English senior Paul Knoch slept in Mission Plaza on Saturday to learn about homelessness.

A senior project on the streets

By Elayne S. Take moto Staff Writer

Cal Poly English senior Paul Knoch grew up in a healthy, middle-class home in Orange County. He can remember working nights to pay for the expenses of living on his own. He is perhaps the last person one would expect to see living on the streets.

Unlike the 1,600 people that the county homeless services coordinator estimates were homeless or marginally homeless in 1990, Knoch spent this weekend being “homeless” as part of a senior project experiment.

Armed with $2, a pack of cigarettes, a sleeping bag and a notepad, he took to the streets. Knoch slept and ate in a shelter run by the Economic Opportunity Commission on Friday, and laid his bedroll under a picnic table in the Mission Plaza Saturday night.

“This project isn’t going to end homelessness in San Luis Obispo,” he said. “What I’m hoping it will do is let people know the severity of the situation and dispel some myths.”

Many basic misconceptions were quickly “tossed out the window” on his first day out, Knoch said. “I’ve found that, for the most part, the homeless are nice people,” he said. “They’re not going to hurt you, chase you away.”

Poly student arrested on campus

Civil engineering senior taken out of class by Public Safety

By Matthew Hoy Staff Writer

Campus police pulled a 31-year-old Cal Poly student out of class Thursday and arrested him on outstanding warrants from the Monterey Bay Area.

Eric Uhrenholt, a civil engineering senior, was wanted on two Contra Costa County warrants charging him with driving under the influence and driving with a suspended license.

Uhrenholt stepped outside, identified himself and was placed under arrest by two officers.

Traditionally, Schroeder said, Public Safety arrests suspects at their residences if they live on campus. If not, police in the jurisdiction where the suspect lives are alerted.

Schroeder said Public Safety arrested Uhrenholt at his biology class because there was no local residence listing for him.

Uhrenholt is currently being held at the San Luis Obispo County Jail awaiting transport to Contra Costa County.

New schedule mishap: It’s ‘two,’ not ‘one’

By Elayne S. Take moto Staff Writer

Mustang Daily staff report

Continuing students take note: There is a mistake in the newly-published spring schedules.

The schedules, which list available classes for the upcoming spring 1993 quarter, show the wrong "term code" for accessing CAPTURE, university officials said Monday.

The action code "7" and the year code "93," listed under "CAPTURE instructions" on page six, are correct. But the "term code" is not. "(It) should say 'two' instead of 'one,'" said Romi Ige of El Corral Bookstore’s school supply department.

The "two" represents the second quarter of the calendar year.

Therefore, the correct action code for spring registration is "7-9-3-2-#."
Israel answers U.N. demand, repatriates 100 deportees

Jerusalem, Israel
Israel will repatriate 100 of the deported Palestinians from Lebanon immediately and return the remainder within a year, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Monday.

The deportations had prompted the United Nations to demand the exile's immediate return and endangered the resumption of Middle East peace talks. Rabin said the arrangement was reached after discussions with the United States and that the Clinton administration worked to shield Israel from international sanctions and to work to renew the Middle East peace talks.

"It is a package deal," he told a news conference, adding that it would apply whether or not the deported Palestinians accepted Israel's offer.

The compromise was approved unaniously at a special Cabinet meeting Monday night.

Israel had repeatedly vowed that it would not repatriate the deportees, and Rabin acknowledged Monday night that the decisions were "none too easy, and I won't try to present them as easy."

He said in a live broadcast, "we are presently in a confrontation in the international arena and it was very important to reach an understanding with the United States, and especially with the administration of President Clinton."

The reported compromise was apparently aimed at preventing U.N. steps to enforce a resolution demanding the deportees' return. Arab nations in particular have been furious at what they consider a double standard in the way U.N. resolutions pertaining to Iraq and Israel have been enforced.

The compromise would make it easier for the United States to block a U.N. Security Council resolution on enforcing the resolution.

Israel deported 413 Palestinians from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to Lebanon on Dec. 17, accusing them of being ringleaders in radical Muslim groups blamed for the killing of six Israeli soldiers.

Since then Israel has allowed the return of 15 of the deportees, saying they were mistakenly expelled.

