SOME COMPANIES OFFER YOU
THE SUN, THE MOON AND THE STARS.

WE'RE A LITTLE MORE DOWN TO EARTH.

As a new graduate, you will hear career promises from varied companies. Many will offer the opportunity to be entrepreneurial, innovative and creative. But take a good look. Do they have competitive products? Market demand? The resources and stability for the long run?

PairGain Technologies does. We are a world leader in the design, manufacture and marketing of High-bit-rate Digital Subscriber Line (HDSL) products and systems. We have been listed 9th by Fortune and 3rd by Inc. in their ranking of the country's fastest growing public companies. With annual revenues in excess of $100 million and a 73% market share, our promise of a stellar future is a down-to-earth proposition. Put your engineering degree to work in one of the following areas:

- Analog and Digital Circuit Design Engineers
- VLSI Design Engineers
- Software Engineers
- Communications Systems Engineers

For more information, write to us: PairGain Technologies, Inc., 14402 Franklin Avenue, Tustin, CA 92680. Fax: (714) 730-3199, or e-mail to: hr@pairgain.com. See our Web Site at: http://www.pairgain.com. We are an Equal Opportunity Employer.

Editors' note: ins and outs of Visions '96

Visions — a relatively simple concept, right? Perhaps, if you’re a psychic or a cat or a pair of bifocals.

It’s not quite as simple when you’re a magazine. Let’s just say we’ve seen it all these past few weeks: exploding computer systems, printers who look at you funny when you ask them when your artwork deadline is, last-minute copy sneaking in past deadline, forgetting how to spell simple words like “shoes” after staring at a blue computer screen for 12 hours a day, and photographers who want you to buy them beer because they got their work done.

But somehow, somewhere, the publication you are now reading (we have been in the area for visitors will check out get that there’s more to life in San Luis Obispo County.

We also hope you’ll take the time to read up on your Cal Poly/San Luis Obispo history in Visions. Don’t worry there won’t be a quiz at the end, even though this is Cal Poly!

We feel it is important to remember what this campus used to be like. It has changed in many ways: there are many more students, there are new courses and new faces, and we are more ethnically diverse. But in other ways, the campus has remained the same. Overall, we are still a conservative student body with a liberal administration.

All kinds seem to migrate to San Luis Obispo — from the strict chemistry professor who marks points off if you forget to cross a “t” to the flamboyant art professor who conducts class from the roof of the Cal Poly Theatre. All these people contribute to our lives at Poly and help us grow as individuals. If nothing else, the university has helped us think on our own, scary as that may be.

Above all, we’ve managed to have fun putting Visions together. And we’ve managed to learn the importance of caffeine.

Through all the ups and downs, we were fortunate to have a dedicated staff who gave up their weekends, put in tons of overtime and, most importantly, didn’t ditch from the newsroom during our bouts of insanity.

Our reporters went out of their way for their stories, our fellow editors spent their free time helping to edit stories and prepare stories for production, and our production staff sacrificed their Saturday to provide you with this publication.

Without their hard work, there would be no Visions 1996.

-Natasha Collins and Karen Spaeder are coeditors of Visions who have worked so hard to prepare for this year’s event. The theme of “Imagination, Exploration and Celebration” certainly evokes the spirit of Cal Poly.

On behalf of all the new students, parents, alumni, members of the greater San Luis Obispo community and other friends of the University who are joining us for a celebration of Cal Poly’s many outstanding and exciting programs, projects and activities.

Open House provides an important opportunity for each instructional discipline to feature the academic achievements of its faculty, staff and students.

On Friday, April 19, we look forward to providing you with a special welcome. I know that each year more of our old and new friends find their way to Cal Poly, and I am sure that this year’s Open House will be no exception. I encourage our faculty, staff and students to take full advantage of this opportunity to express the pride you feel for your college, department, unit or program.

And to all our guests, I would like to say, “Enjoy!”

Sincerely,

Warren J. Baker

People are hailing the new Performing Arts Center on the Cal Poly campus as one of the most beautiful buildings of its type in the world, according to Myra Heslop, director of the Foundation for the Performing Arts Center (FPAC).

It has been touted as superior to the Sydney Opera House in Australia, she said.

The best part about this monumental mecca for the arts is that it's right in our own backyard.

This $30 million project has gone up right before students' eyes, as it can now be seen from many places in San Luis Obispo. From hills around town to the athletic fields on campus, one can see the massive building rise over the back of the Cal Poly campus.

The project was visualized over 25 years ago, by the city of San Luis Obispo, when it realized that a 1,500-seat auditorium was needed to showcase the arts. The original plan in 1985 called for the center to be built downtown, according to San Luis Obispo city administrator John Dunn.

The California Department of Water Resources' 100-mile pipeline set to go through parts of Poly Canyon elicited much controversy this year / Photos by Joe Johnson.

By Coline Cohnsmitte
Visions Staff Writer

Since the beginning of time, the Kern River has flowed from Cuesta Mountain through Stenner and Poly canyons. Purple, yellow and white spotted flowers cover the canyon hillsides. Although there are 300-year-old oak trees, as well as sycamore, eucalyptus and laurel trees, provide shade for much of the creek area, as well as homes to many animals. Several creeks flow from Cuesta Mountain through San Luis Obispo County, and butterflies flutter across the area, as birds sing in the background.

Students and those who appreciate the beautiful surroundings of the Central Coast provides can often be found hiking, biking or studying in this area. In a few weeks, this area will be completely changed. Bulldozers will tear apart the creek beds, rip through the grasslands and demolish the flowers. The quiet sound of birds will be replaced by manmade engine noises.

The California Department of Water Resources (DWR) is building a 100-mile pipeline which will pass through Poly and Stenner Canyons.

The $500-million pipeline project is an offspring of an aqueduct in Kern County, which runs from Kettleman City near Kern County to Vandenberg Air Force Base in Santa Barbara County. Since the 1960s, state engineers have planned the California aqueduct's extension into the Central Coast. In 1992, state water was voted on in the Department of Water Resources (DWR) building to pass through Cal Poly land.

As the bay was being planned, Jeff Cohen said the droughts in the 1980s are one reason why certain communities voted for state water. The communities within San Luis Obispo County that will benefit from the drinkable water include Pismo Beach, Morro Bay, Avila Beach, Oceano, the Californian Men's Colony and Cuesta College — not Cal Poly or San Luis Obispo.

Although San Luis Obispo — including Cal Poly — did not vote for state water, the pipeline will still cut through the land.

In the way of this pipeline are many precious oak trees and sensitive riparian habitats. This area is also used by the biological sciences and natural resource management departments as a natural laboratory. The natural resource management department offers the only hardwork management course in the Western United States.

