MAKING the NEWS

The free market of ideas can get clogged when only a few control it.

By Rebecca Stauck Daily Staff Writer

Awareness Day to educate Poly about disabled students

By Natalie Colless Daily Staff Writer

Traveling across six continents, over 84,000 miles and crossing the Saharan and Gobi Deserts on his Harley Davidson motorcycle, motorcycle are just a few of the adventures that David Barr, a writer from Bodfish, Calif., has experienced. David Barr, a 30-year-old Elisabeth Murdoch, KBAY's new owner, "The money was the real issue." According to Murdoch, Martel tried to negotiate the contract over the telephone and would not compromise — he would just hang up. In addition to the money, Martel initially said he thought age was a problem. "He thought there was an age problem," Murdoch said. "But I say it wasn't a problem." However, according to Murdoch's ratings, the station targets mainly a younger audience. But Martel said, "more importantly, she produced someone else in mind for the job." The audience that once invited Martel into their home each evening can again do so by viewing Santa Maria's KCOY station, where Martel anchors both the 6 p.m. and 11 p.m. newscasts. "I'm glad I made the move," Martel said.

During Martel's 13-year career at KSLO, many community viewers built a relationship with him. They protested his disappearance from their evening news diet by sending out fliers. However, others in the community agreed that Martel's disappearance was for the better. Cal Poly journalism professor Clay Carter said he thinks Murdoch knew what she was doing when she didn't renew Martel's contract. He explained that whenever someone new comes into the marketplace, they usually challenge other stations to examine their ways so they can better serve the audience. In broadcast journalism's recent marketplace, many professors and employees fear over-concentration — when

"This event is... a time to let disabled (persons) know about their options ...."

Martie Mimmack
Education graduate

"This event is... a time to let disabled (persons) know about their options ...."

Martie Mimmack
Education graduate

ASl executive director removed from lawsuit

By Lisa J. Herch Daily Staff Writer

A complaint alleging ASI employees conspired to have former employee Steven Adams fired was thrown out last week by a Superior Court Judge. Judge Charles Piccuta of the San Luis Obispo Superior Court struck the complaint, filed by Adams' attorney on April 10, from the official court record on April 19. Since the complaint rejected by the court was the second version of an earlier lawsuit, the case now hinges on the original charges. In the charges he filed with the court, Adams had said he was discharged from ASI after years of service for allegedly knowing too much about the organization. At the same time he dismissed those claims, Piccuta removed ASI Executive Director Polly Harrigan from the list of defendants in the original lawsuit. Former ASI Executive Director Roger Conway and ASI employee David Juhate, who was the subject alleged to have Adams terminate, also were released from the allegations when Piccuta threw out the suit. "It's as if it had never been filed," said David Juhate, legal counsel for ASI. "The complaint) was filed without permission from either the Court or the defendants ..." David Juhate ASI's legal counsel

"Instead, they have weighted other alternatives to raising student fees. The committee will look to the state and the California State University Chancellor's Office to provide Cal Poly with the money. But, if attempts fail, students will see their quarterly tuition rise. I'm kind of sick of our fees being raised," said psychology senior Jamie Bradley. "I really don't have a choice." Some students are completely against an increase in fees, but others would pay the bill if they see some results. If Cal Poly increases the fees, there should be more sections open for classes," said materials engineering junior Anthony Nguyen. "I'm all for it, but if you increase fees, you've got to expand." Most students are in favor of Baker's intention to maintain

Inside Today's Mustang Daily

| Inside Today's Mustang Daily |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Agenda</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2 Eating disorders can affect anybody, but help is available</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>World</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>50 years later, survivors of German concentration camps reflect on the past</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Opinion</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Jay Hedbarri wonders why Poly looks the same, even after six years</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

See FEES, page 6

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Making the news</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The free market of ideas can get clogged when only a few control it</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

By Rebecca Stauck Daily Staff Writer

Awareness Day to educate Poly about disabled students

By Natalie Colless Daily Staff Writer

Traveling across six continents, over 84,000 miles and crossing the Saharan and Gobi Deserts on his Harley Davidson motorcycle, motorcycle are just a few of the adventures that David Barr, a writer from Bodfish, Calif., has experienced. David Barr, a 30-year-old Elisabeth Murdoch, KBAY's new owner, "The money was the real issue." According to Murdoch, Martel tried to negotiate the contract over the telephone and would not compromise — he would just hang up. In addition to the money, Martel initially said he thought age was a problem. "He thought there was an age problem," Murdoch said. "But I say it wasn't a problem." However, according to Murdoch's ratings, the station targets mainly a younger audience. But Martel said, "more importantly, she produced someone else in mind for the job." The audience that once invited Martel into their home each evening can again do so by viewing Santa Maria's KCOY station, where Martel anchors both the 6 p.m. and 11 p.m. newscasts. "I'm glad I made the move," Martel said.

