Grrrrrrr!

This photo was snapped by Mustang Daily photographer Daryl Shoptaugh. Big deal, right? Well, it is! The photo won first place in the sports category of a professional tri-state competition.

"It's a great way to cap my photographic work while I've been at school," he said.

Daryl has taken consistently brilliant photos, but has received little recognition. His time, at long last, has come.

The photo is of lifeguard Todd Britton getting ready for an Avila Beach lifeguard competition in August.

Daryl shot it with a 300mm lens, Canon F-1 body, Tri-X 400 ASA film, 1000/sec. at f4.

FULLERTON (AP) — The congressional Iran-Contra report paints a picture of a Reagan administration at odds with the law and the Constitution, but minority Republicans dismissed it Tuesday as a partisan indictment of the president that ignores foreign policy questions raised by the affair.

The report says President Reagan flirted with constitutional crisis by creating a White House atmosphere that encouraged evasion of legal requirements and flouting of proper procedures for reaching foreign policy goals.

It also says the administration violated the Constitution by going to third countries to solicit donations for Nicaragua's Contra rebels at a time when Congress barred even indirect military aid to them.

And it is sharply critical of Attorney General Edwin Meese III, questioning why he delayed launching a criminal investigation of the affair when it became public a year ago.

The voluminous document, reviewing in detail the story of how administration officials sold arms to Iran in hopes of freeing Americans held hostage in Lebanon, then diverted some $4 million of the profits to the Contras, is due to be released Wednesday.

But glimpses of its findings were gleaned Tuesday from a report of minority Republicans on the House and Senate investigating panels and from committee sources.

"Clearly, what went on here was not what we expected," Rep. Edward close, D-Cali., said in a newspaper interview.

"My quarrel is with the Reagan administration. He is responsible for this mess."

Ligation and paper work are costly. Auto insurance is no exception. The California insurance industry, however, is experiencing a significant rise in costs. This increase is being passed on to the consumer in the form of higher premiums. The reasons for this increase are numerous and complex, but the result is clear: lower premiums will be unavailable to many drivers.

One of the factors contributing to the increase in premiums is the rise in claims. As the number of claims increases, the cost of claims also increases. This is because the cost of claims is not constant; it varies from year to year. In some years, the cost of claims may be lower than in other years. This means that the cost of claims is not fixed, but it is a variable that can be affected by changes in the economy.

Another factor contributing to the increase in premiums is the rise in the cost of medical care. As medical care becomes more expensive, the cost of claims also increases. This is because the cost of medical care is not fixed, but it is a variable that can be affected by changes in the economy.

In summary, the increase in premiums is a result of the rise in claims and the rise in the cost of medical care. The result is that lower premiums will be unavailable to many drivers. The only way to avoid this is to get insured now or break the bank later.

Six bullets lodged in his head doesn't mean that he's dead

SANTA ROSA (AP) — A man who was shot six times in the head as he slept in his home has been released from the hospital—the six .22-caliber bullets still lodged in his skull.

"He has the entry wounds, of course, but aside from those and a stiff neck, he's all right," said Cary.

Sexton, 40, left Santa Rosa Memorial Hospital on Monday and went home.

A man who responded to a knock on Sexton's door refused to answer questions.

"We aren't supposed to talk to anyone," he said, slamming the door.

Authorities said Sexton was shot six times late Saturday. His former roommate, Daniel Frost, 32, was shot and wounded by a sheriff's sergeant after a lengthy pursuit.

Frost, who was hit in the stomach by a shotgun blast, underwent surgery at Palm Drive Hospital in Sebastopol and was listed in stable condition late Monday.

Frost was shot when he walked toward deputies and refused to order to put down the handgun he was holding, according to deputies.

Sexton was initially listed in critical condition, but X-rays showed that none of the six bullets penetrated the skull. None was life-threatening or even disabling, said Cary.

"They're all still there, all in the right side that was exposed as he slept," the physician said.

Smokeless Mr. Potato Head gives pipe to surgeon general

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mr. Potato Head, 35, quit smoking Tuesday. He gave his pipe to Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and vowed never to touch it again.

"He started to smoke the day he was born," said Koop. "Not only is it dangerous to his health, it gives the message to kids around the country that smoking is not a bad thing to do."

So pleased was Koop with Head's decision that he proclaimed the giant potato the official "spokespud" for this year's Great American Smokeout, the American Cancer Society drive to get millions of Americans to give up smoking, as least for the day, on Thursday.

About 40 million Mr. Potato Heads have been sold since the Playskool toy was introduced 35 years ago, complete with stick-on eyes, ears, a nose, a mouth -- and a pipe.

Now that he has kicked the habit, Playskool officials are thinking about reshaping the mouth -- which now looks a lot like a mustache -- into a smile for the estimated 1 million toys manufactured each year.

First lady Nancy Reagan sent "heartiest congratulations" to Head.

