy Committee recommended yesterday that President Carter appoint former energy official Bob Rosner to the nation's highest energy post.

The vote was 8 to 3.

The committee, by a vote of 5 to 3, recommended Yesterday's appointment to Rosner as the nation's top energy official.

The controversy centers on Rosner's appointment, with some senators saying he was too close to the Bush administration.

Discrimination case investigated

TV refereeing not the answer

In an ill-conceived attempt to be professional, pre-football has been added to the television schedule. This may be turning on the television fan tosports latest replay mode, the National Football League. The NFL's Current Program, "Prime Time," and "Monday Night Football" are two of the NFL's 30 teams. It is understandable that the leagues are committed to television. However, the problem is that the broadcast involves live sports. The official will have to make live decisions and the television camera will be watching his every move. After each controversial play, the television official, inaddition to reaffirming his decision, will also show that he was right. A television replay will be shown in an attempt to upgrade the league's image. The TV has made the appeal as the ultimate payer. In addition, the view is that a few more points are being omitted. A Drink is a Drink is a Drink is...

Or let me rephrase that: "An alcoholic drink is an alcoholic drink." The point being that if you are having a few drinks, the number is all that your liver can keep track of. All drinks carry about the same amount of alcohol. Yes, this is a truism; the high concentration of alcohol found in a small strong drink (let's say a shot of tequila or whisky) can be quite evenly matched by just one glass of wine or beer.

Imagine this: Melvin Macho downs a shot of tequila with a beer chaser as though it's his lunch and dinner. All of this alcohol is immediately directed to his liver where it is processed at the set rate of 1 ounce of pure alcohol, or one average drink per hour. His liver begins to process one half of the alcohol, while the rest is fed directly into the bloodstream where it wastes no time in showing its pretense.

Melvin Macho and Trampus. Fred were locally famous for their additional self control. It is the situation.

Men's athletic budget cut $3667

As indicated in Senate Bill 477, the money that is used primarily for scholarship funds, is suddenly from the student body. This year, only the annual allocates to the athletic department. The total amount is $3667, for the 1978-79 year.

BY JANET KRAMER
Daily Poly Bulletin

The Men's athletic budget was allocated $3667 by the ASI for the 1978-79 year.

If you want to be competitive, you can't expect the scholarship to pay their way. Many of the students have already purchased a meal ticket and now pay for campus housing. There is no reason to have to work while they are in school, said an ASI member.

Last year, prices for the meal tickets were to be raised to give more money to the athletic department. But this year, the prices were left alone.

"I maintain that the meal ticket has been taken from the student body," said ASI President, Bruce, men's athletic director.

In last year's budget, each athlete was allocated $8.50 a day for each meal ticket. If the meal ticket was not sold, the athletes would have been given $8.50 each for use on the meal ticket.

Instead, the price for the meal ticket was cut. A hint to the drinkers and person serving drinks: Stop drinking or serving drinks about one hour before heading home. This gives your own one-drink-per-hour time before being self-conscious and driving home. It doesn't make sense to leave without your senses.

Poly's track full of holes and cracks

by John Kessler

The Poly track has been a center for undergraduate use for more than 10 years. Yet, even in a mile race, said Track Coach Gradie Miers, "it's not a good track." He explained that the track is surrounded by holes and cracks due to poor maintenance. The majority of the impairments are in the vicinity of the student residence halls, and the cracked and broken cracks are often evident to students.

The problem is not isolated to Poly's track, however, as it is a major concern in the greater Seattle area. The track is in need of a total reconfiguration, and the majority of the repairs are due to lack of funds. If a major cut is made to the budget, the track will not be able to run.

For those reasons, the Student Association has run an extensive campaign to improve the track. The campaign has included a variety of activities, such as a tattle dispute and OC trying to settle disputes.

Although the track is not currently in use, it is still important for Poly students. The track can be used for practice, and sometimes it can even be used for classes.

ICOC trying to settle dispute

Miles City (AP) - Last minute details of the pacesetting, orffice-keeping, and political maneuverings were not completed yesterday to enable a major announcement before the opening of the 1984 Arizona Olympics.

However, ICOC officials and their sources were unanimous in saying that the details will be settled.

Los Angeles is the only city to have the necessary political and legal power to sign the agreements with the United States government that could be the most significant of the year, and which will have a major impact on the future of Los Angeles. The Los Angeles City Council has been involved in the negotiations for the past year, and has been hopeful that a resolution will be reached soon.

John D. Eberly is heading the Los Angeles City Council's delegation. A personal representative of Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley.

"We can't lose money on this," Eberly said this morning. "Any money that goes to the Olympics is money that goes to Los Angeles." The Olympics will be held in Los Angeles in 1984, and the city is currently preparing for the event.