During Martel's 13-year career at KSLO, many community viewers built a relationship with him. They protested his disappearance from their evening news diet by sending out fliers. However, others in the community agreed that Martel's disappearance was for the better. Cal Poly journalism professor Clay Carter said he thinks Murdoch knew what she was doing when she didn't renew Martel's contract. He explained that whenever someone new comes into the marketplace, they usually challenge other stations to examine their ways so they can better serve the audience. In broadcast journalism's recent marketplace, many professors and employees fear over-concentration — when

"This event is... a time to let disabled (persons) know about their options ...."

Martie Mimmack
Education graduate

"This event is... a time to let disabled (persons) know about their options ...."

Martie Mimmack
Education graduate

ASl executive director removed from lawsuit

By Lisa J. Herch Daily Staff Writer

A complaint alleging ASI employees conspired to have former employee Steven Adams fired was thrown out last week by a Superior Court Judge. Judge Charles Piccuta of the San Luis Obispo Superior Court struck the complaint, filed by Adams' attorney on April 10, from the official court record on April 19. Since the complaint rejected by the court was the second version of an earlier lawsuit, the case now hinges on the original charges. In the charges he filed with the court, Adams had said he was discharged from ASI after years of service for allegedly knowing too much about the organization. At the same time he dismissed those claims, Piccuta removed ASI Executive Director Polly Harrigan from the list of defendants in the original lawsuit. Former ASI Executive Director Roger Conway and ASI employee David Juhate, who was the subject alleged to have Adams terminate, also were released from the allegations when Piccuta threw out the suit. "It's as if it had never been filed," said David Juhate, legal counsel for ASI. "The complaint) was filed without permission from either the Court or the defendants ..." David Juhate ASI's legal counsel

"Instead, they have weighted other alternatives to raising student fees. The committee will look to the state and the California State University Chancellor's Office to provide Cal Poly with the money. But, if attempts fail, students will see their quarterly tuition rise. I'm kind of sick of our fees being raised," said psychology senior Jamie Bradley. "I really don't have a choice." Some students are completely against an increase in fees, but others would pay the bill if they see some results. If Cal Poly increases the fees, there should be more sections open for classes," said materials engineering junior Anthony Nguyen. "I'm all for it, but if you increase fees, you've got to expand." Most students are in favor of Baker's intention to maintain

Inside Today's Mustang Daily

| Inside Today's Mustang Daily |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Agenda</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2 Eating disorders can affect anybody, but help is available</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>World</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>50 years later, survivors of German concentration camps reflect on the past</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Opinion</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Jay Hedbarri wonders why Poly looks the same, even after six years</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

See FEES, page 6
Commute Week
This week is Bike Commute Week and California Clean Air Week. As part of the week's festivities, Cal Poly faculty, staff and students are encouraged to ride their bikes to work or school. A bike booth will be set up in the U.U. Plaza on Wednesday. Students and staff are invited to sign up to win a prize. For more information, call Commuter Services at 756-6680.

TODAY
Resume and Cover Letter Workshop • 11 a.m. - room. Workshops are held in Career Services, Room 224. Sign up in advance — 756-2501 Learn at Lunch: Lecture • Sponsored by the Employee Assistance Program.
"Understanding Anxiety: What To Do." Staff Faculty Dining Room B, noon - 1 p.m. — 756-0527
Go-Op and Summer Job Workshop • 2-3 p.m. Workshops are held in Career Services, Room 224. Sign up in advance — 756-2501

WEDNESDAY
Nature Hike • There will be a bird walk in the Reservoir Canyon area. Go north on Highway 101, 1.2 miles from the Monterey Street on-ramp in San Luis Obispo. Turn right at Reservoir Canyon Road and go 1/2 mile, 8:30 a.m.
Fire Season Preparedness Exercise • Camp San Luis, 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Job Search Workshop • 11 a.m. - Career Services, Room 224. Sign up in advance — 756-2501
Go Vegetarian Eat for Life • A vegetarian workshop with guest speaker Jennifer Raymond, M.S. in Nutrition, Chumash Auditorium, 4-6 p.m.