Dead Sea scrolls lawsuit begins
Philadelphia, Penn.
Lawyers for a Dead Sea scrolls expert who wants to copyright a passage he reconstructed begins arguments in an Israeli court on Monday in a case in which scholarship and capitalism collide.

Elisha Qimron also is seeking $250,000 from American biblical scholars who published his partial reconstruction of a passage in a book without giving him credit.

The Israeli scholar studying at Philadelphia's Annenberg Research Institute wants to claim copyright of a passagewhich dates back 2,000 years, according to the Associated Press.

Rabin said the arrangement was reached in discussions with the United States and that the Clinton administration worked to shield Israel from international sanctions and to work to renew the Middle East peace talks.

Insurance coverage shows gaps
Sacramento, Calif.
California motorists pay dramatically different rates for identical automobile insurance coverage depending on where they live, their driving record and their insurer, according to the Department of Insurancenew survey released Monday.

For family coverage, which includes two adults and a teen boy on the same policy, the Los Angeles area had the highest auto insurance rates, followed by Orange County, San Bernardino-Riverside, the San Francisco Bay area, San Diego-Imperial, the Sacramento area, Northern California and Central California.

In one hypothesis, a family in which the parents had one speeding ticket each, the 17-year-old son had a clean record and they drove two vehicles—a 1991 Toyota Camry and a 1992 Dodge Caravan mini-van—would pay the annual premium as high as $8,139 in Los Angeles County, nearly double the $3,254 for the same policy in the Central Valley. The same policy cost $4,316 in Orange County and $3,443 in the Sacramento area.

The coverage included a $200 deductible and up to $300,000 in bodily injury liability.

In low-income areas, the cost of auto insurance can be as high as 45 percent of the family median income, and low-income families may pay up to 10 times as much for the same policy written in high-income areas.

The survey examined the 14 largest automobile insurance companies offering coverage to the California public.

Pentagon to end abortion ban
Washington, D.C.

Pentagon medical officials, moving swiftly to implement President Clinton's order allowing abortions at military hospitals, are seeking guidance from Planned Parenthood on how to write policies for the services.

The Defense Department officials asked for the group's guidelines on abortions, patient preparation, caring for women afterward and their requirements for doctors, according to a Planned Parenthood spokeswoman.

"Both President Clinton and I feel that these discussions have been positive and productive and we are quite optimistic that they will open the way to a resolution of this issue and enable us to put the issue behind us," she said.

Paul Knoch
Cal Poly English senior

Dan with whom he hiked up Mount San Luis on Saturday. "He never knew his dad and his mom is an alcoholic he hasn't seen in six years," he said.

With no one to turn to for support, Knoch said, Dan is forced to live on the street. "He'd love to find work, have a normal life, have a girlfriend."

Two other formidable contributors to the homeless problem are mental illness and substance abuse, Knoch said.

A 1990 survey of local emergency service providers stated that more than 30 percent of the homeless are alcohol or drug abusers and another 30 percent are chronically or mentally ill.

Knoch said he believes these are the reasons counseling, sheltered work programs and detox centers are necessary in order to prepare these people for the work force.

On a local level there are many things students can do to help without just being a "Dec. 24 volunteer," he said.

Since homeless shelters often rely on donations for basic necessities, students could contribute used mattresses, towels, blankets, magazines or other household items.

Volunteers are always needed at the EOC shelter or the People's Kitchen in Mission San Luis Obispo.

"One friendly face can make up for the cruelty you get from other people," Knoch said.

Even with just two temporary days as a homeless person under his belt, Knoch said he felt the impact of "being a label rather than a human being."

A noisy night under a picnic table left him cold and tired when the bells of the Mission woke him at 6:30 a.m. Saturday. "When you're a homeless person, it's like people have the right to ignore you," Knoch said. "They walk by going 'tsk-tsk, somebody should do something.'"
This week, students were asked for their opinion on the initial impact of the Clinton administration.

Wall, I'd say that he definitely had his hands full when he came into office, mainly with the deficit. We're involved in a lot of foreign affairs, with Somalia and the Persian Gulf crisis, so as far as foreign policy goes, he's got his hands full.

I'd say that as far as my first impression goes, I think he's done an outstanding job. It was really heartening to see him hold that first economic summit conference, it was incredible.