The preservation of this land has created controversy between Cal Poly officials, professors, concerned students and the DWR. The topic has made headlines nationwide since 1994 in Mustang Daily and other local media.

It was at this time that Cal Poly officials and land owners adjacent to Cal Poly voiced "strong criticism over the state's handling of riparian rights," according to a Mustang Daily article.

Land owner Harold Nossi, 74, has lived on the same 1,700 acres of family land his entire life. He told the Mustang Daily: "The way the project has been dealt with is appalling. It's the worst I've ever seen."

The pipeline is to travel through three miles of Mission's land.

Mossi said DWR has not stayed true to some of their agreements with him. "You think you have an agreement and then you don't," he said.

A recent example of how Mossi said he has been slighted occurred when DWR recently needed to work on one of his pastures. To avoid an Unocal pipeline going through his property, he said they were going to do this project free of charge — roughly $600,000.

"This would have ended up in San Luis Obispo Creek," he said. "We are not talking about a little 100-mile pipeline, full of to five feet of water."

Mossi said that of all the companies he has dealt with in the many years he has had to work on the ranch, DWR has been the most frustrating because it keeps changing their plans.

"This land has been un­ neglected for three-quarters of a century and then DWR comes in and wants to change it," Mossi said.

What Mossi has experienced with the DWR is no exception with what Cal Poly has had to deal with as well. "When they finally were able to get agreement with DWR, the memorandum stated that certain areas would be left untouched," said Mossi.

More concern over the pipeline appeared in Mustang Daily in 1995. This article explained the biology department's uproar over DWR's Environmental Impact Report (EIR). Despite volumes of paper, the biology department, with the project, many questions related to where the final route would go and how it would be one to be answered.

But even with the university, a communication gap was apparent.

A biological sciences department memorandum stated "All university departments and colleges that would be impacted by this project have not had an opportunity to participate in the negotiations.

The memorandum also listed several concerns about the pipeline's impact on the riparian of the habitat, inadequate protection of the California Department of Water Resources' 100-mile pipeline set to go through parts of Poly Canyon elicited much controversy this year / Photos by Joe Johnson.

Although it began on a solitary field northeast of San Luis Obispo, California Polytechnic State University has evolved into a vital part of the Central Coast. Cal Poly is a blossoming place, with enrollment exceeding 15,000 as the university forged into the 21st century. With the "Learn By Doing" motto guiding students, Cal Poly has grown from a few buildings on a hillside to a bustling campus with more than 100 buildings.

The driving force behind the school's inception was journalist Myron Angel. In his book titled "History of the California Polytechnic School at San Luis Obispo," Angel outlines why he saw a need for Cal Poly before the turn of the century.

"This city was then one of the most neglected places in Californ­ ia and was struggling for recog­ nition and progress," Angel outlines why he saw a need for Cal Poly before the turn of the century.

Cal Poly affirms its commitment to creating and maintaining a community in which students, faculty and staff are able to work cooperatively in an atmosphere free from sexual harassment. Sexual harassment is unwelcome sexual behavior that violates federal and state legislation. The guidelines set forth in Cal Poly's Policy Against Sexual Harassment are designed to provide an appropriate avenue of redress for victims of sexual harassment and to provide due process for all parties.

Educating the Cal Poly community is a high priority in the crusade we've initiated to eliminate sexual harassment. We offer regular training to inform our campus constituents about sexual harassment guidelines, to provide updates on the evolving body of sexual harassment case law and to focus attention on the critical nature of our concerns. For our employees and students who may suffer the indignities of sexual harassment, we provide support and assistance through a structure of Sexual Harassment Advisers listed here and through the office of Women's Programs and Services located in the University Union, Room 217F, Ext. 2600.

The Poly "P" is one of the oldest and most memorable pieces of Cal Poly tradition. The 50-foot concrete structure has adorned the hill on the east side of campus since May 3, 1957.

The current "P" was built by members of the social fraternity Delta Sigma Phi, with the help of agricultural engineering majors. Yet the original letter dates back to 1913, when white-painted rocks outlined the shape of a "P," and the interior was covered with white lime.

The idea originated back in 1929 on the campus of Cal State. The "P" so it could be seen from three points: Highway 101, the north of the first Administration Building (now the present location of the "clock tower") and an airplane flying overhead.

Yet the "P" on the hill above Cal Poly is not the only "P" that attracts attention.

In 1926, a group of students climbed to the top of Bishop Peak and dangled over the cliff's edge to paint a "P" on the wall of solid rock.

And off and on for many years, the Bishop "P" was painted by entering freshmen as a form of initiation, according to an October 1959 copy of El Mustang, then the name of Cal Poly's newspaper.

At one time, it was rumored that a student fell to his death in the process, but that story has never been confirmed.

For more than 75 years, the "P" has stood on the hill behind Cal Poly as a symbol of school spirit.

Legend has it that the "P" was painted annually from the 1920s to the 1950s, following a traditional freshman-sophomore brawl.

The brawl was held each fall and consisted of three-legged races, tire races, a tug-of-war and a greased pole-climb, stated in a September 1959 copy of El Mustang. The loser of the brawl was required to maintain the emblem for the school year.

Later, in the 1960s, the rally club associated maintenance of the "P" and would pull a generator up the hill to light the Poly landmark during football games.

If the Mustangs were the victors, the "P" was painted to an "F" for victory. People who weren't able to attend the game could look up the hill to see if the Mustangs had won.

Over the years, the "P" has not been able to escape its share of controversy.

Opponents of the structure included ecology groups and those concerned with the appearance of the hill. Among other things, people complained the letter was an eyesore.

In 1981, an environmental design major circulated a petition to remove the "F" because he felt it abused the environment.

The petition was presented to Cal Poly President Warren Baker and claimed that the "big cement letter raped the land," according to an April 1981 copy of Mustang Daily.

Nonetheless, an overwhelming number of students indicated that the "P" should remain, and thus it has.

Since then, the prominence of the "P" has presented an irresistible target for vandalism.

In 1972 and 1977, the "P" had to be repaired after vandalism used a sledge hammer to break off pieces of concrete.

Vandalism still occurs today, as chunks of concrete lay halfway down the hill where the bottom of the "P" has been chipped away.

But perhaps the funniest times are when students decorate the "P" with enamel, dirt, construction paper or whatever else is handy.

I simply argue that the cross be raised again at the center of the market place as well as on the steeple of the church. I am recovering the claim that Jesus was not nurished in a cathedral between two candles. But on a cross between two thieves, on a town garbage heap. As a crossroad of politics so cosmopolitan that they had to write His title in Hebrew and in Latin and in Greek. That is where cynics talk smut, and thieves curse and soldiers gamble. Because that is where He died, and that is what He died about. And that is where Christ's men ought to be, and what church people ought to be about. — George MacLeod

For many fledgling, Division-I schools, the early stages of growth for an athletic program can be painful and bumpy. Athletic directors need patience to make their programs successful enough to beat other top schools in the country.

