Baseball field eyed as possible parking lot

By JULIA PRODIS

A resolution to convert the baseball field next to the new residence halls into a parking lot was discussed by the Student Senate at a meeting Wednesday night. If the senators were to approve of this resolution, it would go to President Warren J. Baker and he would consult with his staff. If President Baker gave the nod to this, we'd have 300 to 700 new spaces in the fall," said Executive Dean Doug Gerad.

There's a big conflict here. We want more parking and we want more field space," said Dean of Students Russ Brown. He thinks the tree shades too much of the baseball field next to the new residence hall. It is very important in what the students think about this problem.

"If we lose another field to parking, the remaining sports may become more impacted," said Gerad, who is taking a stand on the senate resolution.

Gerad gave a special report to the student senators, saying that although student enrollment is remaining consistent, the student demand for parking is increasing. He said there are two ways to accommodate this problem: to increase parking spaces or to decrease accessibility.

"If you buy a parking permit, you should have a reasonable chance of finding a parking space, and that can be disputed," said Gerad who reported that for every 200 nonstaff parking permits sold, only one space is available. "The only hooker is that this doesn't take into account daily permits sold. And rainy days are a problem."

A dilemma facing the parking problem is the restrictions defined by the Chancellor's office regarding the masterplan. Currently, the masterplan, which plots out locations of future campus construction, has a few plots designated for parking lots. These areas are being used for other functions, some being a playing field, another, a sheep udder.

Gerad, who would like to see a multi-level parking garage, cited this problem until this parking designated locations on the masterplan are built. This would result in relocation of existing operations.

The chancellor's office feels that we should pave it over because the presence of the tree is taking up this space. What if the tree doesn't shade any more, we'll have to pave it over," said Russ Brown who added that land is very important here since this is an agricultural school.

The parking resolution, authored by Student Senator Tyler Hammond, will be voted on at next Wednesday's meeting in the Union Union. Student input is encouraged during open forum.

Dorm residents protest cutting Trinity Hall tree

By JOHN SAKELSON

In the semi-quiet residence hall of Trinity, a semi-quiet war of protest has begun. At issue is the school's plans to cut and trim the large eucalyptus tree in Trinity's front yard.

"The tree is maybe five stories in height," said Tim Kreuger, Trinity senior. "I want the student body to be aware of what the school wants to trim it down because I don't want to lose half of it at all." Kreuger said the reason the school wants to trim the tree is because the tree shades some of the students. It loses the shade problem with the hall's roof.

I adecidedly like the tree as being an effective way of solving the shade problem," said Kreuger.

Not happy with the solution offered by the school, Kreuger and Trinity Hall resident Kathleen Farlan began to pass a petition among hall residents Wednesday, urging them to sign and mail it to President Baker.

Among those who signed the petition was Tanya Lewis, a computer science freshman, adding, "I think of this dorm as our living room. I don't want the tree interfered with."

As soon as the petition was passed around, the tree was already being cut down. "I don't let this influence my work with the ASI," said Hunt, who has been active in ASI student government for two years.

The Chariperson of the Finance Committee, Laryette Freidanc said that Hunt will obtain from voting on any issues relating to the Rodeo Team or insurance issues. Freidanc said that when Hunt first filed the suit she considered removing Hunt from the committee because of a potential conflict of interest. However, after consultation with ASI attorneys, it was felt that this action would cause more problems and was not necessary.

Hunt, a senior pre-law student, told the group of senators that although he indeed received the suit, he is not familiar with the technicalities of it. "I'm not going to handle the case unless he asks the location of a dorm swimming pool would indicate he is not familiar with the residence halls because no such pools exist, he said.

The man is described as a white male about 6 feet tall and 150 pounds with brown hair, curly hair, green eyes and a faint mustache. He is estimated to be 23 years old.

No explosives found in Wednesday bomb scare

A thorough search of the second floor of the building was conducted and nothing was found. The building was re­opened at 5 p.m. with no incident. Room 220 is the office of Associate Professor of Biology Alan Cooper. He was not available for comment at press time.

No leads in the case, which is being investigated by Sgt. Steven Schroeder of Public Safety.
Barack practice or parking spaces?

Which is more important, 700 students getting to class on time or 25 students practicing baseball? This is the issue currently before the Student Senate. At their weekly meeting Wednesday they discussed a way to convert the baseball field next to the new engineering building into a parking lot. If they pass the resolution and if President Baker approves it, a new parking lot with 500 to 700 spaces would be constructed by Fall Quarter.

