Borby was appointed to his present term on the board of trustees in 1973 by Gov. Ronald Reagan. Last week, he was elected to his present term as chairman.

Prior to his appointment to the UC Board of Trustees, Borby served on the University Community College Board of Goverors.

The Dean legend lives on...

BY STEVE THORN

Entertainment Editor

You see the low-down rebel if there ever was. Even if you had no sense of James Dean, James Dean is the kind of actor I'd like to have known. I know my life would have been different. If I could see him on the silver screen - -

Eagles

Mystery surrounds the life of James Byron Dean, the possessed charisma only a few people from the Hollywood factory ever have.

James Dean starred in only three major motion pictures.

James Dean was an actor who could delight or infuriate directors and stage crews.

James Dean was a thousand-year-old woman who enjoyed watching on death's headlights.

Death won on September 30, 1955.

That day Dean went too far. He had cheated death many times before, but this day at 2:30 p.m., James Dean died. And James Dean's legend hasn't faded in 22 years.

"Jimmy looked a lot like a horse and tipped back into the car. He was roaring to go. 'Nice day to Pass Republic!' he shouted and jammed down the accelerator without fastening his safety belt." - From David Dalton's book

James Dean: The Mysterious King

James Dean was killed in an automobile accident on Route 66 near the post office stop called Cholame, located 240 miles south of Los Angeles County.

Donald Turnupseed, a 21-year-old college student, and a group of friends were driving Dean's "little Satellite," a sleek, petite Porsche Spider which was speeding toward the intersection of Route 65 and 41 near Cholame. Turnupseed was making a left turn in his Ford Falcon when Dean suddenly came out of nowhere.

Dean revolved off the road into a ditch. The Porsche was crushed and Dean, trapped behind the wheel with a broken neck and multiple broken bones, died instantly.

Turnupseed suffered a broken nose and his car contained five other students, three of whom were seriously injured.

Prior to the accident, Dean was an award-winning actor who had starred in one film, "Rebel Without a Cause," which received rave reviews and white Dean was a romantic actor in Hollywood circles, he was well-known for his hollywood style, but from Japan.

The irony of his death was that his popularity reached a fever pitch with the rapidly rising release of his last two films, "Giant" and "Rebel Without a Cause!" (released four days after the auto accident) and "Giant." (Continued on page 9)

"Rebel" is the definitive Dean film, a motion picture held alive by its huge cult following.

"Rebel" boasts an impressive supporting cast, including James Dean and the cool, dazzling, young rebel. and the late

ERA should pass

Over 30 years ago, someone introduced a simple amendment to the constitution. A woman's right to vote. Rights under the law shall not be abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex. In other words, it is a statement of equality. Equal means equal. It is as simple as that. If something is illegal, it should be illegal for both men and women. Women have been going about their business, making their decisions, and living their lives as they see fit. Yet, they are denied a right that men have been enjoying for centuries. Something needs to be done.

Years later, and I find a similar problem. Women are not afforded the same rights as men. They are not being treated equally. The ERA was introduced to help remedy this problem. It was designed to ensure that women would be treated equally under the law.

Some people may argue that it is a waste of time to even talk about the ERA. They believe that women are already equal in the workforce and that there is no need for this amendment. I disagree. The ERA is necessary to ensure that women are treated equally. It is not enough for women to be treated fairly; they need to be treated equally.

The ERA would protect women from discrimination in the workplace. It would ensure that women are paid the same as men for doing the same work. It would prevent women from being denied promotions or other opportunities simply because of their gender. It would give women the same rights as men when it comes to employment.

There are already many ways that women are disadvantaged and that the ERA should help eliminate them. For example, many states have laws that allow employers to pay women less than men for doing the same work. This is discrimination. The ERA would help eliminate this kind of discrimination.

The Equal Rights Amendment has been around a long time. It's been debated over and over again. Women have been working sides by side for a long time and they deserve equal recognition. The ERA will give women the same rights as men, and it will help to ensure that women are treated equally in all aspects of life.

Sailing seems to equate the sexes

I thought the members of the all male Race Committee would be surprised when I—a non-racing woman—showed up to the starting line. I mean, I only had my sailing instruction book with me. I didn’t have any previous experience. I had read about sailing and heard stories from my friends. I had heard about the races and the excitement of being out on the water. I was a little bit nervous, but I was determined to give it a try.

I arrived at the starting line and waited for my turn. I was third in line. I was the last to go. I was nervous, but I was also excited. I was ready to sail. I was ready to show them what I could do.

The course was set, and I was ready to go. I sat on the dock, waiting for my turn. I was the last to go. I was nervous, but I was also excited. I was ready to sail. I was ready to show them what I could do.

