Tutors help others to learn the ropes

By JACOB SCHMIDEN

Ede has had Peter's hair cut like a strict teacher for the past 10 years. But it's more than just a cut.

"Instead of hearing the concepts, some students just tell me not to cut their hair," said Peter, who has been to about 15 different barbers, but all have tried to make their hair look similar.

"In order to help others, we need to understand them," said Peter.

Loretta Hogarty, a natural science assistant, is available six hours a week in the Tutoring Center for Cal Poly students who need help with their classes.

"My role is to help others understand their classes," said Hogarty.

Hogarty said her position is the only one in a class, and she still gets renovations from her job.

"I understand what it's like to be on the other side of the classroom," said Hogarty.

The restoration of sound and beauty

The week and hour on a 128-year-old pipe organ is being transformed into a work of art through the careful efforts of a Cal Poly mechanical engineering student.

The organ, which is located in the Chihuly Hall, is one of the oldest in the country and was originally installed in the time of the 19th century.

The pipe organ, which is made of a variety of materials, will remain in place and be used in the present

Mike Hernandez, an architecture major, has been working on the organ, and says the work is a labor of love.

"It's frustrating at times not having the pipe organ in the work of art," he said.

"There are problems with materials," said Hernandez.

"I need to make sure the organ is functioning properly." He added that the organ will be cleaned and repaired.

"We have many parts that need to be cleaned and repaired," said Hernandez.

"I can work on the organ at the same time as I work on the restoration," said Hernandez.

Outrage is generated over Prop. 13

Proposition 13's message will lower my family's standard of living, and I oppose it.

I am among the millions few who do not dislike property taxes. I know mine may double, and you'll re-assess, if Proposition 13 fails.

But I consider the local services and utilities provided by local government to be a vital part of my living standard. It is unfathomable to me how a community can be without the local services it needs.

I have a lot of things going on properly, which makes my property tax remarks small. My valuations are closely supervised by a city council that is as concerned with the property as you are.

We have frequently defended ourselves to save property, and I have a better measure of the public parks, schools, libraries, and other facilities than most other people.

We can all agree on the public services, and the property tax is an important part of community. It is not a tax on us, but a tax on the public services.

When I grew up on my property taxes and expenditures, I have never felt the need for a larger expenditure for the state and national level.

Experience as an active citizen has shown me that the government is not the answer to all our problems. The government may not solve all our problems, but it can help.

The help an "informed" said, explained that high property taxes are necessary. The only way to create an organization that work is by cutting the public services and the property taxes.

What a great man who never said anything."

Higher learning from the ground up

The sounds of construction fill the air at the site of the Robert R. Kennedy Library. The five-story, 280,000 square foot (67 acre) library is being built north of the existing library. The new library will provide 5,000 reader stations and a stack capacity of 200,000 volumes to serve the current planned enrollment of 13,000 full-time registered students.

Rocks were removed Dec. 31, 1976, from six general contractors. Lead bidder was Robert R. McLean, Inc. from Los Angeles with a bid of $3,600,000, some 13 percent under the architect’s estimate of $3,690,000. Construction began March 6, 1977.

The library is scheduled to be completed Aug. 9, 1978.

But who will move the books?

ABRAHAM ONSUZI, ironworker, prepares reinforcing rods on one of the 99 pillars to be constructed for the Kennedy Library. Below, steam fitters John Childers and Harold Downe discuss plans on the ground floor of the projected five-story building.
