Summit talks are called ‘encouraging’ by Poly professor

By Jennifer Kildee

Staff writer

Although the recent Geneva summit between Presidents Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev did not produce an agreement on how to limit nuclear arsenals, a Cal Poly disarmament expert is still encouraged.

"The fact that they have met eyeball-to-eyeball is encouraging because it starts the dialogue and allows them to establish some kind of personal rapport," said David Hafemeister. "The fact that they both promised to work for deep cuts is also encouraging, but I hope the promises they made are not so grandiose that nothing is accomplished," he said.

A physics professor, Hafemeister was Sen. John Glenn's science adviser from 1973 to 1977. In the next two years he worked as a special assistant and then a consultant to the undersecretary of state.

The two superpower leaders did reach accord on five agreements concerning such issues as cultural exchanges, air safety in the North Pacific, U.S. and Soviet cooperation in -v- technology. Yet Secretary of State George Schultz said at a news conference the summit "has not produced anything" to curb the nuclear arms race.

"In terms of the buying of systems and accords and the deployment of systems, that's correct," Hafemeister said.

"They were both in a terrible position of one 'I'm not going to go, and that's it,'" he said.

Hafemeister said some of the past summits were more successful than others in terms of curbing the arms race. "In one year and again in 1987, the 1961 summit between President John Kennedy and Soviet leader Nikita Krushchev apparently did not work out because Krushchev thought that Kennedy was a "soft" leader and expected to meet more often because of that. The 1967 summit between LBJ (President Lyndon B. Johnson) and (Soviet Premier Aleksei) Kosygin started the SALT I process," he said.

"For those reasons we hope the six-year time lapse between this summit and the last one is a signal that they should be meeting more often because of the seriousness coming from both sides. Both leaders will meet again next year and again in 1987.

What will you be thankful for this Thanksgiving Day?

By Kevin and Kevin

Scream loud enough and they'll hear you. Too often, students don't scream loud enough about the condition of the campus parking lot. Public Safety officials seem to regard the phone call made to them several weeks ago in regard to the problem. And why did it take so long to be reported? The library assistant, who finally did report it, said four students had complained to her but apparently none of these students reported the incident to Public Safety or if they did, they were promptly ignored. The escort service, whose job it is to escort students safely to the parking lot and surrounding campus areas, did not notice or care about the lights. And yes, I too grumbled about the lights to myself and friends but made no effort to report it to authorities.

I wonder who thinks the lights are not a problem hasn't spent five minutes waiting for the lights to stay on long enough so they could get the key in the card reader. I began my investigation Thursday. By that evening a formal complaint had been filed by the Mustang Daily and the electrical shop at Planet Operations had drafted up its work order to fix the boom lights. What service? What response? Of course not everyone has the power of the press.

I don't want to talk about lights. (I know, too late.) I don't believe they pose a major security hazard. But I do think the lack of attention given them for the three months that they've been broken, warrants one to question whether students, faculty, and most disappointing, campus security and maintenance officials really care about the condition of the campus parking lot.

Why not report that broken vending machine that eats your money? Why not inquire about the teacher who cancels class every other week? Why not complain about insufficient parking?
Various trips planned for upcoming holidays

By Katie Britain

Although most students are going home for the holidays, many are taking advantage of the breaks during Thanksgiving and Christmas for well-deserved vacations away from the wear and tear of school life.

"The majority of people go home to various places across the United States," said Linda Field, a travel agent at Car­dillo-Gulliver's Travel on campus. "But a lot of people are also requesting trips to warm areas, such as Hawaii or Mexico."

Field said the farthest someone has requested to travel for the Christmas break was to Japan, Saudi Arabia, to visit family members. She said there are also many skiing trips planned to popular spots such as Utah, Colo­rado and Lake Tahoe, said Field.

Field said the best advice for students taking trips is to plan early.

"Plan as far in advance as possible," said Field. "Whenever possible,"

For Thanksgiving break the Outings Center has planned a cross-country ski trip at Grass Valley.

Kudos to the following Cal Poly students and department: □ Speech and Debate — this Cal Poly team placed fourth in a recent intercollegiate debate tournament. Hosted by California State University, Northridge, the tournament included schools from California, Colorado, Ohio and Washington. Political science junior Kit Games and history sophomore Loreen Barr placed fourth in the novice division of their first debate competition. The pair won three of their six preliminary debates before losing to a team from CSU Sacramento in their quarterfinal round.

