ASI proposes cutting funds for U.U. Galerie, ropes course

By Dawn Kalmar
Daily Staff Writer

Budget cuts and controversy took control of Wednesday's ASI Board of Directors meeting.

Much of the controversy revolved around a proposed 50 percent cut of the U.U. Galerie budget.

Galerie Curator Jeanne LaBarbera said she was not consulted or told of the cuts until the proposal was brought before ASI.

"I'm sick inside of the way this is being handled. We feel betrayed," she said.

The back of University Union room 220 was full of student supporters of the U.U. Galerie who said it is an educational facility that benefits the students in a number of ways.

"Every show that's in the Galerie is essentially a student show," Carrie Schaefer, an art and design sophomore, said. "It's our Galerie.

However, members of the Budget Development Committee, established during the fall quarter, see the situation differently. They contend that the three surveys taken during the past year show the Galerie is the best place from which to cut funding.

The first survey was a strategic one taken in class during spring quarter 1996 with more than 600 respondents. The second was an ASI survey where 41 members were asked to represent students with their votes. The third was an informal survey of U.U. programs.

"We've done over six months of in-depth analysis and assessment," said Greg King, a member of the budget committee.

He advised the board to review the entire $4.4 million U.U. budget proposal and not get caught up in the proposal to cut Galerie funding by 50 percent, from the current $72,824 to a proposed $36,408.

"There are a lot of people here addressing one issue. I don't want the entire board to be shed on one program," he said.

"If you don't make small steps now, you're going to have to make big steps later. I'd love to fund it all but I can't. I'm not Santa Claus," he said.

Galerie supporters held up the petitions, with a total of 125 signatures, collected in 24 hours from students opposed to Galerie budget cuts.

"That's the most student involvement I've seen this year," said Rachel Raymond, a representative for the College of Liberal Arts.

Art and design senior Mike Truscull said the budget cuts are "the nail in the coffin, just commit all of the funding for 1998-1999. And Friday night, after some debate, the committee agreed that this is still the best option for 1998-1999.

"If you want to put the last nail in the coffin, just commit all of the funding for 1998-1999. And Friday night, after some debate, the committee agreed that this is still the best option for 1998-1999.

"We're an institution at risk, so we need to preserve all of the creativity and cultural heritage," Entzi said. "This is the last chance we have, and it's not acceptable.

ASI presidential candidates agree to clean-up campaigns

By Dawn Kalmar
Daily Staff Writer

Close elections have brought about shaky relations between this year's ASI Presidential candidates, Steve McShane and Cindy Eaton.

Problems with destruction and theft of campaign signs and some ill feelings between candidates and their supporters brought the two candidates and elections committee chairman, Tamer Osman, into a meeting Wednesday.

"Several rules were broken by each side. There's no way of weighing whose acts were greater than the other and what effect they had on the outcome," Osman said.

Since both parties are to blame, rules were clarified for the rest of the campaign period.

"There will be no tolerance," Osman said.

Vice President for Student Affairs Juan Gonzalez agreed that the candidates have been warned and unfair campaigning won't be accepted.

"They've been given a very, very, very stern warning with severe consequences if they don't obey it," he said.

Oman said he told candidates exactly what was expected during the rest of the campaigning.

"Their actions are not acceptable and will not be for the runoff and if broken again, immediate disqualification will be recommended to the board," he said.

Both were told they will be held accountable for the actions of their supporters should signs or stunts continue.

Both candidates said they have come to an agreement and understanding.

"From here on out there's got to be mutual respect on the part of each and every supporter," McShane said.

He said the problems this year have been worse than ever before.

"In my opinion this has been pretty dramatic," he said.

Entzi said she and McShane are now both clear on the rules.

"I think we both know the guidelines," Entzi said.

She also said the problems have made her want to win even more.

Power struggle

After almost two hours of discussion, the Poly Plan Steering Committee came to a consensus to hire new full-time faculty with Poly Plan money for 1998-1999.

The decision for 1998-1999 had to be decided this quarter since full-time positions, whether tenure-track faculty or full-time lecturers, need a year recruitment period.

"If you want to put the last nail in the coffin, just commit all of the money to faculty positions. That is absolutely the worst thing we could do," said Juan Gonzalez, vice president for student affairs.