I think [this optimism] will continue in spirit, but it won't be as apparent [as it is now].

— Ted Roy
Ag Business

I think he's going at a good pace, but I think he needs to be careful not to do too much too soon.

I think it's good he brought up topics such as the ban on gays in the military, but I'm not so sure a change so soon is good.

He's bringing a lot of optimism to the country by bringing up questions that need answers, that need to be change.

But I think it takes a lot of time for people to change and for people to get used to new ideas. This is a pretty conservative country.

— Tiffany Adams
Fruit Science

He's basically bringing up issues that haven't been dealt with before.

I think we need to change, and I think that the issues being brought up, like the war and the draft... he's bringing about positive change.

— Dina Matano
Forestry & Natural Resource Management

I think people are quick to call [Clinton] a liar, to say he's a hypotite.

I think people are quick to call him on things, and I don't think that's fair; I think they should give him the 100 days to get into office, get his stuff together and then start making an impact doing what he's promised.

I think people gave [that chance] to Bush. Everyone said he would be okay after saying "No new taxes," and two years later, up they went. He was a total hypotite and I think people are expecting that [from Clinton] because of the Bush administration.

— Susan Carlson
Political Science

I think expectations are really high for Bill Clinton because everyone is thinking of a new start; they want so much change so fast, but then, they don't realize how many years the problems have been around.

I think he has a lot to live up to.

Everyone's saying, "What's he going to do, these the decisions he's going to make during these first 100 days are going to set the precedent for the rest of his administration."

I think he's under a lot of pressure.

I think people are over-optimistic considering how much needs to be done.

— Aaron McPherson
History

I think he should stick to the budget and concentrate on dealing with that. While other issues are important, I think that that's the main thing he should be working on rather than beating around the bush.

I think [the decisions Clinton is making] need to be made, but I don't think that they are top priority right now.

I think it's still a little bit too early [to judge]; everything's too early. Hopefully by the end of the first 100 days everything will be set and we'll be able to see what he will be able to do.

— John Wulfe

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

700 women can't be wrong

I am writing this letter in response to Glen (sic) Palmour's Jan. 28, 1993, commentary "Hazing: A mixed blessing." I can't say that I was very pleased with his absurd generalizations put forth on the Greek system.

First of all, it is true to me that it is a prerequisite to be a beauty queen and a surface himbo in order to be a member of a sorority. I think it is just that you have your opinions that the conversation of two individuals. Now, there's a word for you, individual. People are all unique and different and should be treated as such. Our society is saturated with discrimination and hasty stereotypes that it's a shame people like you even exist.

Since when do you have the say of whom should and should not be admitted to take classes at the University? Last I checked, we're all students and the only thing that counts is your intelligence. What makes you think that you take your education more seriously than those in the Greek system? Since joining a sorority, my G.P.A. has actually gone up substantially. I will also be graduating in a total of four years. Gee Glen (sic), I guess I just can't seem to "crust" through. Most students take their education seriously whether they are in the Greek system or not. Are you aware of the fact that the overall greek G.P.A. is higher than Cal Poly's average?

If you truly feel that the reason you cannot CAPTURE the courage of a sorority and are therefore "subservient to your space" it leads me to question your intelligence. What makes you think that you should have priority over anyone else? An intelligent way to appeal the shortage of classes would be to unite the campus, not divide it.

Number one, it is my opinion that 700 women on this campus based on the conversation of two, think again.

Where were we?

There seems to be some confusion about how ASI is spending student money. Well, I have a question for the editorial staff of the Mustang Daily. Where were you when ASI approved an $89,000 expenditure for Second Edition? Where were you when ASI approved a $4,500 expenditure for two computers for the ASI Executive Office? Where were you when ASI approved a $27,000 expenditure for Second Edition? Or what about the IBM notebook computer which would carry the approval of $1,900 for two students to go to Nashville for a conference? Where were you? ASI has spent thousands of students' dollars this year. Can you explain how much and who spent the ASI student money?

Also stated in the editorial was the ASI Board of Directors was "considering building a 'sandbox' of their own." If built, this course would mean that ASI approved an $8,000 expenditure for a home course on campus. Also there are several organizations interested in hiring a roper course on campus.