AGENDA
TUESDAY
MAY 2
WEEK 6
29 school days left in term.
TODAY'S WEATHER: Low fog in the morning; partly cloudy Explosive high/low: 69/52

COMMUTE WEEK
This week is Bike Commute Week and California Clean Air Week. As part of the week's festivities, Cal Poly faculty, staff and students are encouraged to ride their bikes to work or school.

For more information, call Commuter Services at 756-6680.

AGENDA
TUESDAY
MAY 2
WEEK 6
29 school days left in term.
TODAY'S WEATHER: Low fog in the morning; partly cloudy Explosive high/low: 69/52

Most eating disorders affect women, but men also can fall victim to the addictive cycles of bulimia and anorexia nervosa

By Leslie Miyamoto

Noel, a senior at Cal Poly, remembers going to a pediatrician who told her she would have to start eating or she would be put in the hospital. But she didn't start eating because she said no one could force her to.

"The next thing I knew I was in the hospital to get an IV because I wouldn't even drink water," Noel said. "I was really close to death at that point."

Noel (not her real name), now 21 years old, was 11 when she became anorexic.

Noel was raised in a family where her mother was physically abused by her husband, Noel's father. Noel said her mother tried to make the family appear normal on the outside.

"She was trying to make our family look so perfect," Noel recalled.

But behind closed doors, another story took place. Noel's alcoholic father also abused her and her sister both physically and sexually.

"I became anorexic because when you lose control of your own body, (it's) kind of an unconscious way of taking back control," she said.

Within a three-month period at age 11, Noel fell from 60 pounds to 40 pounds. Because she was young and still growing, Noel said she now feels she has done permanent bodily damage.

"I became anorexic because when you lose control of your own body, (it's) kind of an unconscious way of taking back control," she said.

Noel, a senior at Cal Poly, remembers going to a pediatrician who told her she would have to start eating or she would be put in the hospital. But she didn't start eating because she said no one could force her to.

"The next thing I knew I was in the hospital to get an IV because I wouldn't even drink water," Noel said. "I was really close to death at that point."

Noel (not her real name), now 21 years old, was 11 when she became anorexic.

Noel was raised in a family where her mother was physically abused by her husband, Noel's father. Noel said her mother tried to make the family appear normal on the outside.

"She was trying to make our family look so perfect," Noel recalled.

But behind closed doors, another story took place. Noel's alcoholic father also abused her and her sister both physically and sexually.

"I became anorexic because when you lose control of your own body, (it's) kind of an unconscious way of taking back control," she said.

Within a three-month period at age 11, Noel fell from 60 pounds to 40 pounds. Because she was young and still growing, Noel said she now feels she has done permanent bodily damage.

"I probably permanently stunted my growth because I was just about ready to enter puberty," Noel said. "I'm on the pill to induce my periods, and as far as I know right now, I don't think I can have kids just because I can't menstruate on my own."

See AGENDA, page 3

Most eating disorders affect women, but men also can fall victim to the addictive cycles of bulimia and anorexia nervosa

By Leslie Miyamoto

Noel, a senior at Cal Poly, remembers going to a pediatrician who told her she would have to start eating or she would be put in the hospital. But she didn't start eating because she said no one could force her to.

"The next thing I knew I was in the hospital to get an IV because I wouldn't even drink water," Noel said. "I was really close to death at that point."

Noel (not her real name), now 21 years old, was 11 when she became anorexic.

Noel was raised in a family where her mother was physically abused by her husband, Noel's father. Noel said her mother tried to make the family appear normal on the outside.

"She was trying to make our family look so perfect," Noel recalled.

But behind closed doors, another story took place. Noel's alcoholic father also abused her and her sister both physically and sexually.

"I became anorexic because when you lose control of your own body, (it's) kind of an unconscious way of taking back control," she said.

Within a three-month period at age 11, Noel fell from 60 pounds to 40 pounds. Because she was young and still growing, Noel said she now feels she has done permanent bodily damage.