"We're an institution at risk, so we need to preserve all of the creativity and cultural heritage," Entzi said. Throughout the meeting people...
Federal grant money CCC aid in repairing of Poly 'P'

By Kristie Holl
Daily Staff Writer

The Cal Poly 'P' is undergoing its first formal facelift in more than 45 years due to erosion.

Human activity and rain has caused severe erosion of the 'P' and the hillside that supports it. Now the university is using federal grant money and student volunteers to help restore the site.

The origins of the 'P' were modest. It was originally made in the 1930s with barn doors that were painted white and laid on the hillside. A few years later it was upgraded to an outline made of white gravel. And finally, in the '50s, the 'P' was made a permanent fixture out of concrete.

Over the years, several trails have formed leading to the 'P'. None of them were planned or designed — they were created by hikers. This has caused the majority of the 'P.' None of them were planned or designed — they were created by hikers. This has caused the majority of the erosions.

With grant money received from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), the university has contracted with the California Conservation Corps (CCC) to repair the damages.

Part of the leg of the 'P' which has crumbled off and slid down the slope will be repaired. Also, gullies that have formed all around the 'P' need to be back filled and the crib, or retaining wall, will be replaced.

The CCC will repair those things as well as put in a large interceptor drain. The drain will take most of the water that comes off the slope above the 'P' and divert it into some natural drainage so it doesn't saturate the soil and contribute to the erosion.

Other improvements include making official trails to help reduce the impact of the hikers. The trails must be completed by volunteers because grant funding is restricted and covers only certain areas.

The university received $12,000 from FEMA, which covers 75 percent of the cost. The remaining $4,000 needed comes from the operating account of Facilities Services.

Facilities Services, which handles repairs of all campus structures, identified the erosion problem. Bob Patrice, associate director of Facilities Services, said the rains of 1995 progressed the deterioration of the site.

"We went in to assess the area and saw that five feet of the 'P's legs had fallen off," he said. "Now the 'P' looks more like a 'D.'"

The FEMA funding was approved by the university not only because the hillside was in need of repair but because the 'P' is a designated navigational aid for aircraft.

Pilots report to the airport when they are over the 'P' and tie in with clients to help with governmental agencies in regards to plan approval and meeting clients to assist the design process in all aspects.

We will be accepting applications for the following positions:

1. Sales Support/Project Coordinator
   Individual will have a thorough knowledge of the landscape industry and will be responsible for assisting the sales team by formulating design proposals, interfacing with clients to help with governmental agencies in regards to plan approval and meeting clients to assist the design process in all aspects.

2. Site Supervisor
   In charge of guiding and monitoring the development of restoration and landscape plans. Daly Sutliff, chair of the committee, said there are sensitive resources on the hillside that need to be protected.

3. Maintenance Manager/Maintenance Crew Leader
   Landsystems opened a new maintenance division in 1996 and is now looking for a dedicated individual to supervise 3-4 employees working on larger residential projects. A knowledge of aspects of maintenance including plant identification, irrigation, chemical application and personnel management is essential. A great opportunity to start on the ground floor with growing concern!

Santa Barbara aircraft maintenance firm acknowledges possible role

By Scott Lindew
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - A Santa Barbara jet maintenance firm said Thursday it had illegally shipped oxygen canisters in the cargo hold of a Continental Airlines passenger flight last month.

Robert Chickering, president of Santa Barbara Aerospace, said his firm sent a four-crate shipment of oxygen generators were part of the oxygen tanks was equipped

"Some people would probably be happy just to dynamite the 'P' and get rid of it because it's an unnatural nuisance," he said. "But the plans have gotten support because its historically been there for a long time."

He anticipates some struggles with the visual aspect after the restoration process is completed. He said lines on the hillside from the crib walls will initially be visible until the wood changes and the vegetation comes in.

In the fall, an ornamental horticulture student will grow plants, like native grasses, on the hillside before the rains come. This will help stabilize the area and prevent further erosion.

The CCC began repairs on May 5 and it's expected to take several weeks to complete the FEMA-funded portion. The completion of new trails and restorations of old ones will be finished depending on the amount of student interest and involvement.
The maneuvering came on a Republican-drafted bill to ban "partial birth" abortions except in cases in which a woman's life is in jeopardy. The House has already passed the measure and a final Senate vote is expected next week.

President Clinton vetoed an identical bill last year and has promised to do so again.