Although the field is presently used by the Cal Poly baseball team for practice, it is not being used for their games. The Mustang Daily Editorial Board feels the Senate should pass this resolution to help alleviate the parking shortage on campus.

It's not that we don't like baseball. It's just that the 25 students on the baseball team would be far less inconvenient to practice somewhere else than the 700 students that need to park in order to get to class on time.

A solution to the baseball problem would be to build a new baseball diamond in one of the outer fields on campus and leave the parkingcore.

Presently, 1,7 parking permits are sold by the administration for each non-staff parking space on campus. Students who pay for the parking permits deserve to be able to park.

Seven hundred parking spaces won't solve the whole problem. It's just a step in the right direction.

Next week, the resolution will go to vote. We call on the Student Senate to pass this resolution. We then call on President Baker to approve it.

For the small minority of students on the baseball team, it will be an inconvenience to go to another place to practice. However, for the 15,675 other students, it will help solve a very pressing problem.

Horse Show team wants a little respect, money

Editor

When I had to decide what college I wanted to attend, I picked Cal Poly for one main reason: the School of Agriculture. Then I heard about the Cal Poly Horse Show Team and I could not wait to get involved. Now that I am captain of the team, it has become not only a frustrating experience, but also a rude awakening.

The school does not seem to realize that the Horse Show Team exists. We get absolutely no recognition or support. Yet, the other intercollegiate sports outside of the ag school are fully funded by the school. Our costs per team member are approximately $200 for each person and horse. We have to resort to fund raisers and private sponsors to get a fraction of our expenses paid. We cannot even check out an audio-visual movie camera to tape people as a fund raiser. The worst part is that the ag school doesn't let us use their truck and trailer to go to the intercollegiate shows. We have to desperately search for trailer rides which is extremely expensive.

The English riding team is leading in points. Jill Johnson, Geatine Allen, Stephanie Jones and myself are winning in force against the other schools. I am also leading in points as an individual. The Western team consisting of Kim Hughes, Parcar Vernard, Amy Groves, Amy Gardner, Shelley Johnson and Shelley Stacey are in second place overall against the other schools. We will be in full force this spring.

Although we may not win any money, we will hopefully be able to manage because we will win for the school.

The other teams that are growing in points are fully funded by their schools for everything from gas to entry fees. When other competitors ask us if we are funded by Cal Poly, it is very embarrassing to say no. I think I will transfer to Cal Poly Pomona or Cal State Fresno so I can be appreciated by my school for my winning.

For anyone cares, Cal Poly does have a Horse Show Team and we are winning. I hope the Mustang Daily decides not to lose this letter like the last one that was written about the team, and prints it.

After learning that I am a student, people then always ask me what my major is and when I reply, "Journalism," the next question that always seems to follow is an assum. "Oh, go into publishing." I beg to differ.

The answer I usually give back is a polite, "No, I don't think so..." after which a confused look appears on the face of the person asking. The reason I answer this way is because I want to work in advertising. It is very embarassing to tell some one asking, followed by an incredulous, "What are you talking about?"

Now I'm not trying to pretend that this is a very important question and that it is an affiliation of which I am extremely proud. I have my major because I enjoy what I do and that is what I wish to do.

So, depending on the area of concentration, the journalism major has many opportunities in addition to writing. These include photography for various print newspaper, broadcasting for either radio or television and electronic writing, keeping the public informed about an organization through press releases or speaking for the company, writing advertising copy and doing the actual layout. A journalism background also paves the way for students who are interested in going to law school. These are just some examples of opportunities open to the journalism graduate, just as there are various opportunities available for the liberal studies major, art major, child development major, and so on.

For me, though, I do not wish to become a reporter, or staff writer as we journalists call it. Instead, I want to become a jack-of-all-trades in which my total educational experience here at Cal Poly is combined into my dream job.

This, for me, will be a job in which my writing skills, design skills, dedication, and overall communication skills are utilized and recognized. And, really, isn't this what we all are wishing for?

The invitation just said black tie. Thanks to your friends, you also wore a jacket and pants.
William Randolph’s, further south on Higuera. After a shot of tequila or vodka, it’s on to 1985 Monterey where quassy 21-year-olds can put some food in their bellies and pick up another free shot. At this point, especially enthusiastic birthday morning might begin to lose a little bit of their drive. The adult in them begins to take over and tries to warn them that alcohol abuse is bad for their bodies. But they soon realize that they’re still in their grace period. The warning is put in the back of their minds and it’s on to the next stop.

