Christians debate set for March 1

BY STEPHANIE WINN

Although the debate format has been changed a little to suit its participants, anti-Christian Mark Morrow and Christian Jon Huddleston have agreed to a free for-all discussion to be aired Monday, March 1 at 6 p.m. on KPRI’s Open Channel program. Open Channel host Mai4 Oss will act as mediator for the discussion which will last one hour and allow twenty minutes for outside callers.

During the first 40 minutes of the informal debate each of the men will alternately discuss their views on Christianity. Following five minute segments, because the two could not agree on specifics to be discussed from the Bible, they decided the debate would have an informal format. "The goal will be to have a free flowing discussion," said Morrow who is a master’s engineer student at Cal Poly. "The discussion will hit on the question of the Bible’s credibility of moral truths and historical issues. Morrow said the main argument is whether the Bible can be trusted or not. They will discuss proofs and the reasonableness of the Bible said." Huddleston said he will start the debate with an explanation on how to evaluate whether the Bible is credible or not. Beck the scientific and historical approach will be discussed in his introduction.

"I hope to demonstrate the reasonableness of the Bible," Morrow said.

Roland, a resident of Grover Beach, said that for the last eight months he has been looking for a Christian to discuss controversial items in the Bible. Hoping to expose Christianity as a "mind control system," Roland said in a recent letter to the editor of the Mustang Daily that he believed the Bible was confused, contradictory and convoluted.

"If Christian leaders in the same city (San Luis Obispo) are confused in their interpretations of the Bible, then that's proof and the Bible is concluding and contradicting itself," he said.

Morrow, who never met Roland prior to accepting his challenge, said he was confused by the discussion because he wished to lay to rest questions Roland raised about the Bible that he believed were untrue.

ORVs in South County facing uncertain future

BY SHARYN SEARS

The question of how to handle off-road vehicle use in the South County dunes remains unanswered following a meeting of the Coastal Commission in Santa Barbara last Thursday.

The commission decided not to approve a moratorium banning ORVs from the dunes, contending it did not have the authority to deal with off-road state park property.

"We don't believe anyone has the right to impose a moratorium on state property but the state parks department," Ken Huddleston, chief ranger of the San Luis Obispo Coastal Commission, said Thursday.

Huddleston attended last Thursday's public hearing and was not surprised that the issue passed unresolved.

"I don't expect to see an end to this soon," said Huddleston, adding that the next step is a series of meetings and negotiations between the state parks department, the county and the Coastal Commission.

He said the three groups will meet once a week for about six weeks.

Concern over the environmental deterioration of the dunes caused by ORVs has prompted interest in the environment more closely.

Enforcing the speed limit and warning people of hazardous conditions has been the main function of the 22 patrol persons currently assigned to the dune area, Huddleston said.

"We're a people patrol," he added, "not a resource patrol.

Huddleston said the responsibility for resource patrol rests with the parks department. But a lean budget has kept them from implementing a resource patrol plan, he said.

According to Huddleston, the 1973 moratorium plan provided for vegetation to be reestablished, but so far that hasn't been implemented.

"Vegitation will be in the hands of the Department of Parks and Recreation," Huddleston said.

Health Center: shop of useful programs

BY GAIL PELLERIN

The Health Center is like a supermarket where students shop to find products useful to them, according to the Health Center's assistant administrator.

Jim Hoffman sees the Health Education Program as one of these useful products and cited other examples.

Education workshops are offered both in the Health Center or as outreach programs for groups on or off campus, while the family planning program provides workshops which educate groups, couples or individuals in birth control, communication in relationships and making sexual decisions.

There is no charge and no appointment is necessary for this education, said Hoffman.

Nutrition education provides information on weight loss and gain, as well as low budget residence halls and athletic nutrition and vegetarianism.

According to Mary Cummings, nutrition educator, the staff in her program is trying to organize a weight control group for interested students, noting that about 70 percent of the people they work with are concerned with weight control.