The procedure, more complicated than first-trimester abortions, involves partially extracting a fetus, legs first, through the birth canal, cutting an incision in the barely visible skull base and then draining the skull.

A closer vote was shaping up on a proposal drafted by Democratic Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota.

His measure would ban all types of abortions after a fetus had reached viability—roughly 23 weeks of gestation—rather than the single procedure to be barred under the GOP measure.

Such late-term abortions would be allowed in cases in which a mother's life was endangered or there was a risk of "grave irrevocable injury to her health" if she carried the fetus to term.

Daschle's proposal also would apply only in states that do not have restrictions of their own on late-term abortions.

"We are not going to satisfy the hard-core pro-choice or the hard-core pro-life people," Daschle told reporters a few hours before the vote. He did have Clinton's backing.

While Daschle mounted a major effort to win approval for his plan, abortion foes charged that he was merely attempting to provide political cover for himself and other Democrats who wanted more restrictions of their own on late-term abortions after viability, the point at which a fetus could live outside the womb.

"It has no restrictions," said Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa. "It is an exception that is not an exception.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., countered that the true purpose of the Republican leadership is not to regulate late-term abortions but to roll back protections guaranteed women by the Supreme Court.

Oral HIV testing offers needle-free alternative

By Stacey L. Johnston
Daily Staff Writer

No needles necessary! A new oral test can detect anonymous HIV testing without an unpleasant poke.

The test, called OraSure, is currently being offered at the Cal Poly Health Center and the San Luis Obispo County Public Health Department. The test requires a mouth swab.

"I am repulsed by the practice of partial birth," the South Dakota lawmaker said in a floor speech. "But I am also sensitive to the extraordinary circumstances many women face." He asserted.

It's a special swab that is held between the gumline and the cheek, he said. "After about two minutes it takes out and puts..."
Bus driver blues

By Amanda Burt

One of the worst parts of my day is taking the bus to Poly. Not that I mind the bus itself. So what if it takes 20 minutes to get from my house downtown to the U.U. at Poly? It's a nice drive and I can usually get a little studying done.

My problem is the bus driver. Every morning she just snucks away my joy. I wait at the bus stop, feeling fairly ready to go with a smile, a flash of the I.D. card and a "Good morning." But she always squelches my efforts to be pleasant. Her hatred of us in her heart, and fear of her in ours.

"You look so small and vulnerable when she's not enthroned on her bus seat," my friend exclaimed. "Like Darth Vader without his mask on."

The morning bus driver is indeed an evil figure in my life. She has become my arch nemesis, trying to rip off the system here. I'm not trying to rip off the system here.

"It's only making driving conditions more dangerous method of passing. It is a response to Mark S. Hutchenerreuther's letter, "Drivers: slow down" on Tuesday. I am all in favor of people slowing down to make the roads safer, but I take issue with Mr. Hutchenerreuther's actions toward faster traffic. When I submit that Mr. Hutchenerreuther is only making driving conditions more hazardous by not practicing good driving etiquette. By not moving over promptly, he contributes to making the drivers behind him angry and agressive, and sometimes forces a pass on the right (a far more dangerous method of passing). Furthermore, Mr. Hutchenerreuther states: "I usually set my cruise control for 70 in 65 zones." I do believe that sun worshippers outgrow their obsession, but I also think that for many, like myself, it's too late.

Just do SOMETHING.

Since being at Cal Poly, I've had more than plenty of sunny days to discover the joy and participate in different outdoor and indoor experiences.

The Cal Poly and San Luis Obispo areas have so many land to explore, so many places to become involved in and so many places to see.

The sunshine will always be up there in the sky, but you will (hopefully) not always be at Cal Poly. Besides, I can't think of any employer who will hire you just because, hey, you've got a really nice tan.

Martha Blackwell is a journalism senior.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Speed it up or move to the right

The signs posted on the sides of the road, "SLOWER TRAFFIC KEEP RIGHT," are there for a reason, Mr. Hutchenerreuther. So in the future, please be considerate by moving over for faster traffic. It is not up to you to decide how fast is fast enough, and you are only making driving conditions more hazardous by doing so.

Judge says marijuana club violates city ordinance

SAN JOSE, Calif. - One mar­ijuana club has been closed by a judge's order, but city officials said it's time to open.

Santa Clara County Superior Court judge Peter Stuber said the San Jose Cannabis Club violated the city's nuisance ordinance and should be closed.

