Tackling the dunes and backroads...

...with a four-wheel drive

The club has drives and fun activities, said Palm Deutsch, president of the club. At the gate, Club members, many of whom own their own 4WD vehicles, travel in a convoy to the beach. They drive down a remote road, past the guardhouse, and enter the沙滩 where the waves on the dunes could believably be seen.

"We plan to take a 4WD group out to Pismo this summer," Deutsch said. "Most of the club members have been out there before and enjoy the adventure."

The backcountry trails, still mostly at the beach, can be accessed by a four-wheel-drive vehicle. The drive through these trails can be challenging, especially for those who are afraid of the water crossing or the steep inclines.

"The members are always looking for new spots to explore," Deutsch said. "We're constantly looking for new trails to drive on, and we're always looking for new members."

Chal Poly's learning by doing is doing me in. Obviously, learning by doing occurs every day. Most of us get a traditional education, then we work at something a while, then we get a traditional education again. Under Chal Poly's "applied education" is giving me time to practice just what I want to practice. By the time I get around to doing it, I'll already be good at it. So, you can try to "do it now, practice later." But I've never been able to "do it now." I've always tended to try to do it more positively.

Chal is a good place to find out what we can't do as well as what we can do. If you look for this type of information, you can get it.

Sure, don't have to have a fancy vehicle to belong to the club. As long as it runs, it's okay. People are also welcome to go along on the trips. I was once a member of the club and I'm thinking of joining again. If I ever get original, I plan on using a model that does have some feature or other. People like to know there's a difference. Their vehicles range from Landrovers to Jeep Wagons and one member has a 1936 Willy Jeep with a 286 engine. Tread powertrain, a budget economy major, gives them on some of their trips to Pismo. She gives her vehicle some driving distance that takes about an hour or so at the beach.

When spring comes, the group drives out to Pismo to visit the bison. "I bought my first one at Pismo in fact," she said. "And you don't get too many for a good price. They paint the road that way as you know and they are on the road a lot." The more you do that is the same thing. You can drive around them and just generally having a good time. They also spend some time running people stuck in the mud and don't try to get people on the water without putting some people out. She smiled. "I'll rather pull out and help them than see them end up in the mud because it's your own fault if you're stuck up there with only two wheel drive."

Despite this, she says she enjoys driving in the mud and visiting the bison. "It's a fun activity to do," she said. "I love being out in the wilderness and watching the bison. I think it's a great opportunity to see nature up close and personal."

Friends arrived at 11 a.m. to try and dig him out. He was stuck up in his friend's car, and the friend had been trying to move the car out of the mud. "He's been in the mud for a while," she said. "But he's doing fine now."

Outstanding students from animal science

Jay Dee and Daniel McDougal were both chosen as outstanding seniors by the Animal Sciences Department. Jay Dee was selected based on his overall academic performance, while Daniel was chosen for his extracurricular activities.

Jay Dee has been a student at Cal Poly as well as working for the university for a few years. He has helped organize the annual Animal Science Department Fair and has been involved in various other activities. He has also received a number of awards for his work.

Daniel has been active in the Animal Science Department for several years. He has also been involved in various extracurricular activities, including internships and research. He has also received a number of awards for his work.

Browsing for berries at nearby farms

Fresh air and fresh berries are abundant this time of year. For those who like shopping through nature rather than the produce section of the market, and under the bright rays of the sun rather than fluorescent light, a visit to some local berry farms can be exciting.

Poly’s ‘aggressive’ long distance man

By RANDY NORD

Jim Schankel is a rare athlete.

With all the physical attributes needed for cross-country and long distance running, Schankel has an added quality that sets him above the rest.

His coach calls him aggressive.

“Jim is an extremely aggressive guy, a quality which is not usual in a runner. It’s what separates him from other runners. This aggressiveness really comes out in a close race. If Jim is anywhere near the lead, he will win. That’s an instinct and aggressiveness that you just don’t teach, and it makes for a winner,” said Dave Miller, Poly track coach.

This desire to win is reflected in the track record Schankel has compiled this season. So far, the sophomore Natural Resources Management major has broken the school record in the two, three and six-mile, 10,000-meter and 20,000-meter races.

He has established himself as the California Collegiate Athletic Association conference champion and finished second in the NCAA Division I cross-country meet in Chicago. In the NCAA Division I meet, he placed seventh out of all the runners in the United States. These accomplishments have earned him All-American status.

Schankel takes these victories in stride.

“After running seven or eight years, it almost becomes a habit. I like to run, because it’s a good way to get away from things. To think, to use the money and even to study,” he said. “But I do set some pretty high goals for myself and fail to meet them. That’s why I’m satisfied right now, because I’ve accomplished what I set out to do.”

For Schankel, that meant giving back to the team after a year and a half layoff during a stint in the Air Force.

“When I came here as a freshman, I liked the school but not the coach. I was a cross-country runner and I was concerned with hall events. So I decided to get away from things for a while and go into the service. At least that way I wouldn’t have any of my obligations,” he said.

Van Horn leads Poly to second

The women's relay team from Cal Poly used a pair of strong anchor legs from Betsy Van Horn to secure a second place finish in the 4 x 400-meter relay at the NCAA West Regionals in Los Angeles last weekend.

Van Horn, a junior from Berkeley, Calif., provided a crucial boost for the Mustangs as they prepared for the national meet at the Olympic Stadium in Los Angeles this weekend. She was on the anchor leg of both the 4 x 400-meter relay and the 4 x 800-meter relay at the regional meet.

As a result of her performance, Van Horn was named to the All-American team for both events. She is the first Mustang to be named to the All-American team in the history of the program.

Van Horn's success in the 4 x 400-meter relay came as a result of her strong second leg, which helped the Mustangs take the lead in the event. Her performance also helped the Mustangs to set a new school record for the 4 x 800-meter relay, which they broke in the regional meet.

In addition to her success in the relays, Van Horn also ran a seasonal best time in the 400-meter dash, finishing second in the event with a time of 53.49 seconds. She is currently ranked third in the nation in the 400-meter dash, and she is expected to do well in the event at the national meet.

Stenner's benefit run

The Mustangs Jim Stenner's benefit run was a success, raising over $2,500 for the school. Stenner, a senior on the basketball team, was diagnosed with a knee injury earlier this season and had to undergo surgery.

Stenner's benefit run was held on the basketball court at Cal Poly and included a 5K run and a 10K run. The event attracted a large crowd of supporters, who came out to support Stenner and the school.

The proceeds from the run will go towards Stenner's medical expenses and will also be used to purchase new equipment for the basketball team. The event was organized by the Mustangs' teammates and the school's athletic department.

In preparation for the run, the Mustangs' teammates went through a rigorous training schedule to improve their fitness and prepare for the event.