"By kicking the habit, Mr. Potato Head will not only improve his health, but will serve as a good example to young people who need to learn the importance of maintaining good health habits," Mrs. Reagan said in a message read by Koop.

Playskool officials haven't determined whether or not they will include a new piece of paraphernalia to replace the pipe.

U.S., Soviets both confident missile treaty will be ready

GENEVA (AP) — Both sides appeared confident Tuesday that a treaty scrapping intermediate-range nuclear weapons will be ready for President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to sign in Washington next month.

Kremlin negotiator Yuli Vorontsov said in a Soviet television interview that work on the 120-page document was in the final stage and should be done by Nov. 23.

Vorontsov is first deputy foreign minister and leads the Moscow delegation to the U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva. He was interviewed shortly before meeting with chief American delegate Max Kampelman at the U.S. mission, in what U.S. sources said would be the last session between the two chief negotiators.

Most of Tuesday was taken up by two meetings between Vorontsov and Michael Armacost, U.S. assistant secretary of state, on what were described as "regional issues."

The main topic was Afghanistan, where an estimated 115,000 Soviet soldiers are helping the communist regime fight a Muslim insurgency.

Vorontsov said in the television interview that snags developed in the arms control talks when the Americans raised what he called "artificial issues" about verification provisions to be included in the treaty.

He added, however: "We think we shall be able to persuade the American side to remove these artificial issues and that the treaty will be prepared for signing in time."

Reagan and Gorbachev are scheduled to meet in Washington on Dec. 7.
Decathlon to study health

By Kristie Kuechler
Staff Writer

Students will be able to evaluate their physical, emotional, social, spiritual and intellectual health Thursday at the Wellness Decathlon.

The decathlon will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the University Union Plaza.

Some of the events within the decathlon that will be set up are cardiac risk assessment, blood pressure screening, dental fitness, sexuality awareness and a flexibility and strength testing booth. A booth will be set up giving out non-alcoholic daiquiris to promote alcohol awareness.

"Everything is free to the whole community, anyone can come," said Cheri Eplin, a member of the sexuality team.

"It's going to be a lot of fun with a bunch of fun games to play," said Tucker, the Wellness Decathlon.

The finish line is staffed by Health Center professionals who will provide follow-up information for decathlon competitors.

The Health Center, peer health educators, American Fitness and Business Club, Student Health Advisory Committee, Rec Sports and the wellness project are all sponsors of the Wellness Decathlon.

During the decathlon the wellness team will feature a booth with activities in each of the five realms of fitness. The team will be available for further counseling to follow up the wellness physical for students who want to talk about the different realms of fitness in their lives. To do this Cal Poly students can make a free appointment at the Health Center.

The lifestyle wellness team is a group of peer health educators who work in conjunction with the Health Center as a resource for the students of Cal Poly. This team was established to promote the general health and wellness of Cal Poly students.

The team sets wellness as a balance of the physical, spiritual, unselfish, social and emotional aspects of life. The lifestyle wellness team was established to help meet these needs. Through workshops in the dorms, for the Greek system and for various classes on campus, the wellness educators address the five aspects of wellness.

Along with workshops, the wellness team performs wellness educational health screenings. A nurse practitioner measures wellness through physical things as blood pressure, pulse, height, weight and vision. The student and the peer health educator then have an opportunity to discuss the student's health risk.

"The student is given a wellness worksheet that taps into the five areas of wellness so that the student can see his or her strengths and weaknesses in the five realms of wellness in their lives," said Sally Spicker, a member of the wellness team.

In the next few weeks, the team will be offering personal stress counseling that can be used by the students to help balance some of the various areas of wellness in their lives. Stress can trust the growth of students in the five areas of wellness, it manifests itself in causing individuals "anewness" which can lead to physical illness.

Getting a massage in class helps students ease stress

Learning to relax not only one's own stress but that of another person's is the idea behind a massage class offered through Rec Sports.

The course has been offered for the past two years and its popularity has grown since its inception.

Jim Tucker, a senior physical education/physical therapy major, teaches one of the two courses offered this quarter. He said he looks at the class as a "place for people to come to relax, calm their minds and relieve stress."

Tucker, who has taught the class for about a year, breaks his class into two sections. The first half focuses on the individual person and awareness of the body.

Tucker stressed the importance of the massager to be in touch with their own stress because "if you cannot be relaxed yourself, there's no way you can relax another person."

The second half of the class teaches the basic techniques, physical as well as psychological, involved in giving a successful massage.

Tucker said one problem in teaching a course to strangers is seeing a person as their own stress but that of another person's is the idea behind a massage class offered through Rec Sports.

Columnist discusses humor and the presidential race

By Dawn Jackson
Asst. Managing Editor

There could be another candidate in the 1988 presidential race.
It was unanimous among the 500 journalists at a recent Chicago convention: "Art Buchwald is ’88." He was compared to Republican front-runner George Bush.

"George Bush looks like everyone’s first husband," said one of his supporters on stage. "He does Art." And he was credited with a few famous lines.