The ordinance approved in March regulated medical mar­ijuana dispensaries much as other businesses. The city said the San Jose Cannabis Club violated the law by growing and distributing pot too close to an elementary school, a church and homes.

The competing Santa Clara County Medical Cannabis Center complied with all of the city's regulations, officials said.

Cannabis Club owner Robert Niwonger closed his establish­ments shortly after the judge's ruling on Wednesday.

"I didn't lose," he said. "The people won and the law won.

Niwonger claimed the city had "essentially outlawed Proposition 215." Proposition 215, approved by state voters in November, legalized medical marijuanna in California.

New cigarette warning labels due to hit store shelves

NEW YORK - Distribution of the nation's first cigarette warnings, "Smoking is addictive" began Thursday, the first time such forceful language has appeared on cigarette packs.

Liggett Group said its L&M cigarettes will carry the new warning and similar warnings are expected to be on packs of its other brands, which include Chesterfield, Lark and Eve, within 60 days.

The new labels reflect a landmark settlement Liggett reached in March with the attorneys general of 23 states and lawyers for smokers.

The agreement - in which Liggett, the nation's smallest tobacco company, broke ranks with its larger competitors - set­tled lawsuits that sought reim­bursement for the cost of treat­ing sick smokers.

The new warning labels will be on the front of the packs, in addition to the surgeon gener­al's warnings on the side.

The federal government has required warning labels on ciga­rettes since the 1960s. They mention lung cancer, heart disease, pregnancy comp­lications and other problems, but not addiction.

U. U. hour previews weekend Culture Fest

By Martin Blackwell
Daily Staff Writer

With KCPR radio station DJs playing international music and Ballet Folklorico performing a 15-minute dance, Thursday's U. U. hour provided a preview for this Saturday's first ASI-sup­ported Culture Fest.

Culture Fest begins at 10 a.m., with Mayor Allen Settle presenting a city proclamation to make the third Saturday in May an International Day. The event ends at 3 p.m. after Phi Beta Sigma, an African­American fraternity, performs a step routine.

Throughout the five hours, 27 student organizations will provide entertainment in the form of performances, music and food in the U. U. plaza. Senator Jack O'Connell and Congressman Walter犬 Capps will present the Cultural Community Leader Awards at noon.

Admission to the event is free, and a variety of food will be sold.

ASI created the festival as an opportunity to unite all of the cultural groups on campus at one event.

'It's a time to unify every­one and not leave anyone out," said Gail Batac, ASI director of ethnic and cultural rela­tions and coordinator of Culture Fest.

Batac said that Cal Poly needs to come together and realize that there are all kinds of people on campus.

In deciding how to unite the campus, Batac said that food and entertainment imme­diately came to her mind.

"Food is one thing that everyone has in common, and everyone enjoys," Batac said.

The Chinese Students Association (CSA) will per­form a Lion Dance at 1 p.m. and Ribbon Dance at 1:30 p.m.

"There's people out there who don't realize all of the diversity that is on campus," said Melissa Wong, an electrical engineering freshman and member of the CSA.

Along with Saturday's fest­ival, Ballet Folklorico is per­forming "Mexico de Noche" Sunday at the Performing Arts Center.

Dancers from Ballet Folklorico and Imagen y Espirito de Cal Poly perform a tradition­al Mexican folk dance during U. U. Hour Thursday to promote Saturday's Culture Fest.

Dodge deal is a natural for Murdoch

By John Mars
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - The Mighty Ducks have made the Walt Disney Co. millions upon millions. The ice hockey team! They might have con­tributed a dime or two.

Sport teams in and of them­selves are not investments that make Disney, or other entertain­ment conglomerates like Time Warner or News Corp. rich. The low-rent "Mighty Ducks" movies are far more profitable than Disney's popular hockey team.

"Owning a sports team is like owning a boat," says Steve Barsay, an entertainment industry analyst with the Wall Street investment firm CH First Boston. "The only money you make is when you get out.

To understand the real appeal of sports teams - and News Corp. Chairman Rupert Murdoch's pending $350 million purchase of the Los Angeles Dodgers - you have to leave the stadium and watch TV.

With the proposed Dodger deal, you need to watch people watch TV.

When Japanese ace Hideo Nomo takes the mound in a Dodgers day game, Tokyo's television click on at midnight local time. When Los Angeles' Korean pitcher Chan Ho Park throws his first pitch, the mid­dle-of-the-night TV phenomenon is repeated in South Korea.