For Cal Poly Athletic Director John McCutcheon, Cal Poly's terrible two weren't too terrible at all. In what has been Cal Poly's second year as a Division-I program, the Mustangs surprised a few people by showing up where you'd least expect them: the front page of the Los Angeles Times sports page, on ESPN, and even in the NCAA Tournament facing UCLA (in men's soccer, of course).

Cal Poly's next major appearance will be in the Big West Conference, its first jump out of virtual-independent territory. By Mark Armstrong

If all goes as planned, fans won't have to choose between the bleachers of San Luis Obispo and the new stands of the Ozzie Smith Baseball Stadium in Sinsheimer Park, but the bleachers of San Luis Obispo will no longer be cheering from dedication Jan. 30. The jump will pit the Mustangs against such as UC Santa Barbara, Cal State Fullerton, Utah State, New Mexico State and Long Beach State, to name a few.
What have we done?
A Cal Poly Plan Steering Committee was developed with three members from each constituency on campus (students, faculty, staff and administration), and one member from the Labor Council.

The Committee was charged with the development of a proposal which would address:
- Renewal/enhancement of educational quality,
- Increased student learning and timely progress to degree completion,
- Improvement in institutional productivity, and
- Development of accountability and assessment measures and procedures.

How did we find out what was important?
During Fall Quarter, survey information was gathered from students, parents, honored alumni, former ASI Presidents, Advisory Board Members, faculty and staff. The surveys provided a picture of what people feel to be special about Cal Poly and what we could do to make the University even better. Some common themes in the student survey responses: class availability, especially in major courses, was a top concern, followed by teaching effectiveness, career planning services, library access and academic advising.

What is the reason for creating the Cal Poly Plan?
In order to maintain its quality programs, Cal Poly must respond to serious external pressures facing all of public higher education: pressures to enroll more students, operate under tighter budgets, and answer demands for greater accountability. These challenges are especially threatening to a polytechnic university with many high-cost programs. Cal Poly has to change, or it will slowly and predictably lose its ability to provide a superior education.

What about a fee increase?
An increase in student fees is proposed to supplement other sources of revenue. The new fees will be invested to benefit student education directly and visibly.

FAQs:

Q: Why should students support the Cal Poly Plan?
A: First, students will be able to graduate faster, saving money in the long run. All students will see the quality of their education enhanced. And by protecting Cal Poly's reputation, diplomas will retain their value for all graduates.

Q: Are student fees the only source of income that will be used for improvements?
A: State tax money will be redirected toward Cal Poly Plan priorities, and private donations will be used to support programs as well as financial aid.

Q: Why do Cal Poly fees compare to costs at other universities?
Tuition charges nationally in 1994-95 at four-year public universities were 70% more than Cal Poly's current state university fee. Here are some comparisons:

Q: What have we done?
A: Surveys showed that students want improved advising to help them better meet their academic goals, so the Committee hopes that the campus community will make proposals in this area.

Q: Will deans determine how the money is spent?
A: Deans and vice presidents administer campus units; they will be involved in decisions. But the Steering Committee will review all requests, listen to what deans and others have to say, and then provide advice to President Baker.

Q: How will the campus learn about funding decisions?
A: There will be no secrets. A list of all proposals will be published, and the University will be told the reasons why final selections were made.

How will the money be allocated?
Proposals by individuals and campus units to make improvements in the investment areas will be reviewed by the deans, vice presidents and Steering Committee. The Committee will then monitor funded activities to ensure they accomplish their goals.

Q: I heard the administration wants to make changes in student advising?
A: Surveys showed that students want improved advising to help them better meet their academic goals, so the Committee hopes that the campus community will make proposals in this area.

Q: How will we know the money is spent efficiently?
A: The Steering Committee will monitor the use of funds, report to the campus, and make future planning recommendations that could include changes in both the proposed student fee structure and Cal Poly Plan expenditures, depending on the performance of campus units.

Q: Why not pay for more library hours?
A: Redirected State money will be used to restore library hours.

Q: What's being done for students with financial need?
A: Additional financial aid will come next year from student fees, private donations, and other University resources. More employment opportunities on campus will also help out. In following years, about one-third of all supplemental fees will be set aside for financial aid.

ARTS: city, university and private sector worked together on arts center

We'll be doing large-scale music and dance shows with anywhere from 60 to 100 people on stage at one time," he added.

Hoskins expects shows by the Whirling Dervishes from Turkey, and Koto — a Japanese percussion group — as well as the center's commitment to providing family programs and classical and contemporary music.

Hoskins also said that ASI, who have put on larger pop-music events in the past, will be the main promoters of those types of shows at the center.

Discount tickets will be available to the public. Ticket purchases to four or more events will get a discount.

"With 33 shows already planned, it shouldn't be a problem filling the place up," Hoskins said.

Hoskins said that all but three Cal Poly Arts presentations will be in the center.

"We really want to showcase what it can do," Hoskins said.

The center is expected to wow audiences, since it is considered to be a state-of-the-art building.

According to Hoskins, the center will be as close to acoustically perfect as possible to get to that stage, sound engineers will have to toy with different aspects of Whirling Dervishes that rises and a huge pipe-organ.

The center will serve different functions at different levels, according to a Music Department press release. It will be an extension of audience seating for plays and a huge stage, larger than the stage at Carnegie Hall, for the orchestra in a certain setting.

Rand Regier, managing director of the center, said that phase-one construction is about 95 percent complete, and phase two construction has begun to equip and finish the inside of the center.

When construction ends, however, the financial worries won't, and many eyes will be watching the performance of the center.

According to Dunn, all parties involved are "very concerned" over the successful operation of the center. The Commission for the Performing Arts Center has been established to run the center and report to Cal Poly President Warren Baker.

"The one provision we made that was any operational deficit will be picked up by FPAC and the city (of San Luis Obispo)," Dunn said.

However, Dunn expressed optimism and excitement over the center's opening and the quality of shows and events that are going to come to the area. This, Dunn hopes, will overshadow any hints of doubt about the problems that the center is certainly destined to have.

Glenn Irvin, associate vice president for academic affairs, said that the center is one of the three most prominent buildings on the Central Coast, with the San Luis Obispo Mission and Hearst Castle rounding off the list.

Good times are just around the corner, as the center is set to open September 27, 1996. Opening events are set to continue for nine days, with different acts each day.

WOW is an intensive week designed to make everyone comfortable both with the campus and with San Luis Obispo.