"I probably permanently stunted my growth because I was just about ready to enter puberty," Noel said. "I'm on the pill to induce my periods, and as far as I know right now, I don't think I can have kids just because I can't menstruate on my own."

See AGENDA, page 3
AGENDA: Fear of gaining weight, compulsive exercise and low self-esteem may be warning signs for an eating disorder

Services on campus, and the Student Health Network, affect adolescent women — all of whom are victims of bulimia, a self-induced starvation that usually affects adolescent women, though men also can be victims. Signs of bulimia include low self-esteem, social isolation, compulsive exercise, perfectionist behavior and feeling a lack of control in life. They usually have an intense fear of gaining weight and are unrealistic about their body size.

According to Axelroth, bulimia, also known as the "Binge-Purge Syndrome," affects women and men in their 20s and 30s. People with bulimia show symptoms of low self-esteem, self-indulgent behavior, anxiety, dishonesty and a constant concern with weight. Bulimia occurs when a person feels a lack of control over their eating habits and consumes massive amounts of food. Victims of bulimia induce vomiting, use laxatives or overexercising.

Anorexia and bulimia can cause permanent bodily harm and medical complications, Axelroth said. Both can lead to dehydration, electrolyte imbalance, chemical imbalances, changes in metabolism and kidney damage. People who think they may have an eating disorder, or know someone with one, can get help on campus.

Ten nutritional science majors make up the Nutrition Team. The team gives free individual consultation, dietary analysis and nutrition workshops to Cal Poly students and the community. And because younger people are more susceptible to eating disorders, the Nutrition Team has taken measures to educate middle school students.

The team has given workshops to two local middle schools which consisted of a skit and information about healthy eating and the food diet pyramid. As nutrition educators, they provide clients with nutrition information by teaching them how to eat properly.

"We are nutritional consultants," Taylor said. "We can't counsel clients, but we can educate (people on) how to eat healthily.

Source of the problem

The recent findings of a study conducted at Cal Poly by psychologist Don Ryujo showed men prefer women thinner than they have admitted in the past. Ryujo also concluded men could be a source of eating disorders. Despite mixed reactions from students, Karen Jackson, a registered nurse in San Luis Obispo who counsels people with eating disorders, said "I'm not surprised men prefer thinner women."

Taylor said although she believes men prefer thinner women, they aren't the only reason for eating disorders. "I think all along men have been to blame. Society plays into it because they do what we (as viewers) want," she continued. "They're not going to put somebody that's overweight on TV shows. It's all of our faults.

Noel also said she believes society is responsible for eating disorders because it fears dealing with problems through food. "It's a coping mechanism," Noel said. "I think with bulimia, you turn to food. We're taught all of our life (that) when something hurts, you've given a cookie. If you fall down, your mom gives you an ice cream cone or if you break up with your boyfriend, you go get Ben and Jerry's (ice cream).

"You go for food as a source of comfort and it's a binge-purge cycle. You go to food for comfort, when you feel guilty and you throw it up. It just keeps going on and on."

Noel said she has made progress since she became anorexic 10 years ago. She said she still has disordered eating patterns but, "I never make myself throw-up. I never starve anymore."

Noel now weighs 98 pounds and stands 5 feet 2 inches tall. She said she followed a strict schedule of what she can eat throughout the week. Noel also said the power of eating disorders frightens her but that she will stand firm in her decision to overcome anorexia.

"I think I'll always have an eating disorder inside of me," Noel said. "But I won't ever let it get the best of me because I'm educated enough that I know if I'm feeling down or if I'm having problems, there's other ways (to cope)."

Noel also said the media alone isn't to blame.

emetia and bulimic traits." And women aren't the only ones who have eating disorders. According to Tracy Taylor, a coordinator for the Cal Poly Nutrition Team — a part of the Student Health Network — "Men do fall victims to eating disorders. They are usually athlet­ic situations or athletically relevant.

Taylor said she has occasionally seen some men, but 90 to 95 percent of eating disorders affect women.

"Helping those who think they may have an eating disorder, or know someone with one, can get help on campus.

Ten nutritional science majors make up the Nutrition Team. The team gives free individual consultation, dietary analysis and nutrition workshops to Cal Poly students and the community.

And because younger people are more susceptible to eating disorders, the Nutrition Team has taken measures to educate middle school students.