Baseball, like a good action movie or eye-popping news footage, is part of a reservoir quenching a national and international thirst for entertainment. The company that owns both a sports team and cable and satellite TV networks showing its games enjoys profits far beyond ticket sales, hot dogs and T-shirts.

It's no coincidence the same day Murdoch confirmed the Dodger dealings, his News Corp. also announced it will become a partner in JSkyB, a 150-channel Japanese satellite broadcasting start-up.

"Other media companies in America now have great sporting teams, and we think the Dodgers own the best," he said. He plans to use the Dodger deal as a platform to launch a sports network.

New Sports Network, USA Sports, will be launched this fall as part of the Murdoch sports empire.

Despite the problems, Entzi said she doesn't think he did that because he didn't want to go through a run-off election and con­tinue campaigning. She said it was presented to him as an option by the elections committee.

The latest plan calls for the new generator to be installed and posi­sibly tested during the five days Atlantis and Mir are linked. The swiftly built, 253-pound cylinder is designed to produce oxygen from waste water via electrolysis.

Soon after Atlantis' liftoff, Russian flight controllers radioed the good news to Mr. Linenger was thrilled; the 42-year-old doctor wanted to be home before the birth of his second child next month.

If all goes well, Atlantis will undock next Wednesday and return to Earth with Linenger on May 24.

Russia's space program has come to count on the shuttle for sup­plies as well as hundreds of millions of dollars that NASA is paying for its astronauts to live on Mir.

more, especially since McShane called her after the initial elec­tion, telling her she had the option to concede the race, mak­ing him the winner.

She said she thinks he did that because he didn't want to go through a run-off election and con­tinue campaigning. She said it was presented to him as an option by the elections committee.

Despite the problems, Entzi said she doesn't think the cam­paign to turn into mud-slinging.

"I really don't want it to turn into a nasty race. I don't think either of us wants that," she said.
MUSTANG DAILY

In an emotional appeal she asked for cooperation and communication from the board. "We want to work with you. We want to help. We're just asking for time to implement it," La Barbera said.

If ASI cuts the budget, some of those contracts will be canceled and artists might sue over their broken contracts.

"Please do not misunderstand the gravity of this situation. Please do not let anybody tell you that it wasn't in writing or because the money wasn't set out, do not assume that it is legally binding. Believe me it is," she said.

Members of the board showed concern for the legal ramifications of the cuts.

"We already told that ASI doesn't evaluate on numbers but we evaluate actual programs," said Brooke Farrar, representative for the College of Business. "I want to emphasize the concern I have for the legal agreement even though it was verbally done, it still was an agreement and will be held up in court. As a business student this is bad business. If I'm getting taught by a university that can't even set an example that's kind of bad business.

"This is a huge example saying that Cal Poly does not value the art programs," Farrar continued.

Business representative Tom Spengler agreed.

"Verbal contracts will hold up in court. We will get sued. We will get proposal yet." As the board decided to continue discussion of the issue in future meetings and not vote on the bud­ get cuts.

Also concerning the U.U. bud­ get, funding for the Chumash Challenge Ropes Course came into question. The course was developed with the understanding that it would be completely self-sufficient. However, the board that approved it did not specifically state that ASI has been paying the salary of the course's director. According to Jason Meyer, ASI vice president of finance, that salary is between $50,000 and $70,000.

A proposal was submitted to cut the course's subsidy but ropes course staff argue that they are becoming increasingly self-sufficient and won't rely on an ASI subsidy after the next year or two.

The program serves 4,000 people per year doing team-building and empowerment workshops for organizations. Clients include Diablo Canyon, Embassy Suites, Apple Farm and even training for Olympic athletes.

"That funding would put the program in jeopardy," said Rodney Neuheisel, Chumash Challenge program director.

"I think you're sitting on a gold mine and you're not doing anything other than making sure the students think you're an excellent petition," he said.

"That's not a threat, it's a real­ ity," he said.

King said the original proposal was cut short for the Galerie all together, but 50 percent was a "gag," the board should decide to continue funding it, they would be forced to dip into their reserves. A small account to cover overspending, for next year. The board decided to continue discussion of the issue in future meetings and not vote on the bud­ get cuts.