Speech communication junior Tim Busto and math senior Junior Solimeno placed fifth in the championship division of debate. Each won four of their six preliminary debates and lost to a team from the University of Nevada, Reno, in their octafinal round.

The championship division team of speech communication senior Mark Crums and speech communication junior Barbara Wimmer also placed fifth in their division. They won five of their six preliminary debates before losing on a split decision to a team from Southern Utah State College.

Also attending the tournament were Laura Jensen, Chris Marx, Alan Razee and Debbie Dougherty.

Business — this Cal Poly school has enlarged its microcomputer facilities thanks to a gift from the Hewlett-Packard Co.

The grant of more than $60,000 worth of equipment doubled the size of the microcomputer facilities in the School of Business.

The grant included 15 HP-100 microcomputers, seven Thinkjet printers, a Laserjet printer, a pioneer and other accessories.

Students use the lab for senior projects, consolidated financial statements, master budgets, linear programming, statistical forecasting, business correspondence and class assignments.

Poly wins nationals and team is all Dunn

By Andy Frokjer

On the strength of six all-American performances, the women’s cross country team won its fourth consecutive NCAA Division II title Saturday.

The Mustangs’ score of 30 points was the second lowest in NCAA championship history. Cal State Northridge finished a distant second with 83 points and Indiana University of Pennsylvania (IUP) was third with 89.

“I expected the race to be a ten to 15 point battle with us on the positive side,” said Coach Lance Harter. “I thought if one person has a problem we’re going to be in trouble.”

Trouble did come for two of the Mustang runners prior to the race, as the trip to Pennsylvania caused complications in Jennifer Dunn’s case of poison oak, making it nearly impossible for her to sleep the two nights prior to the meet. Then, junior Katy Manning sprained her ankle while warming up before the race.

The Mustangs quickly shook off an IUP threat by the mile and a half mark and finished with a mere 29-second gap between their first and fifth runner.

“Jenny has the unique ability to pull it all together during a pinnacle competition,” said Harter.

Lori Lopez took the lead away from an IUP runner early on, but paid the price later in the race and held on valiantly to finish seventh in 18:22. Teammate Lesley White was right behind her in 18:23 to hold on to eighth place.

Ignoring her tender ankle, Manning regained her early season form and confidence to place 11th in 18:33. Sophomore Noreen DeBetiencourt finished one second later to grab 12th in 18:34 to round out the Mustang scoring. Jill Ellingson captured all-American honors for the second year in a row, placing 15th in 18:37, while freshman Sherri Minkler ended a tremendous season by finishing 36th in 19:09.

Griffiths leads Poly’s pack

By Andy Frokjer

Led by an all-American performance by senior Brent Griffiths, the men’s cross country team finished seventh at the NCAA Division II championships Saturday.

Griffiths, running his last cross country race in a Cal Poly uniform, placed 21st overall in 32:43, the 16th American to cross the finish line.

“I’ve never seen a happier guy in my life than Brent after the race,” said Coach Tom Henderson.

The Mustangs placed seventh in the 17 team field with a score of 214 points. South Dakota State upset favored Edinboro State to win the meet with a score of 60. Edinboro took second (108) with Keene State in third (134) and Southern Connecticut in fourth (136).

“Every team had somebody falter except South Dakota, Keene State and Southern Connecticut,” said Henderson. “If one guy falers, you add 60 or 70 points to your score.”

The Mustangs, who finished matched their number-seven ranking going into the meet, had a tough time on the brutal Mountain Manor Golf Course in East Stroudsburg, Pa. After a decent start, the Mustangs got mired in the middle of the pack and had a difficult time making up ground on the front runners through the hilly fourth and fifth miles.

“Nobody was going to move up after three miles,” said Griffiths.

Sophomore Michael Miner capped off the season with a stellar performance, placing 33rd in 33:06, while senior Jerry Hernandez took 60th place in 33:31. Senior Ken Ellingboe, a late season replacement for the injured Bruce Storms, proved to be a valuable addition to the team. Ellingboe, who ran at the national meet in 1983, was the Mustangs’ fourth scorer, placing 72 in 34:06.

He was followed directly by freshman Jim Chaney, who took 73rd (34:08). Jim McCarthy and Joe Rubio rounded out the Mustang squad placing 83rd (34:16) and 117th (35:33).