McClintock’s, provides some relief from the deluge of hard alcohol with a free beer. But the relief is only temporary, for then it’s on to Bull’s, located on Chorro.

With a shot of Wild Turkey combined with Stolichnaya, whatever rationality that’s left is washed away at Bull’s. Joins by the bartender, 21-year-olds cling down the conversation and drown the adult in them. Their priorities are numb and they devote the rest of the night to completing the grueling mile.

So it’s down to the Cigar Factory on Higuera, for more drinks, more dancing, and more elevated fun and entertainment. Here the popular drink is an appropriately named, “Adiós Mother.” It’s a mixture made from five different types of alcohols — rums, vodka, while crema de menthe and blue curacau. After consuming the blue tinted minty drink, it’s adios and on to the next watering hole.

McClintock’s, further south on Higuera, contributes to the cause by offering another free shot. This is where the men are separated from the boys; the women from the girls, as this is where 21-year-olds take full advantage of their grace period. After they have done down a Flaming Gorilla Tik, a combination of Kahua, 151 rum and Wild Turkey hit on fire, they start slurring their words, pretending to walk imaginary lines and before they get to the next bar, they can’t even say their full names without stuttering—“Ceremonies of adulthood.”

Tortilla Flats, just south of McClintock’s on Nipomo, offers somewhat of a sanctuary for these mature, responsible individuals. It has a dance floor, but more importantly, it has several chairs and tables ideal for passing out in, on or around. If miles are fortunate enough to make it this far, it’s home free from here. But not until they’ve had a Grizzly Bear. Checking that down is a feat in itself.

For the hard-core partiers there is one stop left on the mile — Spike’s. The beer bar on Higuera features 40 imports from around the world. It’s the last chance for 21-year-olds to take advantage of their grace period, they realize that tomorrow means the end of their adult sincerity, honesty and responsibility, they balance themselves against the bathroom sink, look in the mirror, clear their throats and say, “I’ll never drink another drop of alcohol as long as I live.”

Cal Poly stopped at plate

Pitcher shows Poly why he’s an All-American

By DAN RUTHEMEYER
Staff Writer

Scoring five runs in the first two innings, the Pepperdine University baseball team had all it needed Wednesday to defeat Cal Poly, 7-2.

With a pre-season All-American on the mound for Pepperdine, the Mustangs were held to a scant eight scattered hits.

Cal Poly got on the board early when left fielder Jason Maas hit a solo home run in the top half of the first inning to stake pitcher Rob Cramer to a slim advantage.

Cramer was given a rude welcome in the bottom of the first as Pepperdine put together several hits to push across four runs and take the lead.

After giving up another run in the second, Cramer settled down to pitch several good innings for the Mustangs.

Cal Poly’s only other run came in the sixth inning when second baseman Rob Lambert doubled and designated hitter Bob Wright singled him home.

Wright collected three hits on the afternoon while Maas added a single to his solo home run to account for two.

The only other time the Mustangs threatened to score came with two outs in the eighth inning. With the bases loaded, right fielder Monty Waltz grounded out to end the inning.

Each of the Pepperdine starters had at least one hit in the win. Although Pepperdine out-hit the Mustangs, 10 of 12 were singles.

The loss, which was the Mustangs’ third in a row, drops their record to 6-6.

Pepperdine will bring their national ranking of 12th in Division 1 to San Luis Obispo Saturday when they play a noon double-header with Cal Poly.
Women shoot at school record
Gymnasts at home for record bid

The women's gymnastics team has more on its mind than just winning its home meet Friday night. It's planning to set a school record.
Cal Poly has beaten both the teams entered in the meet and the team's head coach says breaking the school record set two years ago is the goal.
If the Mustangs don't break the record in the Friday meet, 7:30 p.m., the Poly head coach said they will shoot for the record in the last two meets.
"Each person has to do their job," said Tim Rivera. "Not one person can do it."
The women have already broken two school records — bars and vault — but Rivera said the overall school the big one the team wants to break.

Paige Allan does a handspring full twist. Allan and teammates are home tonight.

Jana Lehman has been the most consistent top scorer during the season. She is rated No. 7 in the all-around in the region.
Four will compete in the all-around for Poly: Lehman, Paige Allan, Lisa McAllister and Kristy Brodeur.

The rest of the team is vault, Tracy Garn TIME SPACE MATTER ENERGY EXISTENCE