Cal Poly chooses to run a week-long program without academic advising because "we feel the whole quality of the welcoming atmosphere is dependent on the interaction between the incoming students and the continuing students," said WOW adviser Andrene Kauw-Lenting.

Every incoming student has the opportunity to participate in WOW. Participants — known as "WOWies" — are divided into groups of about 20 incoming students. Each group is led by two counselors.

Counselors spend spring quarter participating in a thorough training program. During spring training, CITs also learn group dynamics, how to facilitate a group, how to motivate people to go along with a group and to be sensitive to people who don't want to go along with the group.

There are more than 500 CITs going through training this spring, and their reasons for participating are as varied as their height.

"I thought it would be fun. I had such a good time being a WOWie that I thought it would be fun being a counselor," said Jeff Brooks, a freshman CIT.

Christine Watkins, another CIT, said she wanted to have the same positive influence on her future WOWies as her counselors did on her.

"I believe the WOW program is important because it provides a week where incoming students..."
DOWNTOWN: New businesses bring competition to the SLO community

"anchor" businesses for the community," he said, referring to Jason Stein is in his sixth year at Cal Poly and has experienced downtown in a few of its stages over the years.

"It's a lot more commercial now because of the whole Gap complex," he said, referring to downtown in a few of its stages.

Cal Poly improved the area.

you would have to go to Madonna mammal members share those changes downtown, including the new businesses downtown," Holley explained. "It's definitely an improvement."

Many students and community members share those same feelings for the revitalized downtown. Besides the new businesses, Marsh Street was rebuilt and the benches on Higuera Street improved the area.

"The shopping has definitely improved," Stein said. "Before, you would have to go to Madonna to buy pants, but now there are stores like The Gap." Michael Hoffman, owner of San Luis Obispo Brewing Co. (SLO Brew), is positive about the changes downtown, including the number of bars and restaurants that are opening. Some problems have followed the opening of these businesses, however. "It creates a lot more competition," he said. "It's better for the community."

"There's a lot more vomit around," Heselton said. "No one's making much money on drinks but people are getting pretty messed up." Despite Hoffman's concerns, the number of bars downtown is continuing to increase. The newest member will be a micro-brewery that will fill the empty building once occupied by Earthling Bookstore.

Owner of Mother's Tavern and Cal Poly graduate Paul Brandt has lived in the area on and off for eight years. Brandt said the number of bars and restaurants downtown has little effect on his business.

"The other bars in town weren't a factor," Brandt said about his decision to open a business. "It was a consideration but not a factor."

The city attributes much of its commercial growth to the newly-built Downtown Centre that occupies the entire block between Chorro and Morro Streets. The complex was built by Copeland's, which occupies a large portion of the block. Some of the new businesses that have opened there include Fresh Choice, Ben & Jerry's and Starbuck's Coffee.

Barnes and Noble book store is also housed in the Downtown Centre and has created tension among the established bookstores. While some are seeing a decrease in sales because of Barnes and Noble, other businesses, like Phoenix Books on Monterey Street, encourage the new bookstore.

"It hasn't affected sales much at all," Phoenix Books owner Bruce Miller said. "San Luis deserves to have a good new-book store." Miller is optimistic about his new competitor because he said his business caters to a different market of book buyers.

"I think we're sort of in the same business but different parts," Miller said regarding his sales market which is predominantly used and rare books.

One of the bookstores that didn't withstand the arrival of Barnes and Noble was Earthling Bookstore which closed last summer.

"I always thought of Earthling as the hallmark of San Luis Obispo," Stein said. "It's too bad they had to take off."

Other bookstores have also struggled with the new competition in town. Rick Wiegens, owner of Leon's books on Higuera Street, said their business has suffered because of the larger competitor.

"They take away from our business, but we don't have the resources to contend," Wiegens said. "We're trying to focus on out-of-print books."

All of the bookstores agree that Barnes and Noble has created more competition in the area although not all of the bookstores are pleased with this new market. Centered among the established bookstores is the new market.

"It's always good to get more books," Wiegens said, "but they haven't created more competition."

Barnes and Noble Manager Jane McIlvick said the intent of such a large bookstore in a city that already has a competition is to expand the market.

"Our goal was to bring in more books, more buyers and more readers," she said. "I hope it has been a plus for all the bookstores in town."

So many books are published every year and every day," McIlvick added. "Certainly no bookstore has enough square footage to carry all of them. We

The new fields would provide more room for athletes, young and old alike.

Officials don't know when they will break ground or how long construction will take, but Associate Athletic Director Chuck Sleeper said they would like to have the baseball stadium completed by the time Cal Poly baseball enters the Big West.

Cal Poly is committing 40 acres of land for the project which cannot receive state funding because it does not relate to academics. Nonetheless, officials said students will not pay additional fees or be asked to pass a referendum for the funding of the new athletic fields.

Over the next 18 months, Cal Poly will conduct a gift campaign and league funding. VIP-donor box leasing and season ticket offers will also be available.

"This project will come to fruition with private financial support," McCutcheon said in a press release. "We also hope to attract public funding from the various user groups of the new facilities. This project will serve as a lasting tribute to Cal Poly's rich athletic tradition, and it will become the cornerstone of our success as a Division-I athletic program."

Officials said Division-I programs typically rely on private and public sources for funding and Baggett said he is confident Cal Poly will raise the necessary funds.

Cal Poly athletics started a six-week fundraiser April 2 called Mustang Stampede.

"Mustang Stampede will enlist the help of volunteers throughout the community to raise money through season-ticket sales. A $500 donation to the Stampede Club will include two season tickets for two different sports."

Gift contributions can be made in the form of cash, stock, property and a number of other methods. Pledges can be made over a 3-5 year time period. For more information, or to make a contribution, contact:

Cal Poly's unsordid past:

it's no Berkeley

Student apathy seemed to be the norm

By Amy Conley
and Sandra Naughton

Like most of society, Cal Poly has experienced drastic changes since the 1960s. The dorms became coed, the University Union was built, and three university presidents made their mark on the campus. Besides the obvious changes, the school has transformed on a more fundamental level, such as the makeup of the student body, their involvement and the issues they face.

The student population has grown from 4,713 students in 1960 to 16,023 this past fall quarter.

"It was a very friendly campus," said Peggy Milbourn, who has worked for campus food services since 1964. "President (Julian) McPhee wanted everyone to talk to each other, so everyone said 'hello' to everyone else."

The percentage of female students has also expanded greatly, from 17.5 percent in 1960 to 43 percent on campus today.

The proportion of different majors has not fluctuated much since the 1960s, although the number of liberal arts majors has increased from 9.5 percent to 17.0 percent, while engineering majors have decreased from 32.6 percent to 24 percent.

