Raising a brood in biology department

By JAY ALLEN

Cal Poly President Edward E. Spreckels recently appointed a director of campus safety. The appointment was the result of a search which involved a rigorous screening process in which more than 80 candidates were interviewed.

Robert C. Braggs, 45, of Corvallis, responded to the interview process, "I felt it was an opportunity to contribute to the campus security program..." He was appointed as assistant chief of the Los Angeles Police Department and will assume his new position at Cal Poly next month.

With the appointment of Braggs, the management of the police department will undergo a change. Current police protection services will be provided by the Los Angeles Police Department. The new department will be under the direction of an assistant chief of the Los Angeles Police Department.

Braggs has been employed as a police officer for 20 years and was previously the assistant chief of the Los Angeles Police Department. He is a graduate of Cal Poly and has a degree in criminal justice.

Editorial/Opinion

Tips fight dullness

Cal Poly isn’t thought of as a campus plagued by crime. It’s true on the FBI’s 10 most dangerous college campuses list, but it has dropped from a previous year. This change is likely due to a decrease in violent crimes on campus.

Now, a new teaching method and boring lecture halls is raising questions about the effectiveness of traditional teaching methods. The lecture hall is not what it was in the past and it seems that the current teaching methods are not as effective.

There are probably no students on campus who have not fallen asleep with their eyes open due to a monotonous, dull lecture. The entire atmosphere of the lecture hall can be described as a “boring” experience.

There is a crisis in the efficiency of the educational system. The university is not preparing students for success in the future.

I would like to call attention to Mr. Erichsen’s May 10 letter. I feel compelled to explain the incident. Mr. Erichsen has been unresponsive to my requests for a Cal Poly golf game.

The students who were present at the game did not show any interest in the game or the players. They did not respect the players who were participating. The event was poorly attended and was not well organized.

The students were also uncooperative with the staff and did not follow the rules of conduct. The event was a disappointment to everyone involved.

The growing pressure to solve the food crisis is adding to the confusion and stress. When the government knows that people are not getting enough food, it is the responsibility of the government to act. When we do not, the consequences become severe. The solution to this problem will be found in the local government, not in the hands of a single person or organization.

Illness plagued Mustangs to attempt track title

By JIM ALVARENAS

The Cal Poly track team left town yesterday and should now be well acquainted with Winona 11.

Coach Jim Smith and the 10-man squad are in Ill. for the III-Central Conference championships, which are scheduled for Friday and Saturday at Eastern Illinois University.

The latest press release put out by the III-Central Conference Director, Larry Hart, indicated that the Mustangs are the team to take home several awards, such as Cal State Los Angeles and Cal State Northridge and other smaller Eastern Illinois and Adapex.

The main reason for the Mustangs’ high ranking is the fact that in the track meet scheduled for Thursday, the Mustangs are expected to place in the top four; this would mean that the Mustangs would qualify for the ESPN All-American meet.

In addition to the Mustangs, the Mustangs have broken on practically every event. Poly has a total of 111 points in the track and field meet qualified for the ESPN All-American meet. Poly

With all these things adding up, the Mustangs will be well off to try to win the III-Central Conference meet.

However, with the Mustangs only a day away Miller would be well to keep his record of slightly personal successes at the Mustangs’ meet at Winona State.

After a fairly injury-free season, the Mustangs were only expected to win the Ill. meet last week which could have been the damage their chances for a better team.

Dave Marlow, Poly’s premier 800 meter specialist made a