"Please do not misunderstand the gravity of this situation. Please do not let anybody tell you that it wasn't in writing or because the money wasn't set out, do not assume that it is legally binding. Believe me it is," she said.

Concern expressed at the meeting involved projects that are currently funded but may not get money next year since the fee increases did not pass.

Another concern expressed at the meeting involved projects that are currently funded but may not get money next year since the fee increases did not pass.

University of Pacifie's Dan Reichert was named Western Baseball Pitcher of the year and University of Nebraska's third baseman Andy Dominique was named player of the year. Coach of the year honors went to Long Beach State's Dave DeYoung for the second straight sea­ son.

"The price of $3.50 million is clearly a big premium," said Chris Dixon.

Schneider’s basketball camp returns for second year

When it comes to numbers, Cal Poly men’s basketball coach Jeff Schneider’s camp has them big.

Last summer, after an impressive 16-13 season, Schneider attracted through two weeks of the first Jeff Schneider Cal Poly Basketball Camp with 275 local youth, ages 6 to 17, more than ready to work hard and have fun.

“We went from zero to 275 in two weeks,” Schneider said. “That’s pretty impressive.”

This year, Schneider has extended his Drills for Skills and Day Camps to three four-day sessions, June 23-26, July 7-10 and August 11-14, and is looking forward to attracting even more youth.

He believes that the camp is an important part of the entire basketball program.

“The players definitely come first in the program, but the kids are not far behind,” Schneider said.

Schneider said that the kids who come to the camps automatically feel like a part of the Cal Poly basketball program.

“When it comes time to play basketball season, they’re not going to want to go see a UCLA basketball game, but a Cal Poly game, he said.

Schneider believes that the camps also bring the parents onto the campus, who realizes the importance and love of their child.

“They’re not going to want to go see a UCLA basketball game, but a Cal Poly game,” he said.

This summer, Schneider said Russ Bryan, Steve Fleming, Ross Ketcham and Damien Levesque are planning to assist.

Teaching the meaning of goals is another important point that Schneider emphasizes throughout the camp. He said that many kids don’t really know what a goal is, and he believes that goals are important at all ages.

Kidd and Camacho named to Big West team

Before Cal Poly’s baseball team had taken the field yesterday in its first round Big West Conference Tournament game against University of Nevada, Reno, two Mustangs had already received conference honors.

Second baseman Scott Kidd and designated hitter Marty Camacho were named to the All Big West Conference First Team Thursday afternoon.

Cal Poly lost to University of Nevada, Reno Thursday in the first round of the Big West Conference Tournament in Long Beach, 10-6. The Mustangs head into second round play Friday at 11 a.m. against the loser of the Long Beach State/UC Santa Barbara game. Results of that game were not available.

The WCCC is considered the strongest conference in the nation with an estimated 20 teams and 400 riders and their clubs represented at the competition, according to Mike Sallaberry, a member of the Cal Poly Mountain Cycle Wheelmen club.

Winning the conference was a very big deal to Schneider.

When it comes to numbers, Cal Poly has funded in part by an ASI contingency fund and money earned through fundraising. Smith said that he will pick up the tab for the rest of his expenses on the trip.

To help install the different messages of his camp, Schneider works one-on-one with the kids, which, he said, is not very common for the establishing coach of the camp to do.

“I’m not the type of coach who just shows up for the awards ceremony on the parents’ day,” Schneider said.

“The Wheelmen are known for having depth,” he said. “We have a top notch group of riders and their experience is vital to all the other riders. We are a very unified team.”

Evans Smith, Carl Limpus, Frank Mountain, Alex Smith and Zack Rector will compete in the men’s division while Kellie Schneider, Lana Sullivan, Becky Frazier, Lisse D-Hansen and Laura White will compete in the women’s division at nationals.

Smith earned fifth place in the highest division of the race on Saturday. Smith’s totals placed him second overall for the weekend.

“I expected to go on to nationals but didn’t expect to do as well at nationals,” Smith said.

“Another thing that added to the sweetness of the whole thing was that we won the Mountain Bike Conference Championships too,” he said. The Conference Mountain Bike Championships were held in December.

The Cal Poly Mountain Cycle Wheelmen club celebrated a glorious victory last weekend after matching the Western Collegiate Cycling Conference (WCCC) title from Stanford University in Monterey.

Cal Poly beat Stanford by 100 points, after the tabulations from the three events at the competition were compiled.