I am trying to defend or support the proposed rope course, but I am angry that the Mustang Daily Editorial Staff didn't write an article for a $3,000 expenditure (I don't know what that would be spent on something that could be utilized by the students that paid for it.

Panel aims to trim Congressional fat

WASHINGTON (AP) —
Americans visiting the U.S. Capitol can see for themselves why Congress doesn't work, without listening to months of testimony before a new panel eyeing changes in House and Senate operations.

From the Senate visitors' gallery they can watch a time-killing tactic — a quorum call — when senators' names are called out before a nearly empty chamber.

In the House, they can see a lone member speaking to 435 empty seats after the day's legislative business is done.

In a committee they can watch a chairman rattle off members' yeas and nays "by proxy," a way for absent lawmakers to vote on sending legislation to the floor.

These and other situations will be debated by the Joint Committee on the Organization of Congress, which last week embarked on a nearly yearlong effort designed to change the legislative branch in a big way.

"Bloated and bureaucratic" was one senator's description of Congress. He said the 300 full committees and sub-committees for an institution of 535 members should be cut to 50.

Recommendations will be debated in the summer and brought before both houses in the fall. Similar efforts in the past have led to only modest reforms.

"The diagnosis isn't all that difficult," said Dave Mason, director of the Congress Project at the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank.

He said some problems are "a lot more obvious to casual observers than members who are too wrapped up in the process to see the forest from the trees."

Nonetheless, congressional leaders who testified at the panel's first hearing last week have begun to isolate Congress' problems.

"Bloated and bureaucratic" was Sen. David Boren's description of Congress. The Oklahoma Democrat, the committee's co-chairman, said the 300 full committees and subcommittees for an institution of 535 members should be cut to 50.

Congressional employment, which has shot up from about 2,000 in 1947 to nearly 12,000 today, could be reduced by 3,000, Boren suggested.

Mason recommended that caseworker positions on lawmakers' personal staffs be abolished and replaced by a congressional office that would handle the common problems that generate the calls.

With fewer committee assignments, Mason said, lawmakers could spend more time investigating underlying problems that produced the calls — such as missing Social Security checks.

Other things the committee will try to fix:

—Committee turf battles. Chairman guard their territory so jealously that at least 40 panels in both houses would be involved in creating a national energy policy.

—A blizzard of meaningless bill introductions. The average length of bills went from four pages in 1970 to 20 pages in the 1980s. Yet, fewer than half as many bills are passed today as were 40 years ago.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., co-chairman of the reform commission, has said House-Senate committees produce 2,000-page bills that sometimes "must be digested and voted on within hours" of their drafting.

—An ethics process in which members are not only judged by their peers, but by their friends.

Despite a youthful lineup, Cal Poly's softball team won 41 games a year ago. If things better with age, then so should the Mustangs' lineup. All but two starters return from last year's squad to provide an experienced, yet still young, team. The Mustangs (41-15 overall a year ago) will host their season-opener Wednesday as UC Santa Barbara comes to town for a 1 p.m. doubleheader.

Boyer coached last year's team into the semifinals of the NCAA Division II West Regional and to a second-place finish in the California Collegiate Athletic Association with a 13-5 mark.

Cal Poly's hopes of returning to the Regionals rest on the Mustangs' seasoned pitching staff. Leading the hurlers is senior Julie Rome. Her 24-5 record and 0.58 ERA earned her first team All-Region, first team All-CCAA honors and second team All-American honors.

Cal Poly will have a new catcher for the first time in four years as Laurie Weidenheimer and Christie Collier look to replace All-Region performer Julie Grennan.

Stephanie Tidwell will start for her fourth season at first base after driving home 21 runs a year ago. Rounding out the infield are Christy Punches at second base, Rhonda Gavert at short and Kelly Bannon at third.

Cal Poly will feature speed and strong defensive skills out on the grass. Mario Aubert, who Boyer feels is the best athlete on the team, was last year's leading hitter at .331 and will be returning to centerfield.

Also expected to see time in the outfield are Stephanie Dietz, Tracy Ruiz, Joanne Nakai and Samantha George.

After Wednesday, Cal Poly won't play at home again until March 6, when it hosts Cal State Hayward.