Although no official records of the ethnic composition of the student body exist for the 1960s, most recall the campus as predominantly white. It was almost exclusively white," said Sunny Dills, an English lecturer and 1968 Cal Poly graduate.

"Today, while students continue to comprise the majority, accounting for 50 percent of the student body. However, more ethnicities are represented on campus: 10.5 percent Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders, 9.7 percent Hispanic and Mexican Americans, 3 percent Filipinos, 1.9 percent African American, 1.5 Native American and 10 percent reported another ethnicity or failed to respond."

Despite these drastic shifts in the size and composition of the student body, the attitudes on campus have not paralleled these changes. Student apathy appears to have prevailed in the 1960s and many believe it still dominates the campus.

Although images of sit-ins, peace rallies and love festivals are often associated with the college campuses of the 1960s, Cal Poly did not live up to that ideal image, Dills said.

"The faculty has generally been more liberal and the student body on the conservative side," Dills said. "But I think that's a healthy situation for students and faculty."

Dills said many students gained liberal perspectives from their professors, who also led them into activism. Cal Poly was a relatively quiet campus in comparison to other colleges in the United States in the 1960s, Milbourn said. She said Cal Poly students did follow the activism trend in the 1960s, though on a smaller scale.

Thirty years later, Cal Poly's student body appears to be even less politically and socially active, said Everado Martinez-Inzunza, coordinator of Multicultural Programs and Services.

"The student population is very centered on academics and their future careers, and are generally apathetic to community and national issues," he said.

He pointed out a lecture on the affirmative action debate delivered last month by a nationally published author, which only six students attended.

Martinez-Inzunza said that even though this issue would potentially affect many students, especially ethnic students, indifference abounds.

"Although we have made great gains as far as ethnic representation on campus, only a small number of students of color have demonstrated concern about such issues," he said.

However, students who choose to become active on campus outside of the classroom See 60s-90s page 27

"We got a bunch of watermelons and took them to a local park where we carved them out to fit our personalities."

Christine Watkins
Freshman CIT

"Look Mommy! That girl has a beehive on the top of her head."

60s-90s: Students today continue past Poly battles said.

CITs receive long lists of possible activities they and their WOWies can participate in during WOW week.

For instance, when Watkins was a WOWie, some of the highlights were going to the Graduate for a night of country dancing, and a bonfire at the beach.

Her favorite part involved watermelons and Farmer's Market.

"We got a bunch of watermelons and took them to a local park where we carved them out to fit our personalities," she said. "Then, after getting completely sticky and dirty, we put them on our heads and walked downtown through Farmer's Market."

"The thing I really remember is a little girl who was tugging at her mommy's skirt and yelling 'Look Mommy! That girl has a beehive on the top of her head.'"

Watkins said she also enjoyed the times all the groups came together for a dance in Mott Gym and for WOW-A-Bama.

WOW-A-Rama brings all the WOWies together to play a multitude of games that are designed to encourage people to meet others.

At the beginning of the evening, WOW alumnus Frank Warren, the master of ceremonies, promises that each person will meet everyone else by the end of the night.

Meeting new people and encouraging friendships is an integral part of WOW.

"WOW made me feel more comfortable because I was able to meet people beyond my own dorm, so it gave me a more diverse group of friends," Watkins said.

WOW also highlights opportunities available in downtown San Luis Obispo.

One afternoon during the week, all of WOW descends on the downtown area for SLObound. This year's theme is "A Magical Mystery Tour."

The sidewalks swarm with WOWies who stop into the stores of the downtown area.

Every counselor has a list of stores that offer coupons and free stuff (from ice cream to compact disks to massage oil).

Before leaving town, each group stops at "Bubblesgem Alley" to leave their group numbers on the infamous walls.

The alley is covered in graffiti, but rather than spray paint, the medium is chewed gum.

Bubblesgem Alley was one of Brooks' most memorable moments from his WOW week.

"We felt that our WOW group should have a place on the alley so every person in the group chewed a pack of gum and handed it up to me, and I wrote their number on the wall."

WOW also encourages the WOWies to contemplate issues during their college career.

"All groups attend awareness seminars which present skits inviting discussion about issues such as drugs and alcohol, assault and diversity."

The WOW program has only a few rules. For instance, alcohol is not allowed at any WOW event, whether it's in the bottle, or circulating through a WOWie's bloodstream.

Another important rule is "No squeezing the WOWie." This holds counselors to the ethical standard of avoiding romantic relationships with their WOWies, at least during WOW week.

One goal of the program is to teach incoming students to respect each other's views and backgrounds, Kiawi-Lenting said.

"The week presents opportunities for people to see things from another's point of view for the first time, Kiawi-Lenting said."

Last year's WOW week cost $65, and this year's should be about the same, according to Kiawi-Lenting.

The fee allows students living in the dorms to move in and begin their meal plan a week early.

WOW also provides meals for off-campus students and subsidizes meals for counselors.

"I found it was easy to get to know the teaching staff. I am more likely to relate to the students and know about the students' lives," Kiawi-Lenting said.

DEL MONTE: Faithful customer put name on her seat

From back page

According to waitress Debbie Welle, the cafe boasts its share of regular customers. One customer, Elizabeth MacQueen, even went so far as to install a name plate in her favorite spot.

The regulars, and anyone else who stops by, can get breakfast, lunch or dinner at Del Monte. The menu lists several dishes, from beef stew to liver and onions to salmon in papaya-cinnamon sauce. And when it is warm outside, patrons can dine in the patio.

The Del Monte Cafe is on Santa Barbara Street in San Luis Obispo.

HEARST CASTLE: Architect Julia Morgan designed the mansion with Hearst

From back page

The mansion, named La Casa Grande, was created by Hearst and Julia Morgan, a world-renowned architect, to represent the social and architectural focus of the hilltop. While ground breaking began in 1922, it was not ready for full-time occupancy until 1927.

Hearst and Morgan succeeded in making the mansion the social focus. As you drive up the visitors' access road, the two towers of the Mediterranean Revival Mansion peak through the trees.

The castle, which is operated by the California State Parks, offers daily tours of the grounds and buildings. There is so much to see that four day-tours and one evening-tour are needed to give visitors a complete tour of the estate. Each tour takes about two hours.

Tour 1 is recommended for the overall Hearst Castle experience. Visitors begin the tour at La Casa del Sol, an 18-room guest cottage, which was one of the first structures to be completed. Visitors then enter the esplanade and gardens. Marble sculptures, palm trees and koi fish grace the grounds. Hearst had flowering plant trees in each season to ensure he had a variety of colorful bloom all year round. Roses, azaleas, fuchsias and camellias fill the air with a light floral scent.