"It was Art who told Richard Nixon to use the line ‘I am not a crook.'" Nixon used it and it worked.

"He told Jessica Hahn to say ‘I am not a bimbo.'" Art who, during the Iran-Contra hearings, told Oliver North’s counsel to say ‘I am not a posted place.'

"When Art comes up with a line, he makes it work," said another fan.

Buchwald was the last to speak.

"When you’re such a long-standing Washington sex symbol you have to expect this," he said with his Yoders accent and slight limp.

Sporting a red “power” tie and a dark suit, Buchwald looked the part.

He discussed issues of the day.

"In the Iran-Contra affair, we were found to be selling arms to moderate Iranians.

"I think a moderate Iranian is one who has run out of ammunition." Later, in a private interview, he confirmed suspicions that Robert Bork and Douglas Ginsburg could never have made it to the Supreme Court because of their beards.

"Well, they had a problem with Bork because they didn’t know whether he was going to grow out or not. Ginsburg’s beard was a little better but it had a lot of pit in it.

All in a day’s work for one of the most successful humor (and sometimes, politically satirical) columnists in the country.

Buchwald was raised last week to benefit a legal defense fund for journalists. And later, in an impromptu dinner, he ordered a round of cheesecake and spoke seriously about his more than 50 years in the journalism profession.

Glancing at the menu, he said the worst thing about cheesecake. "It’s lonely out there. Have you ever seen ‘Death of a Salesman’? That’s me.’" the students find it difficult to relax around an unfamiliar face," said Tucker.
MASSAGE

Communication between both the massager and the massage is crucial to realizing the needs of the person being massaged. Tucker says his students enjoy the course because it is a "break between school and stress." He said he tries to take a casual approach to massage because he has found many people to have a hang-up with the idea another person controlling their stress.

Tucker received his massage teacher certification in 1985 at the Swedish Wellspring School of Massage in San Luis Obispo. He is also trained in sports massage, a variety of massage focusing primarily on relieving stress in athletes.

John Garrigues, a senior industrial technology major and one of Tucker's past students, said he took the class because "I've always enjoyed giving and getting backrubs and I wanted to learn more about it." He said the most important thing he learned was to relax and how to relax other people.

"Massage is one of the best ways to relieve stress," said Garrigues. "When you're giving or receiving a massage, you forget about everything else."

There were about 10 people in his class. "We get to know each other really well after rubbing oil on each other's bodies." Cynthia McCabe teaches the Tuesday night class. She has taught the course at Cal Poly for two years and plans to continue teaching. McCabe received her certification to become a massage instructor at the Palo Alto School of Professional Body Work in 1981.

McCabe said her interest in massage grew out of her love of dancing. She became "interested in the way the body held its tension."

by a computer to produce reports and charts to provide people involved with an outline of trouble areas. Later, a follow-up meeting will evaluate how successful the analysis and program have been.

Trouble-ridden the Oasis project required a lot of-work from the people involved. "It took a lot of hours of input. Some people took about 4 1/2 hours to complete the rating booklet," said Wally McLaughlin as project co-director.

Ratings of the Oasis project were done in October. Of 140 people involved in the evaluation process, 120 returned the completed ratings booklet. "That was the highest response rate the Sage company ever had," said Mark. After all the data was gathered, 559 possible failure items were identified.

The major problems came from three categories: 1) problems related to inadequate preparation of the institution for the Oasis project, 2) shortcomings in system implementation and 3) problems related to program planning and management.

"These were the most important problems, and 80 percent of people's concerns addressed only those," said Mark.

To correct or avoid these major pitfalls to the Oasis project, members of a seven-automobile committee will provide recommendations and "specific offices can solve problems within their own operations," Mark said.

Detailed analysis of potential problems read like a sideways tree. The main, generic problem is listed at the left, and the many smaller causes branch off to the right. One problem was listed as inadequate Oasis project planning.

The next branch shows "problems related to the implementation plan and schedule development." This is followed by "inadequate planning for the Oasis conversion." Inadequate planning is due to "insufficient capabilities of the software programs to meet the specific needs of Cal Poly." Failure to meet Cal Poly needs could be caused by a failure to provide interfacing capability with outside departments such as payroll, housing, student records, admissions, etc.

Finally, this problem could be caused by either "insufficient programming resources under the current time constraints," or the "lack of university commitment to department resources."

Conference championship...check. Mustangs cross-country team attempts to win sixth straight NCAA championship.

The Lady Mustangs once again are favored to win the national meet, held Saturday in Evansville, Ind. The Lady Mustangs would complete another triple crown, since they won their eighth straight California Collegiate Athletic Association title and have had the No. 1 ranking in the nation all season.

Also defending a national title is all-American Glades Prier.

The team effort will be bolstered by three other national-meet veterans. Kris Katarhagen, a sixth-year regional champ, was 39th and Noreen Dellecicent was 13th in 1986.

Glades always is in the top three at level of the competition, and her performance is excellent," said head coach Lance Hutter.