The Pretenders subdue frustrated Poly audience

BY TOM JOHNSON

The Pretenders failed badly only once—at a time when audience enthusiasm was at its peak. After a stirring anthem which sounded as if it should have been played at a royal coronation, the band came out to a forlorn 3,200 Pretenders faithfuls and played "the Wait" and "the Adultress." The opening coronation theme was carried through these first two songs, the band came out to a royal coronation,...
Cities can't stand NRC drills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Local governments are complaining about the frequency of emergency drills ordered by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in the past three years, NRC Chairman Nunzio Palladino told Congress on Monday.

Palladino also told the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee that the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the NRC disagree on how often the drills should be held.

After the 1979 Three Mile Island accident, the worst in the history of commercial nuclear power, Congress passed a law mandating increased emergency drills.

Palladino told the committee that his agency and FEMA are at odds and that FEMA "feels we could benefit from reducing the frequency" of inspections of emergency plans for dealing with an accident.

Palladino also said some local communities have complained that the NRC is ordering too many drills. He did not name any of the towns or counties.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., told Palladino that "we should insist that the law on inspections be followed.

We were blamed after Three Mile Island for not having good emergency plans."

Although it is necessary to call the Health Center for the hours of service, but no appointment is needed.

Patrol educates students on bicycle safety, care

BY GAIL PELLERIN
Staff Writer

Bicycle safety and registration are the main items emphasized by the Cal Poly Bicycle Patrol Program. The program, coordinated by four students and advised by Sgt. Steve Schroeder, functions as a communication device educating on-campus students on the importance of bike safety and maintenance.

The patrol board, which consists of students who work 10-20 hours a week for a minimum wage, travels around campus and put tags that read, "Please lock, Please register, and Please use the bicycle racks," on bikes.

These tags, especially the one reminding students to register their bikes, are for the students' own safety, said Jim McCown, a second year member of the bike patrol.

Obtaining a record of the bicycle's serial numbers is a method of theft protection, McCown said. Registration is also free for off-campus residents, and students can register their bikes on Tuesdays and Thursdays in the University Union Plaza from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., or through campus public safety.

Registration for off-campus students can be purchased for $6 at City Hall.

The program also provides information on bicycle safety at a table in the U.U. Plaza.

"People fail to see the importance of bike safety on campus," McCown said. Students riding bikes need to be more aware of cars, pedestrians, staying in bike lanes, and being more careful, especially in congested areas like the inner perimeter. McCown noted.

Also, bicyclists must abide by the same rules and regulations as drivers of vehicles.

According to McCown, Bicycle Bill and Mountain Air Bikes are going to sponsor the program by printing bicycle safety tips on a regular basis in their Mustang Daily ads.

The Bicycle Patrol Program members are required to make reports to the campus public safety on future plans and successes.

Recently, the patrol board reported there was a great need for more bike racks. Because of their efforts, additional racks will be installed in the near future, McCown said.

Students will park their bikes on handicapped rails, which is a serious safety hassle, said McCown.

Unfortunately, if the program is not taken advantage of by more students, it may be discontinued.

"We need to make more people aware of the program and the services it can provide," McCown said.

In order to communicate to the students, the patrol board is going to have bicycle safety and maintenance seminars in the residence halls, and possibly in the Academic Auditorium.

"The program could go a long way if we get more interest and response from the students," said McCown.

The Pretenders long wait worthwhile

Martin Chambers, a fractious drummer who has to be dosed several times with some liquid, almost upstaged Hynde on several occasions. During "Bad Boys Get Spanked," Chambers became a human waterfall as the liquid which was supposed to keep him cool flew off like sparks from a Fourth of July firework. As he thumped the drums and crashed the cymbals throughout the course of the show enough drum sticks sailed out of his hands to refertil half of Canada.

But it was ultimately Hynde with her tough guy dramticans who stole the show and made the audience forget how much trouble they had getting into the show.

Sacrificial lamb

The Pretender's lead act, the Bow Wow Wow, was sent on stage as a sacrificial lamb. They were wiped on stage just before midnight when most of the crowd was still milling about, trying to find a seat. They were mercifully allowed to leave a half an hour later amidst some weak cheers and a howling of boos.