Finally, visitors return to the main house to tour the ground floor. Old home movies of the Hearsts and celebrations at the castle are shown. When you tour the Refectory, the only dining room on the estate, and the billiard room, you can just imagine the rooms filled with Hollywood stars.

Tour 2 focuses on the upper floors of La Casa Grande. The library, which houses more than 5,000 books, also includes a collection of ancient Greek vases dating from 500 B.C. Hearst's collection of vases and other art treasures were shipped by steamer to San Simeon Bay along with the steel, iron and cement needed for construction.

Visitors also get a glimpse into the private life of Hearst when they tour the Gothic suite and study. The interior design of the suite was influenced by his extensive travels throughout Europe.

Tour 3 includes a tour of the 10-room guest cottage, La Casa del Monte. The cottage overlooks the Santa Lucia Mountains. This is the only structure that Hearst did not extensively alter.

"The Building of a Dream" video is shown during Tour 3 in the theater. This documents the construction of the estate using photographs and film from the 1920s and 1930s. Tramp steamers empty their contents into the port of San Simeon and giant chain-driven trucks hauled materials to the mountaintop building site.

Tour 4, which is only available April through October, includes a special sight for visitors, the hidden terrace. This includes a stairs and fountain that were built over in later construction and only found during modern restoration.

Visitors on this tour also have a chance to experience the beauty of art and architecture—which is usually seen only in museums.

Reservations for the tours are recommended. For tickets call 1-800-444-4445 or visit a MISTIX outlet in the vicinity of Hearst Castle.

BUSINESSES: SLO has a history of exposing fads

"This town seems to have a lot of choices for eating and coffee," Yang said. "Other bagel shops have a different product than us."

One of the new bagel shops added to downtown's extensive variety of eateries is the Bagel Basement. Co-owner Robert Ogden opened the shop with a partner in December 1994.

"My partner and I liked the town a lot," Ogden said. "We’re from Santa Barbara so we knew the area."

He said there haven’t been any negative effects from the new bagel shops in town.

"It’s made people more aware of bagels," Ogden said. "It’s a mid-90s fad, just like frozen yogurt and burger joints in the ’80s. It’s a hot, new food item."

Like bagels, downtown is a breeding place for "mid-90s fads," but as the history of the city shows, San Luis Obispo has a tradition of exposing these fads to the community in a positive way. Whether it was the popularity of the late 18th-century, religious expansion, immigration during the gold rush, or '90s foods and fashions, it is safe to say that San Luis Obispo is a sign of the times.

The Inn behind the name

Alex Madonna's world renowned inn is a SLO icon

Abh! San Luis Obispo. The clear, blue sky blends fluidly with the vibrant green horizon. Above the horizon, craggy oak trees stand guard over the quiet city. Over the hill, past the enormous bright pink and white hotel, the — What?! Pink and white hotel?!

Yes, indeed. And it's not just the color of the Madonna Inn and its large freeway sign that makes it stand out in San Luis Obispo. In fact, the sheer size of the resort, which sits on more than 2,200 acres, is enough to make people take notice.

Reviews and stories about the hotel have surfaced in such newspapers as the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, said Assistant Manager Lisa Stansel. The Madonna Inn was even used by MTV for six weeks as its "home base" backdrop on the House of Style fashion show.

The publicity kit also tells of an instance when owners Alex and Phyllis Madonna were visiting Switzerland. When asked where they came from, the Madonnas said, "San Luis Obispo." The curious Swiss, unaware of their guests' identities, asked how far that was from the Madonna Inn and said:

The hotel's one-of-a-kind architecture and rooms, according to Stansel, is what gives the Madonna Inn its one-of-a-kind status.

One of the more popular rooms, according to Stansel, is the "Caveman Room," which is made entirely from rock.

The publicity kit also tells of a few more popular rooms:

- The Caveman Room: usually booked 18 months in advance.
- The Pick and Shovel Room, a three-bedroom, country-decorated suite that can sleep up to nine people.
- The Inn behind the name.

Splash Cafe
The Splash Cafe in Pismo Beach, located 10 miles south of San Luis Obispo, offers an award-winning clam chowder that is, hands down, the best on the Central Coast. The small beach-style cafe, with its surfer atmosphere, opened seven years ago on Pomeroy Street, just walking distance from the pier. Since its existence, owners Ross and Joanne Currie have brought home an award every year from the Pismo Beach Clam Festival chowder contest. With five first-place finishes under their belts, they have been selling the best chowder for the past two years. More than 10,000 gallons of chowder are consumed every year by everyone from visiting movie stars to high school students enjoying their lunch break. You can enjoy a generous portion served in a famous sour-dough-bread bowl or you can take up to a quart of it home. It may be thin along a wind, a few minutes due to the high demand, but as they say, "good things come to those who wait." In this case, it may be true.

Sycamore Mineral Springs
For a relaxing, good time, Sycamore Mineral Springs — located one mile off Highway 101 on Avila Beach Drive — offers soothing mineral-water hot tubs. The natural hot springs resort has a perfect way to surround yourself with all the essentials for enjoyment and relaxation.

The spas are a way to unwind after a hard day, in your own private tub along with a winding path in the wooded countryside atmosphere.

The natural springs resort has been offering customers this natural beauty since 1897. Not only can you rent your own private roadside spa by the hour, but each room features its own full-size mineral spa on a private balcony.

Avila Beach
As the most popular beach on the Central Coast, Avila offers visitors a small surf-side village full of variety and uniqueness. The village of only 350 people — located three miles off Highway 101 — is situated on a small hillside with almost every house having a view of the ocean. The main street is only three-blocks long, but borders the beach, giving the village a sense of warmth. The Old Custom House, now a popular restaurant, was the first official building dedicated in 1937. Another popular place to visit is Mr. Rick's, a beach-side bar that gives you a place to get out of the heat and relax. Not only are there a variety of shops along the main street, but an array of activities are available at Avila, including fishing, crabbing, surfing, walking on the beach, or pie Oman. The old ocean, you can find cute little shops, a salon, the Old Harmony Pasta Factory, with homemade pasta cooked to order — and the Harmony winery tasting room. In addition to the shops in the creamery, a glass-blowing studio, hand-thrown pottery shop and a wedding chapel add to the beauty of the small tranquil town. In the post office is the only building that has stayed open since 1914, where the postmaster continues to stamp Harmony on all the letters.

With a number of different owners over the years, the town is now looking for a new owner, as the current owner has put the town up for sale for $1.6 million.

Gun Alley
Located in downtown San Luis Obispo on Higuera Street next to Edgeworks, you can find a small alley in which the walls are covered with gun. This place is known as "gun alley" to locals and gives visitors a way to leave something behind that will stay around for a long time. This one-of-a-kind alley is a sight to see and a place to leave your mark in San Luis Obispo.