The team has given workshops to two local middle schools which consisted of a skit and information about healthy eating and the food diet pyramid. As nutrition educators, they provide clients with nutrition information by teaching them how to eat properly.

"We are nutritional consultants," Taylor said. "We can't counsel clients, but we can educate (people on) how to eat healthily.

Source of the problem

The recent findings of a study conducted at Cal Poly by psychologist Don Ryujo showed men prefer women thinner than they have admitted in the past. Ryujo also concluded men could be a source of eating disorders. Despite mixed reactions from students, Karen Jackson, a registered nurse in San Luis Obispo who counsels people with eating disorders, said "I'm not surprised men prefer thinner women."

Taylor said although she believes men prefer thinner women, they aren't the only reason for eating disorders. "I think all along men have been to blame. Society plays into it because they do what we (as viewers) want," she continued. "They're not going to put somebody that's overweight on TV shows. It's all of our faults.

Noel also said she believes society is responsible for eating disorders because it fears dealing with problems through food. "It's a coping mechanism," Noel said. "I think with bulimia, you turn to food. We're taught all of our life (that) when something hurts, you've given a cookie. If you fall down, your mom gives you an ice cream cone or if you break up with your boyfriend, you go get Ben and Jerry's (ice cream).

"You go for food as a source of comfort and it's a binge-purge cycle. You go to food for comfort, when you feel guilty and you throw it up. It just keeps going on and on."

Noel said she has made progress since she became anorexic 10 years ago. She said she still has disordered eating patterns but, "I never make myself throw-up. I never starve anymore."

Noel now weighs 98 pounds and stands 5 feet 2 inches tall. She said she followed a strict schedule of what she can eat throughout the week. Noel also said the power of eating disorders frightens her but that she will stand firm in her decision to overcome anorexia.

"I think I'll always have an eating disorder inside of me," Noel said. "But I won't ever let it get the best of me because I'm educated enough that I know if I'm feeling down or if I'm having problems, there's other ways (to cope)."

Noel also said the media alone isn't to blame.
Open minds are needed for diversity

For some time, Cal Poly has been talking about acquiring minority status and moving toward more diversity in student enrollment. The more diversity of thought and culture we are exposed to, the better prepared we will be for our careers — careers in a world which is becoming smaller as communication increases among nations.

However, there is a problem. While the student body is 33 percent non-white, the body of tenured faculty on this campus is 90 percent white and, mostly male.

The university seems to at least recognize this problem, and is recruiting minority faculty. A Cal Poly New Hire report showed that nearly half of all full-time positions have been filled by minorities since 1992.

Unfortunately, the university is having a problem keeping minority faculty. Few have or are in the process of acquiring tenure. In his lecture on April 26, history professor Donald Grinde said this is because "the dominant culture values its own self." Minority faculty are not accepted because their ideas are different, giving the example that an English professor from a non-noble, but it will not be achieved unless campus open minds are needed for diversity.

The university's goal to have a diverse faculty is noble, but it will not be achieved unless campus diverse faculty members have open minds toward new and different ideas.

Fee increase should be a last resort

President Warren Baker has decided it's time to move the university up a" — a very expensive direction, by all indications. More than a week ago, Baker announced a plan for Cal Poly's future and acknowledged it could involve a 10-percent fee increase for students. That's above and beyond inflation fees from the state.

Now, the Daily has learned, students here could face as much as 60 percent higher costs for their education, with the hike distributed over several years. The extra income for Cal Poly would allow the school to upgrade its services and admit more students. But the middle class, stuck in between, may find itself locked out or faced with astronomical loans.

You may have noticed in your travels to class a strange mirage. I've only had three majors, two co-ops, one minor and a still-incomplete Spike's card. Obviously, there is no way four years could have swept by so soon. I haven't even altered the "P" yet.

So, tomorrow when you go to school, ignore the Rec Center, the new Business Building, Faculty Office East and any newest prop for this time illusion — the new Performing Arts Center. Instead, march to the sundial and look at it — for several hours if need be — to prove to yourself that without that gnomon, time isn't moving.

Then, when you at last feel reassured in your newfound student immortality, go to the road behind the Rec, you'll see a strange building called the "Piazza," the tiny area upstairs in the U.U. behind Chumash Auditorium. You won't get a jokeshop or a live band or even a seat, but you'll get peace of mind... and pizza at the 92 price.