Bow Wow Wow was in the wrong place at the wrong time. The group is probably the best of the handful of New Romantic bands (try Adam and the Ants fanati, but their materialinfinitely less insipid than, say, the widely uncelebrated Cal Poly ap­ ance). The clapping was punctuated with the sounds of booing after every number. Bow Wow Wow deserved better.

Like the Bow Wow Wow gave a high energy show and impressed with its irresistible danceable songs. The lead singer like the Pretenders' Hynde, carried the group with her shuffling, pelvic thrusting dance moves and a strong voice. Unfortunately, the singer, who sports a mohawk which ends in a pony tail, was upstaged by a pair of female dancers who were probably plucked from the reject line of Solid Gold.

By the time The Pretenders bounded off the stage, the clock read dangerously close to 2:30 a.m.

The audience had been through quite a bit: nights of waiting, an hour of sleep, one or two more dancing on the cold concrete, a two-hour delay and then the mayhem of an opening act. But somehow The Pretenders made all the agony worth it.

Cain said the busiest time for the crisis team is in the fall, when many new students may have trouble adjusting to their new cam­

According to Cirone, the team tries to provide a person with the necessary cop­

Cagers win in overtime
Two Poly wins set up CCAA showdown at Bakersfield

Lucas led all scorers and rebounders in the game, grabbing 13 boards and scoring 22 points including a three-pointer with 1:09 in overtime to end the Broncos' upset ambitions. The exceptional play of Lucas—exceptional for most anyone but Lucas, that is—helped fill the void left by 6-7 center Mike Franklin who sat out the weekend with the flu. The Mustangs finished a two-game weekend sweep on Saturday night with a 66-68 win over UC Riverside in Poly's last regular season home game.

The two California Collegiate Athletic Association teams keep Cal Poly in a tie for first with the Roadrunners of Cal State Bakersfield, who also beat Riverside and Pomona over the weekend but with considerably more ease than the Mustangs. Poly will travel to Bakersfield on Thursday night for a showdown with the Roadrunners to decide the conference championship.

Coach Ernie Wheeler seemed to be downplaying the importance of the upcoming contest after the Riverside win, probably in an effort to keep his young and relatively inexperienced team from getting too anxious.

Asked about his decision to play the still-sick Franklin for eight minutes in the Riverside game, Wheeler replied: "We played him a little bit because the game on Thursday night is kind of important."

To best Bakersfield for the second time this season—the first time on their home court—the Mustangs will have to play their own game, he said, and relax, according to Wheeler. Wheeler said before the Pomona and Riverside games that if his team won both they would almost assuredly receive a bid to the NCAA playoffs but that did not happen.

Wheeler may have spoken too soon as Cal State Dominguez Hills won a pair over the weekend, remaining only one game out of first.

Coach Vaughn Hitchcock's Division I wrestlers finished regular season action last weekend with wins over Arizona State 54-12 and the University of Las Vegas-Nevada, 29-13. The team will bring its 19-5 overall dual meet record with them to the Western Regionals this week, which are being held in Laramie, Wyo. The Mustangs were also the winners in the Arizona Sundevil Tournament, the Virginia Duals and the Roda Tournament.

"I am pleased with the season, it was very successful. We followed our game plan by starting out slow and finishing strong," Hitchcock said.

"We had a very young team importance wise, I am pleased with the continual growth of all of them," Hitchcock added.

Coach Hitchcock considers his team a "well-balanced team with a good mix at each weight." His men displayed their talents this past weekend.

Senior Mike Barfuss, wrestling in his last collegiate match of the regular season, also had a winning weekend. He handed Arizona's Rick Powers a 1-4-0 loss and defeated Mark Tomlinson of Las Vegas with a 7-4 decision. Barfuss finished out the season with a 20-9 record.

Also competing in his last regular season match for the Mustangs, senior 142-pounder Chris Cain recorded a tie and a victory. Cain tied with Adam Cohen of Arizona State in the Saturday tournament, the Mustangs were also the winners in the Arizona Sundevil Tournament, the Virginia Duals and the Roda Tournament.

