Housing, traffic, growth top SLO’s mayoral race agenda

By Barbara Couria

Mayoral candidates Allen K. Settle and incumbent Ron Dunin will be sitting at opposite ends of the scale this Nov. 6 when San Luis Obispo voters enter the voting booths.

Voters will weigh the issues of housing, traffic, growth and water to tip the scales in favor of one of the candidates.

"Cal Poly projects an increase of 400 students next year," Dunin said. "That will be no room for natural growth."

Dunin said the answer to this is to build more housing that would be acceptable and affordable from the standpoint of the student.

Dunin also strongly supports a Greek Row. He'd like to begin a local Greek Alumni Committee to address itself strictly to establishing a Greek Row.

"The enthusiasm of the students... to begin a Greek Row would sort of dissipate because students would graduate," Dunin said. "If we have a body like that, there will be a continuity."

Settle, a Cal Poly political science professor, also supports plans for a Greek Row whether it be at the airport, as proposed, or not.

"Under no circumstances, however, am I planning to pressure those who already have a house in the city to move out there," said Settle. "That's simply unfair."

Settle also approves of less extensive group housing such as married-student housing and dorms for freshmen, handicapped housing and housing for visiting faculty.

Traffic congestion also falls in the Settle category. Settle classified traffic circulation into three categories.

First, he said, modified traffic plan is needed to permit traffic to run smoothly through downtown.

Second, the street system should be modified to discourage trucks from going through residential neighborhoods.

And lastly, the flow of traffic from such streets as Santa Rosa and Broad should be dispersed so it doesn't flow through the residential neighborhoods.

Dunin, however, would like to see carpools encouraged, issuing free parking stickers as an incentive.

Traffic aside, the severity of the city's water crisis may cast the deciding vote.

Beyond conservation, Settle would push for "a broad-based involvement that doesn't favor the development side of the equation."

"My opponent has been too indifferent to the crisis of water until it's been so late we've had to impose a building moratorium," Settle said. "And even then it hasn't been a complete moratorium."

Voting booths. Will be sitting at opposite ends of the scale this Nov. 6 when San Luis Obispo voters enter the voting booths.

The 24-hour class, usually taught in five sessions, teaches women how to defend themselves against an assailant.

Stacey Rolin, a home economics junior and graduate of the class, said she did not realize the large part emotional therapy plays in a Model Mugging class.

"A lot of time is spent in class talking and sharing experiences," she said. "I got to know the girls in my class really well."

Another graduate, Kathy Lamoree, said she took the classes because fear was getting in the way of living her life to the fullest.

"The class has given me empowerment within myself and the courage to work with fear," she said.

Jessica Donovan, a San Luis High student, said she heard about the program through school.

"The class has given me an understanding about my capabilities," she said. "I never knew I had so much strength and power."

The 15 graduating females, ranging from teen-agers to senior citizens, were met one-on-one by a trained male martial artist who wore customized armor so the woman could use full force while defending themselves against the "attacker."

The graduates-to-be were attacked from the front, back and while lying down.

Those on the sidelines, many of whom were also graduates of the program, were very supportive. The audience and classmates shouted and clapped during the attack. Others cried, possibly recalling painful experiences of their own.

Mary and Paul Speidell, licensed family therapists in the city and graduates of the program, spoke to the audience before the class began.

"The situations here are set to be realistic," Mary Speidell said. "This is why emotional feelings usually come up."

"Many Model Mugging clients have been molested, raped or assaulted," she added. "Women come in feeling scared and denying their own feelings."

She said that when these women graduate they are different.

"The women become even stronger and more positive people," she said.

Paul Speidell said that statistically one out of every three women will experience some attack and that a rape occurs every minute in the United States.

"The tendency," he said, "is for people to think that it won't happen to them or their spouse."

He explained that many women who have taken the course are telling their personal stories for the first time. The emotions felt in class often bring back painful memories.

"There is lots of pain, anger and sadness at times," he said. "I am looking forward to a society when women don't have to fear assault by anyone."

Mary Tesoro, a director of Model Mugging of San Luis Obispo, said that out of the 6,000 Model Mugging graduates, 42 have been physically attacked after taking the class.

"Approximately 12 of those stopped," See MUGGING, page 6

About 60 friends and family cheered on the sidelines at the Martial Arts Academy Sunday afternoon as their female loved ones were physically and verbally assaulted by male attackers.

Settle said he favors expansion of the Salinas Dam in San Miguel at the northern tip of the county, a series of groundwater wells to be kept on line as a backup reserve and live-stream diversion during the winter months.

He does not advocate trucking in water from other areas.

Dunin agreed the water situation is serious, but not an emergency.

"With conservation and the groundwater program, we will prevent the emergency," Dunin said.

Groundwater will supply approximately 4,000 acre-feet. This will account for half the city's water supply, Dunin said. The other 50 percent should be supplied by yearly rainfall.

Like Settle, Dunin also supports diverting streams and expanding the Salinas Dam as backup plans. Dunin would also like to use desalinization and recycled water for landscaping.

"I think we should never again be held hostage to such bad planning so far as the water supply is concerned," Dunin said.

Men impress at Humboldt invite

By Rob Lorenz

On a hilly course at Humboldt State University, Jim Sorensen of Cal Poly's cross country team was looking to leave Dennis Pfeifer of Humboldt State in the dust. But Pfeifer was looking to do the same.

So the two proceeded to kick toward the finish line. From one mile out.

Sorenson and Pfeifer finished in identical times, but Sorensen got the win by out-leaning Pfeifer at the tape. After running a full 10-kilometer course, Sorensen got the win, and the course record of 31:43, by a split-second.

The win was a forecast of things to come for the Mustangs on Saturday. Five Cal Poly runners finished in the top 10 on the course that will host the Western Regionals in November.

In cross country scoring, a team's score is determined by the top five finishers from each team. With Cal Poly's top five runners placing in the top 10, the Mustangs easily won the team title with a total of 27 points.

Coach Tom Henderson said the most important aspect of the race was that the Mustangs ran effectively as a team. He said running as a team will be the single most important factor in the success of the season.

Tim Campbell took third place for the Mustangs, coming in less than a minute behind Sorensen and Pfeifer. Steve Neubaum and Scott Peterson took sixth and seventh place for the Mustangs, and Mike Parrot rounded out the scoring for Cal Poly by coming in 10th.

Freshman Scott Hempel also had an impressive showing for the Mustangs, taking 12th in a time of 32:58.

On an entirely different course in an entirely different part of the state, Hempel's twin brother Matt was busy leading the Mustang's "B" squad to a win at Westmont College on an 8,000-meter course.

The "B" team won the meet over Point Loma, Westmont College and Southern California College with a point total of 34.

Gridders suffer season's 1st loss

By Rob Lorenz

About a year ago, Cal Poly and Angelo State staged a low-scoring, defensive struggle at Mustang Stadium that ended in a 15-8 Mustang victory.

On Saturday the Mustang football squad traveled to San Angelo Texas to face Angelo State again, but this time the results were entirely different.

Offense was the order of the day as the two teams combined for a total of 65 points, with Angelo State getting the better end of the deal with a 45-20 victory over the Mustangs.

Angelo State took the game out of reach with a second-quarter 21-point outburst, and never looked back. The Rams took a 35-13 lead into halftime and coasted to the win, adding to their point total with a touchdown in the third quarter and a field goal in the fourth. Cal Poly, meanwhile, could only muster a single touchdown in the second half on a 12-yard pass.