Jay Holavarri is a mechanical engineering student who refers to himself as an "eternal senior."

Researcher intended to support women

Ms. Venable criticizes Dr. Ryujin for claiming his research proves everything else wrong and is representative of all men. He does not claim this. In fact, during his lecture he said replication of his study and variations of his study must be performed to give it real weight and increase its representativeness to the larger population.

It seems to me, based on her letter, that Ms. Venable is not in fact aware of the details of Dr. Ryujin's study or of his motives and conclusions. I believe it unfair and cruel to attack him, his research methodology, and his motives without really understanding what they are.

I encourage you, Ms. Venable, to go and speak with Dr. Ryujin about his study. His office is in FOB 23. He is very personable and is working hard to help find causes and solutions to the serious problems of eating disorders and poor body image. I am sure that after speaking with him you will retract many of your admonitions of him.

Jay Holavarri is a mechanical engineering student who refers to himself as an "eternal senior."

Since the last time I checked the shadow on that sundial, I have been at the same point on my major's flow chart...
AWARENESS
From page 1
persons to speak with the hear­ing.
SLOCO Access, a community group to promote the needs of disabled people and provide a link between them and the community, will be at the event to answer questions.
According to Mimmack, the event will be a great way to bring people together.
"The San Luis Obispo com­
We already have a tremendously friendly and willing to help without being condescending," Mimmack said. "I hope that people will attend Awareness Day to find out information and feel comfortable in knowing that Poly has a friendly atmosphere."

ADVERTISE • in the MUSTANG
DAILY

SOFT CONTACT LENSES
Prescriptions Filled
Various Brands Available
1-800-303-3409
349-3409
216 W. Main, Santa Maria
Mon-Wed 9-5

Apple Days
Starts
March 1st
Prices can't be beat.
Come in and see the latest in computer technology.

London
$279*
Frankfurt $259*
Amsterdam $279*
Paris $285*
Madrid $365*
Rome $409*
Athens $415*

Apple Computer Loan
Program available
- No payment for 90 days
- No application fee
- Eight years to repay

IN WITH THE OLD,
OUT WITH THE NEW...

London
$279*
Frankfurt $259*
Amsterdam $279*
Paris $285*
Madrid $365*
Rome $409*
Athens $415*

Watch for Trade-In Days:
May 10th & 11th
Dexter Lawn
Trade in your old computer for $ and take advantage of Apple's Bundle Pricing.
Call 1-800-992-1452 for trading values.

Don't have a plan for your life
next year?

WE DO.

MUSTANG DAILY
is looking to replace its current editor in chief, who has almost finished serving his one-year sentence. If you're interested and have a strong background in college or professional journalism, please contact Silas Lyons at x1776 for more information.
A cover letter, resume and proposal for the position are due Monday, May 6.
Officials question man known for throwing poolside sex parties

The referendum on the May 10, 1995 special elections ballot will read:

"In order to maintain the services of the ASI Children's Center, an increase of $4 per quarter will be required to make the Children's Center fiscally sound. Approving this measure will increase quarterly student fees for the Children's Center, beginning in Fall Quarter 1995 to $5 in order to keep the Children's Center open. To avoid future deficits, this fee will increase by $1 every two years until 2004, where the Board of Directors will reassess the level of student subsidy of the Children's Center. This fee will be used to subsidize student, faculty, and staff use of the Children's Center. The proposed fee will start at $5 for Fall Quarter 1995 and top out at $9 for Fall Quarter 2004.

Statements will be compiled and on display at polling locations.

May 1 - 4
Book Sale
9am-3pm
in front of the bookstore
SAVE 50% - 75%
Hundreds of Books Marked Down
Old Editions - Publishers Overstock - Slightly Worn
All new titles! All new titles!

ASI CHILDREN'S CENTER REFERENDUM

Pro or con statements regarding the implementation of an ASI fee increase are being requested by the ASI Selections Committee.

The referendum on the May 10, 1995 special elections ballot will read:

"In order to maintain the services of the ASI Children's Center, an increase of $4 per quarter will be required to make the Children's Center fiscally sound. Approving this measure will increase quarterly student fees for the Children's Center, beginning in Fall Quarter 1995 to $5 in order to keep the Children's Center open. To avoid future deficits, this fee will increase by $1 every two years until 2004, where the Board of Directors will reassess the level of student subsidy of the Children's Center. This fee will be used to subsidize student, faculty, and staff use of the Children's Center. The proposed fee will start at $5 for Fall Quarter 1995 and top out at $9 for Fall Quarter 2004.