I pulled away from the dock, and I was off. I knew that I was going to have to work hard to stay competitive. I was the only woman in the race. I was the only woman in the race. I was determined to prove that women can be just as good as men. I was determined to show them that women can be just as good as men.

I was third in line, and I was the last to go. I was nervous, but I was also excited. I was ready to sail. I was ready to show them what I could do. I was ready to show them that women can be just as good as men.

The four racing boats started tugging for position around the mark; they pulled each other, the ships swayed with language similar to the waves of Morro Bay. Riding over with confidence, I yelled back at the battling vessels. "Why are you mean?" I don't know. Don't men have to go to school too?" I asked, my voice rising.

Then I made my fatal break. I brought my boat around with a简直就是 freakish move, I had a good idea that I was going to win. I knew I was going to win. I knew I was going to win. I knew I was going to win.

The woods died as they ran past me. There was no wind. There was no wind. There was no wind. There was no wind.

I drifted back into the boats in the post. Though I can't think, I think I Freed myself of one of them in those last seconds. The other sailors continued fighting, and I finally rounded the mark, but by this time, I was sailing fast.

Then the Sabot and I caught a brief spell of power for third place when I looked back. I looked back. I looked back. I looked back.

The wind died as they ran past me. There was no wind. There was no wind. There was no wind. There was no wind.

Then the Sabot and I caught a brief spell of power for third place when I looked back. I looked back. I looked back. I looked back.

I don't remember much about the race, but I do remember one thing. I was the only woman in the race. I was the only woman in the race. I was the only woman in the race. I was the only woman in the race. I was the only woman in the race.

My confidence and my skill was expressed on the second race. The pressure lessened as I got to the end. I got an excellent start and

'Network' tonight in Chumash

The last film of Spring Quarter's budget is the much awaited "Network." And it is disliked with good reason.

The film is a comment on the television industry in particular, and most industries in general. The film is about a tired newsman who has a nervous breakdown and, because of it, he becomes a TV star.

Peter Finch, as the newsman, is magnificent. This is his last movie role. He deserved the Oscar he received for best actor. William Holden, as his boss and friend is also in great form. Page Dunaway, the executive's suitor, dry of emotions by TV in this film, has done much better things in the same vein. The same can be said of Robert Duvall. Ned Beatty is excellent in the role of the newsman's boss. He is a true professional.

Despite the very serious tone of message and the concept of the film, there is a certain laugh here running throughout it. Scenes like Finch's, for instance, when he is discussing a TV show to be made up of stories of his life or his talking about old times with the news staff are examples of this. And of course the entire film leads up to the ending, which is one of the best I've seen in the history of the TV industry.

The film is great for all lovers of TV. From the glowing praise of Woody Allen to the glowing reviews of Sidney Lumet, both of whom were key in the making of the film, this film will come alive with a day-long spring fantasy under the stars in San Luis Obispo's Roberton Gym.

Thanks NBA...we needed this

Knee deep in the National Basketball Association playoffs, we, the fans, can look back and appreciate the exciting set up for the playoffs. Not only did we see four different rounds of eliminations, but we tasted a variety of basketball teams and styles in a divisional round robin in the league. The current playoff structure of the NBA is so complex and yet so beguiling. The fans get to see the finest basketball in the world.

The league consists of 22 teams. Obviously, there are the good and the bad teams. But each year, the bad teams do well enough to keep the league in business another season. Only a few teams are eliminated. Over the years, the franchise is a moneymaker, but it is a business. The teams that lose money are those who have lost as much before as they have won after. There are no guarantees.

The decision makers of the NBA will have to cut the waste and get rid of all of the others in the league to begin another season. Only a few teams make it. Over the years, the franchise is a moneymaker, but it is a business. The teams that lose money are those who have lost as much before as they have won after. There are no guarantees.

and explains, “we didn’t have enough to win it. But at least we made it to the playoffs, didn’t we?”

How true. Not all can be a first place team, right? So who should the teams be in the playoffs? And at the end of the season, who would win the championship? The teams were eliminated after the first place teams were finished second, third, and even fourth place teams were eliminated. If these five teams make it, it is the top 50 percent. But it is a tournament regular season and a real deal.

Busy workers in everyday life do not have time watching this disappearing world of sports. The games are stretched over the season and the admission rates skyrocket. Parents can save their money and wait for the playoffs. Possibly the owners realize this and added the extra teams to expand the playoff round to a championship season. In short, the owners pruned us something more than a compact post season championship series as promised to most other sports in the world. This generous move went to the fans in an attempt to watch battle for the championship.

The Los Angeles Times calculates a complete season of 66 regular games, 30 playoff games, as much. Considering the regular season...

Schankel is competing this week in the Division I finals at Eugene, Oregon, running in the 5,000. He is also a part of a U.S. team competing in the Olympic Stadium in Mexico City against a Mexican national team in mid-June.