Linn's
Linn's began in Cambria in 1979 as a "Pick Your Own Berry" farm. Since then, it has grown to become a small chain of bakery/restaurant/gift shops stretching from Paso Robles to Cambria to San Luis Obispo. In 1989, the Cambria farm was joined by a gift shop and a full-service restaurant, according to Administrative Assistant Tim Vaughan. Linn's has since popped up in San Luis Obispo and Paso Robles. The San Luis Obispo Linn's is a combo similar to the Cambria shop. The Paso Robles shop does not yet have a sit-down restaurant, Vaughan said.

In addition, Linn's has a mail-order gift service.

Linn's is on Main Street in Cambria, at 12th and Riveride in Paso Robles and on the corner of Marsh and Chorro in San Luis Obispo. The original Linn's Farm see HOTSPOTS page 37

PIPELINE: May cause erosion, irrevocable damage

Compensation plans for the destroyed habitat and the potentially lethal releases of chlorine.

In January 1995, biology department technician Phil Ashley, who has been actively involved with the issue since November 1994, expressed his distress over the pipeline in a Mustang Daily article.

"We'll be like Sherman's Army coming through with tanks," Ashley said in the article.

Ashley is upset with the width of the construction zone. He said it will be at least 150-feet wide in most places. This large gap will be used to put in a four-foot-wide pipeline. He is concerned that the wide gap will promote soil erosion and cause irreversible damage to sensitive biological systems near Poly Canyon.

Within this area are several oak trees in direct line of DWR's path. Those oaks are known for their important role in keeping the hillsides intact, as well as being a vital player in the ecological process.

"We are allowing the trees to be destroyed for the future," said Steven Marx, English professor and environmentalist.

Earlier this year, Cal Poly had not received any notice of the entire project and many campus representatives, including President Warren Baker, Vice President of Administration and Finance Frank Lebans and V.L. Holland, biology department head, were trying to negotiate a different route to avoid the trees. The ball began crumbling down.

Marx was hiking through Stinner Creek on March 21, when he saw construction workers bulldozing their way toward the oak trees. Marx took the liberty to tell them that if they go any further, they would have to go through him. They stopped.

Cal Poly prepared to take legal action. DWR had proceeded to begin work when no agreement between the two parties had been reached yet. But Cal Poly received a letter of apology the next day. It stated that no other work would be done until all parties were in full agreement to the conditions of the clearing or construction.

"It'll be like Sherman's Army coming through with tanks." Phil Ashley

Biology department technician

At that time, 30 of the 40 oaks in the area were to be destroyed. But President Baker and other officials meet with DWR to try to reroute their path.

In the end, the original route remained. But DWR promised to save as many oaks as possible, and every designated tree turn out during construction that has not already been surveyed and approved for removal, will be spared.

At least four oaks in Stinner Creek will be destroyed in the process, and there are concerns that more will be damaged.

Besides the oak trees that Cal Poly fought for, there are other concerns about what will happen when DWR plows through. There is a sensitive watershed and many other types of trees in the area that will be harmed.

In Mustang Daily, Marx stated he was not happy with the proposal that Poly had made with DWR. He said he is skeptical of the contractor's ability to use trenching and boring techniques to take the pipeline under the trees, instead of simply going around them.

But other agreements were settled between the two parties. A Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between DWR and Cal Poly stated that state officials will have to pay $10,000 for any tree that is torn out during construction that has not already been removed. See CANYONS page 27.

HISTORY: Farming club started Poly Royal in 1933

would have denoted us.

In a dissertation by Richard Moody in 1969, he concluded that McPhee "was the most significant advocate for vocational education in California."

On Sept. 21, 1967, in his first year on the job, Robert Kennedy welcomed students and faculty back in a front-page article in the Mustang Daily.

"We are proud of our students at Cal Poly," Kennedy said. "Their good conduct and good citizenship as students and later career accomplishments have given this college an excellent reputation."

The faculty, nonacademic staff and administrators are dedicated to the concept that we are all here to provide the best educational experience for our students. At that time, Cal Poly's enrollment had climbed to 9,314. One of the longest traditions at Cal Poly was Poly Royal, which began in 1933 by the Future Farmers of America club.

Ken Barclay, director of Student Life and Activities, was on the faculty advising board for Poly Royal for 10 years, said the activity worked well for a long time to highlight academics.

"Poly Royal really helped to show off the quality of education and the club really showed off the quality of life," Barclay said.

After 57 years, Poly Royal was ended by current university President Warren Baker after a rift broke out in 1990.

"It got too big," Barclay said. "I applaud the efforts of the Open House committee to refocus their program to more represent the concept of Poly Royal in an early time."

"What makes it special to me is the quality of the students." Ken Barclay

Director of Student Life and Activities

Barclay has watched the university go through many things in his 17 years at Cal Poly.

"What makes it special to me is the quality of the students," Barclay said, "the pleasure of working with a number of outstanding individuals during my years at Cal Poly."

"One of the many positive things is the level of student involvement at this college," Barclay continued. "There are 350 active student organizations on campus and over 85 percent of the student body is involved in at least one club."

During Open House weekend, you can take a look at Cal Poly's yearbooks dating back to the first California Polytechnic Journa in 1906 to the last El Rodeo in 1990. The yearbooks will be on display on the second floor of the Kennedy Library.

Morro Bay

Founded in 1870, Morro Bay provides sea, sand, surf, scenery and shopping for San Luis Obispo. The beach city’s landmark, a 575-foot prehistoric volcano called Morro Rock, was named by explorer Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo in 1542, according to the Morro Bay World Wide Web page. The colossal rock juts out of the water next to Atascadero State Beach. Inside the town, tourists and residents walk and shop on the strip known as the Embankments. Scores of gift shops, shell shops and seafood restaurants line the thoroughfare. In addition, visitors can see hundreds of marine creatures at the Morro Bay Aquarium on the Embankments. Just south of Morro Bay lies the 7,900-acre marina that is Morro Bay State Park. Within its boundaries there are sand dunes, pine and eucalyptus trees and more than 250 species of birds. There is also a 113-acre campground where visitors can settle in.

Morro Bay lies about 10 miles northwest of San Luis Obispo on Hwy 1.

Kiendike Cafe

If you want to try Reindeer Sausage pizza and experience an Alaskan environment, step into the Kiendike Cafe—located at 104 Bridge St. in Arroyo Grande—for good eats and entertainment.

You can grab a bowl of peanuts—feel free to throw the shells on the floor—and enjoy the live entertainment on weekends.

Friday you can sit back and enjoy the music of the Dixieland Jazz Band. But if you want to get involved, visit on Saturday and join the sing-along with the old-timey band.