Statements will be compiled and on display at polling locations.

From page 1

"According to Juhnke, the case now reverts to the original lawsuit and its first amended complaint, which names ASI, Harrigan's name, specifically, has been removed from the list of defendants.

"The judge dismissed Harrigan from the action because Adams filed a summary judgment against him and she wasn't his employer — ASI was," Juhnke said. "Poly Harrigan is an employee of ASI, so it was inappropriate to specifically name her. It's a matter of law.

"Regarding the second complaint, Juhnke said it was improperly filed.

"When a lawsuit is originally filed, as this one was in August 1994, the attorney has a right to file an amended complaint. The case was re-filed in February 1995.

"According to Juhnke, the judge's dismissal of the second complaint does not completely remove it from the court record. Technically, it still exists within the file, but will never be usable.

"Rambuski declined comment on the lawsuit as it stands. "The remaining issues are still to be decided by the court, so I'm not comfortable commenting on the current status of the case," he said. "It's just going to depend on the case in many ways."

"Rambuski acknowledged that Harrigan, along with any other defendants, could be found guilty of the original count of wrongdoing by ASI: "If approached in the proper way, it's an excellent plan," Neel said.

"Adams' attorney, Edwin Bambuski, would not comment on the suit.

"The trend is that the cost of education will continue to go higher."

"The law suit: Case scheduled to be heard May 12"

"Adams was 47 years old when he was terminated. According to Rambuski, the case is scheduled to be heard in Superior Court on May 12."

"AIDS education must be funded from within the file, but will never be usable."

"The case has reached a level that must be asked to make the Children's Center fiscally sound. Approving this measure will increase quarterly student fees for the Children's Center, beginning in Fall Quarter 1995 to $5 in order to keep the Children's Center open. To avoid future deficits, this fee will increase by $1 every two years until 2004, where the Board of Directors will reassess the level of student subsidy of the Children's Center. This fee will be used to subsidize student, faculty, and staff use of the Children's Center. The proposed fee will start at $5 for Fall Quarter 1995 and top out at $9 for Fall Quarter 2004."

"In order to maintain the services of the ASI Children's Center, an increase of $4 per quarter will be required to make the Children's Center fiscally sound. Approving this measure will increase quarterly student fees for the Children's Center, beginning in Fall Quarter 1995 to $5 in order to keep the Children's Center open. To avoid future deficits, this fee will increase by $1 every two years until 2004, where the Board of Directors will reassess the level of student subsidy of the Children's Center. This fee will be used to subsidize student, faculty, and staff use of the Children's Center. The proposed fee will start at $5 for Fall Quarter 1995 and top out at $9 for Fall Quarter 2004.

Statements will be compiled and on display at polling locations.

From page 1

"If you increase the value and student numbers, we will not be able to continue as a viable enterprise," Neel said.

"If in the proper way, it’s an excellent plan," Neel said.

"The trend is that the cost of education will continue to go higher."

"LAW SUIT: Case scheduled to be heard May 12"

"Adams was 47 years old when he was terminated. According to Rambuski, the case is scheduled to be heard in Superior Court on May 12."

"AIDS education must be funded from within the file, but will never be usable."

"The case has reached a level that must be asked to make the Children's Center fiscally sound. Approving this measure will increase quarterly student fees for the Children's Center, beginning in Fall Quarter 1995 to $5 in order to keep the Children's Center open. To avoid future deficits, this fee will increase by $1 every two years until 2004, where the Board of Directors will reassess the level of student subsidy of the Children's Center. This fee will be used to subsidize student, faculty, and staff use of the Children's Center. The proposed fee will start at $5 for Fall Quarter 1995 and top out at $9 for Fall Quarter 2004."

Statements will be compiled and on display at polling locations.
WASHINGTON - The Supreme Court will decide whether states may promote abstinence by banning price advertising for liquor.

The court said Monday it will review a free-speech challenge to Rhode Island's price-advertising ban, enforced since 1965 as an attempt to reduce consumption of alcoholic beverages.