Mustangs win two

With a win in their final game against Chapman Col-eges, Torrey would clinch a tie for second with the losers of the Poly-Bakerfield match. Since the NCAA is likely to choose only two teams from the conference for post-season play, Poly could possibly end up getting beat by Bakerfield and losing their playoff bid to Dominion Hills. Although the chances of that happening would have to be considered minimal at this time since Poly sports a 2-4 overall record and a No. 7 position in the NCAA Division II coaches’ poll, while Dominion Hills is unranked with a 16-6 record.

Against Cal Poly Pomona the Mustangs didn’t play anything like the nation’s seventh ranked team heading for the playoffs. Instead they trailed the Broncos, who have won only three conference games to date, and lost to Bakerfield by 27 points on Thursday night.

Mustang guard Alex Lambertson, who has been relaunched into the starting lineup due to the play of seniors Mike Saia, and Lucas got the Poly offense on track as the two combined for 44 points. Lambert-son hit five of eight shots from the free throw line and grabbed four rebounds.

Dave McCracken came off the bench to score 10 points and grab three boards.

However, it was the Mustangs usually stingy defense that was the deciding factor as the Broncos were held scoreless in the final five minutes of regulation

Lozada had a chance to put the Broncos out of their misery without the resulting overtime, but his shot which came after Poly had held the ball for more than a minute and with only two seconds remaining was blocked by Pomona’s John Jones to send the game into overtime.

Lozada made up for the misfire in the final five minutes as he scored five of Poly’s nine points in the overtime.

Again Lucas led all scorers with 24 points (9 for 8), while playmaker Keith Wheeler scored a collegiate career high of 14 points and forward Mike Wills scored 10.

Further Mustang starter and Riverside transfer
dave McCracken came off the bench to score 10 points and grab four rebounds.

Baseball splits weekend series

The Cal Poly baseball team came away with a perfect split over the weekend as the Mustangs won two, lost two and tied one in three games with UC Santana Barbara and a pair with Cal State-Sonoma.

The Mustangs and Gauchos played 10-10 draw in the weekend opener Friday afternoon in Santa Barbara—the game was called after nine innings due to darkness.

Poly held a 10-4 advantage going into the bottom of the ninth, but pitcher Greg Alexander—in relief for starter Steve Compagno—walked the opening two basners who eventually scored to tie the game.

While the Mustangs pitcher staff struggled through the game (four hurlers saw action), the Poly offense had a field day. The Mustangs had a dozen hits on the nightcap as well.

The Gauchos swept a double-header on Saturday at San Luis Stadium, winning the first 4-3 and the nightcap 9-0.

Steamrolling

Last Thursday in Santa Barbara, the California Coastal Commission decided to impose a moratorium on off-road vehicle use at the Nipomo Dunes recreation area and then sent San Luis Obispo's local coastal plan back to the county for further revision.

The actions of the coastal commissions serve to illustrate how bureaucracy and overlapping governmental agencies can often steamroll the goal of environmental preservation.

The Coastal Commission was created through the passage of a 1974 referendum to oversee the development of land within five miles of the California Coast. On paper, it has broad powers including the ability to override local governments. And yet last Thursday, the commission was told by its staff that it lacked the authority to impose a moratorium on Nipomo Dunes.

The commission's staff also noted that halting only one form of recreation would conflict with the local coastal plan (although the moratorium was the backbone of much of the proposed San Luis Obispo off-road vehicle control program).

What the Coastal Commission did in reality was pass a policy change to the county—the commission's legal adviser said, San Luis Obispo could, under its police powers, impose such a moratorium. But the county, San Luis Obispo officials responded, can't exercise this power because Nipomo Dunes is parkland that belongs to the state.

Meanwhile, the state Parks and Recreation Department, which "police" Nipomo Dunes, opposes the moratorium. During Thursday's testimony, one of the department's representatives, Ross Henry, stated "off-road vehicle use should be allowed when it has historically been permitted."