Madonna and Bishop Peak

Find the mountain with the “M” emblazoned on the side, and you’ve got yourself a hike with a rewarding view of San Luis Obispo at the end. It is a fairly easy hike on a groomed trail that is perfect for mountain bikes, too.

If you feel like a little bit of a challenge, try out Bishop Peak, which is Madonna’s sister morro. You can experience different terrain—dirt road, steep hills and a touch of rock climbing—and get a bird’s-eye view of the city.

Pozo Saloon

As the door creaks open at the Pozo Saloon in Santa Margarita, you are immediately transported back to the old west, complete with a wood-burning stove and a horseshoe pit out back. Take a stab at sticking a dollar to the ceiling—a waitress.

While waiting for your burger, take a gander at the newspaper clippings on the wall or say hello to the stuffed game animals displayed inside. Enjoy playing a game of pool or dancing the night away in the adjoining room. You can find good eats and fun for the whole family.

Apple Farm

The word “welcome” is the best way to express how the Apple Farm wants you to feel on your visit to the charming Victorian Inn.

You may enjoy a good old American meal in the charming country restaurant or visit the beautiful garden, with its wide variety of landscaping...

SPORTS: teams ready to jump to Big West

Football
Cal Poly Football has made a strong showing in its first two seasons in Division I-AA, compiling a 12-10 record behind second-year coach Andre Patterson.

In 1995, the Mustangs finished second to Sacramento State with a 2-1 record in the America West Conference. Statistically speaking, they finished first in the conference in total offense, total defense, rushing offense, and rushing defense.

“We put up some very impressive numbers, and ranked right up there in Division I-AA offensively,” Coach Andre Patterson said in a press release. “To rank second in offense in Division I-AA is only our second year in the division is very impressive.”

The Mustangs compiled a 5-4 record overall in 1995, defeating opponents like Cal State Northridge and Big Sky rival Eastern Washington.

Senior quarterback Mike Fisher entered the Cal Poly record books in 1995 with six categories, including passing yards, total offense and completions. James Tuthill kicked his way into the books as well, distinguishing himself among the nation’s best in points by kicking, field goals and field goal attempts.

The team will lose a number of players next season, but the Mustangs have built a steady foundation in which to grow in the future.

Soccer
Both men’s and women’s soccer teams made the most of their second year in the big time by posting impressive records as independents.

The men’s team went 14-3-1 for the season, but were painfully snubbed by the NCAA for the playoffs.

The men, however, were a little more fortunate. The Mustangs’ playoff hopes looked bleak after a loss to Santa Clara at the end of the regular season. Yet the season was not over, and Cal Poly won No. 2 UCLA in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

Cal Poly fought hard despite a 2-1 defeat, but the team will have plenty of chances to redeem itself when it joins the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation next season.

The conference will bring together schools from the Pac-10 Conference and the Big West. The conference champion will also receive an automatic bid for the tournament.

Coach Wolfgang Gartner, the success has been a long time coming. Gartner recently completed his 15th season with Cal Poly. He added that the transition into a Division-I threat began only recently.

“The program has dramatically improved within the last three years,” Gartner said.

“Matches the reputation that the school has academically. The NCAA Tournament will be the goal every year.”

Baseball
Cal Poly baseball has shown amazing progress in one year only in its second year in Division I. In 1995, the Mustangs went 21-29-0, but 292 as a team and averaged six runs a game. Three players also signed professional contracts after the season.

This season, the team has gone 16-16 with wins over teams like No. 5 Northridge and a sweep over the University of Diego. Their improved pitching and defense have led them to a higher level of respectability among other teams across the country.

“We have become very, very competitive in a short period of time,” Head Coach Rick Price said. Price added that the team has received many compliments from other coaches about the progress of Cal Poly’s program.

The move to Division I has had a tremendous effect on recruitment as well as player development. Players who used to overlook Cal Poly are now taking the time to tour the school and facilities. Ten of the top 100 high school players made official visits to the campus this year.

In the spring of 1997, the Mustangs will face perhaps their toughest battle yet — the move to the Big West Conference. Many of the top teams in the nation, including last year’s national champion Cal State Fullerton and Long Beach State, await the arrival of the Mustangs.

Softball
Cal Poly softball has been one of the most successful sports on campus, yet also one of the least celebrated. The Mustangs are currently ranked No. 24 in the nation with a record of 20-12.

The move to Division I has put the Mustangs into some of the toughest competition in the nation. Thirteen of the top 25 teams are from the West Coast and Cal Poly’s schedule.

Like baseball, softball has seen an immense improvement in recruitment. In the past, Cal Poly was unable to sign players Division I talent. Now some of the top players are checking out the program and signing with Cal Poly.

POLY "P": Vandals have altered the "P" many times

In times past, the "P" has been painted over, striped and altered to spell a number of interesting things.

In 1964 a giant "GOP" could be seen on the hill, in the early 70’s the word "POT" appeared and, this quarter, the word "GAG" looked over the campus in honor of Cal Poly’s Week of Williams.

Of late, the permanence of the "P" is again being challenged.

[Image of polka-dotted, striped and "GAG" over the Cal Poly "P" on the hill.]

Hearst Castle

Sitting high atop the Santa Lucia Mountains and hidden behind the pine trees, as if it were playing hide-and-seek with passing motorists on Highway 1, is the estate known as the Hearst Castle.

La Cuesta Encantada, the Enchanted Hill, was the romantic name William Randolph Hearst gave the 127-acre estate that included gardens, terraces, pools, guest homes and a 137-foot-high mansion.

Del Monte Cafe

Restored in 1981, the Del Monte Cafe gives patrons a chance to experience a 1940s diner, complete with barstools, checkered floor, red vinyl booth-benches and a vintage jukebox.

The building was originally constructed as a barbershop in 1919. Soon after, it became the Del Monte Grocery Store. In 1978, Dave White purchased the building. Mark and Debbie Collins leased the building and began the restoration.

Fremont Theatre

With a towering marquee, freestanding ticket booth and cutting-edge sound system, the Fremont Theatre on Monterey Street in San Luis Obispo mixes classic movie-house looks with the latest in modern cinemas.

Edwards Cinemas, which purchased the Fremont in 1989, spent approximately $250,000 to remodel the theatre in 1993, according to Fremont Manager Jeff Harrington.

Montana De Oro

Captivating seascapes, magnificent displays of plants and wild flowers, and miles of beaches tucked behind cliffs, not a bad place to spend a Saturday.

Montana De Oro State Park, known as “Mountain of Gold,” offers splendid natural beauty to visitors. The 8,000 acres south of Morro Bay, with seven miles of coastline, make up one of the largest state parks in California.