The justices were told many states have similar laws that ban or in some way limit liquor price advertising. Listed as examples were Arkansas, Connecticut, Georgia, Kansas, Minnesota, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and South Carolina. A challenge to Pennsylvania's ban on price advertising, apparently the most similar to Rhode Island's, also is pending before the high court. It likely will not be acted on until the justices reach a decision in the Rhode Island case, probably sometime in 1996.

Two weeks ago, the nation's highest court struck down a federal law that banned brewers from putting alcohol-content information on the labels of beer cans and bottles. The justices said the 1936 federal law, aimed at preventing "strength wars" among beer manufacturers, violated free-speech rights.

In other matters Monday, the court:
- Let stand rulings that required a Bloomingdale, Mich., high school to take down a portrait of Jesus Christ that had been displayed on a hallway wall for 30 years. School officials had argued that displaying the portrait should be allowed because it offered no religious message and raised no church-state problem.
- Refused to reinstate a $12 million award won, and then lost, by two Columbia, Md., residents who said police did not adequately protect their family from domestic violence.
- Rhode Island's price-advertising ban is being attacked by a liquor retailer, 44 Liquor Mart Inc., and by Peoples Super Liquor Stores Inc., which sells liquor to Rhode Island residents from its two Massachusetts stores.

The 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the ban last year, ruling that it is a constitutionally permissible limitation on commercial speech. Rhode Island law allows advertising for alcoholic beverages, but requires publishers to exclude any mention of prices, or even the word "sale."

The prohibition was challenged after 44 Liquormart was informed in 1991 that it was in violation of the state law. A federal trial judge ruled that the ban violated free-speech rights, but the 1st Circuit reversed that ruling. The appeals court ruled heavily on a 1980 Supreme Court decision that set up a standard for judging the constitutionality of limits on commercial speech, which is not as protected as non-commercial forms of expression. The 1980 decision said commercial speech that is not misleading and concerns a legitimate public interest may be limited only if government has a substantial interest, but the limitation directly advances that interest, and the restriction is no more extensive than necessary.

The appeals court said the liquor regulatory authority was entitled to limit the states to the Constitution's commercial speech clause, which ended Prohibition, adds the 1982 standard a "presumption in favor of the validity of the state regulation in this area."

The appeal also contended that the state's interest isn't served by the ban on price advertising.
Poverty is world’s leading cause of death, UN says

By Bernadette Patry

GENEVA — Poverty is the greatest underlying cause of death, disease and suffering worldwide, the United Nations said Tuesday in its first survey of the state of the world’s health.

More than half the world’s 5.5 billion people cannot get the most essential drugs and about a third of the world’s children are unvaccinated, officials said in summarizing the 120-page World Health Report.

Hirosi Nakajima, director-general of the World Health Organization, urged a global drive to wipe out the worst forms of poverty.

“This means that everyone who can be vaccinated is vaccinated, everyone who can be given the AIDS drug is given the AIDS drug, and about a third of the world’s children can go to school,” he said Tuesday.

Smoking is the largest single preventable cause of illness and death, according to the report, which is issued every year.

It kills six people a minute and 3 million people a year and current trends indicate 10 million people join that list each day.

AIDS is the world’s most essential drug and about a third of the world’s children can go to school, according to the report.

“People are dying of preventable causes like cirrhosis of the liver,” said Nakajima.

“Some 2,000 people from at least 16 countries — survivors and their families — returned for visitors. Fourteen of them were murdered by the National Socialists, about a third of them were a part of the medical experiment in Dachau, and two of them were priests, mostly Poles, who were murdered at Dachau. That is what really makes it possible to understand what happened in Dachau, that the suffering of humanity, that the liberties that we enjoy today, were possible.”

For Visitors

At a Mass, Wetter said that on Good Friday in 1943, an SS man picked a priest with a piece of barbed wire, then wrapped it around the priest’s head, shouting, “Did you know that Christ died today?”

Apple Days ’95!

For more information visit

El Corral Bookstore Computer Department

Hours: Mon.-Thur., 7:45am - 6:00pm, Fri., 7:45am - 4:30pm, Sat., 10:00am - 3:00pm

Deferred Payment Plan, you can take home a Mac without having to make a single payment for up to 90 days. Which means you can also take the power to make any student’s life easier. The power to be your best.

Apple