State agencies are hardly unanimous in opposing the moratorium, however. A representative of the state Fish and Game department, which sections of the South County dunes are among those areas of the state "in greatest need of protection."

The result of all this red tape and governmental bickering is the postponement of a decision on ORV use in the county for probably 90 days—and perhaps longer. At the same time the flood of off road vehicles onto the fragile South County dunes continues unabated.

We believe the Coastal Commission should have implemented San Luis Obispo County's moratorium proposal. By continuing to call for a moratorium, the commission has set the stage for an unnecessary power struggle between San Luis Obispo County and state officials.

We support San Luis Obispo in its efforts to bring about a compromise between the interests of preserving the coastal environment and controlled ORV use (although we wonder about the chances of securing that by exercising ORV use at Nipomo Dunes). And if a temporary moratorium at Nipomo Dunes is the only way to achieve this goal, then so be it.

In Wednesdays paper Greg Matthew wrote "People aren't terrorists".

During the first week of February, the Cal Poly Craft Center held a Renaissance Fair so that all students could submit their arts and crafts for display. After being notified of this fair, I submitted two of my art works—a water color painting and a pencil drawing. Upon completion of the fair, I proceeded to pick up my work. I was surprised to find my pencil drawing had been removed from its display and placed carelessly on a work bench.

Moreover, I was shocked to find that my painting was missing. Neither I nor the Craft Center staff know what happened to the painting. Therefore, I can only assume it has been stolen.

The Craft Center staff has offered to compensate me by paying for materials, but no money could possibly pay for my stolen painting.

With this as a background, my letter is to serve two purposes. First, if the Craft Center is to continue using students art for display, I find it imperative that the staff become more responsible in protecting and handling students priceless arts and crafts. Second, and more importantly, I am writing this letter with hopes that my painting will be returned. For a quick description, it resembles an album cover with the words "Neil Young—Heart of Gold.

The lettering is red, outlined in black, with a gold heart behind the lettering.

Perchance you see the painting and wish to inform me, or if you have it and wish to return it, please contact the Craft Center.

Four days a week, without fail, the students of Cal Poly are presented anti-propaganda by your newspaper. Whether it comes in the form of attacking Mr. Reagan himself, his family, or his administration, there is a constant biased reports and information, not to mention every little uncomfortable decision that must be made in the REAL world, and then to have you engulf YOUR FEAR OF REALITY on us, the students of the United States of America. You attack Mr. Reagan in the office, at home, on the road, and even when the gentleman privately vacations on his ranch.

This freedom to periodically criticize public officials by the press is probably one of the best forms of democracy in action. But, there is a limit. Your paper is not working with the system—your paper is abusing the system! You take the most minute incident and inflate it out of proportion to its original content. Every little flaw in speech or mannerism by Mr. Reagan, and you technically pick him apart!

We read the Mustang Daily to get unbiased reports and information, but not to listen to a bunch of crybabies whining about every little inconceivable decision that must be made in the REAL world, and then to have you engulf YOUR FEAR OF REALITY on us, the students of the United States of America, by constantly attacking his decisions and policies. You're turning what used to be an enjoyable commentary section, into a farce! Hell, might as well put a tent over it!

If your paper is truly unbiased, then we soon will be reading this letter.

In my opinion, the Mustang Daily should support the athletes, students, and faculty members of both CSU San Luis Obispo and Cal Poly, as well as the Mustang Daily staff. The Mustang Daily is one of the few publications at both schools that provide students with an open forum to express their opinions. The staff of the Mustang Daily also works very hard to produce a quality newspaper each week.

However, the Mustang Daily does not receive the support it deserves from the administration, students, and faculty members of both schools. The administration of both schools does not provide the necessary support to the Mustang Daily staff. The students and faculty members of both schools do not provide the necessary support to the Mustang Daily staff.

The Mustang Daily is a publication for students, by students, and it should be treated as such. The administration of both schools should provide the necessary support to the Mustang Daily staff. The students and faculty members of both schools should provide the necessary support to the Mustang Daily staff.
