By Alexis Garbeff
Mustang Daily

Welcome to Miami. Or for those of us who won’t be traveling 2,160 miles to experience the Super Bowl this Sunday, welcome to San Luis Obispo.

Everyone, with the exception of the privileged few, will not be watching the game in Miami. For this majority, it offers a few San Luis Obispo restaurants and bars whose Super Bowl parties might ease the pain of not being there in person.

At the top of the party list is Madison’s Bar and Grill’s third annual VIP party. Although private invitations have already been distributed, you can be a Madison’s VIP for $5. According to Mark De Simone, manager, the $5 is not a cover charge but provides drinks and appetizers for the 21

see PARTY, page 3
Super Bowl odds stir big business

By Adam Russo

Going to the Super Bowl! Better bring your Visa card, and your MasterCard, Citibank card, Discover card, an ATM card, your checkbook and plenty of cash as well.

The Super Bowl, being one of the highest-rated television shows every year, generates an unimaginable amount of money all over the country. From the cost of party supplies and snacks to the $1.6 million price tag on a 30-second commercial during the game, cash regiseters are ringing everywhere.

Locally, the Super Bowl has some economic effects, mainly on new television viewers. "Our busiest time range from the Christmas season up until the Super Bowl," manager of Audio Video City Keith Lefere said. "After the Super Bowl, our sales slow a bit."

The local bars and grills will be hoping tree tood and rattles will get people to come Sunday, hoping free food and raffles will get people to open their wallets. Also, liquor and grocery stores stand to sell

Super Bowl Odds and Proposition Bets

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Favorite</th>
<th>Spread</th>
<th>Underdog</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Denver 7</td>
<td>-145</td>
<td>Atlanta</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| Denver Over/Under | -120 | $1.6 million price tag on a 30-second commercial during the game.

Luminous, lightweight and loose-lipped at the Super Bowl

MIAMI (AP) — The luminous, the lightweight and the loose-lipped have a way of stealing the Super Bowl spotlight. For every Joe Montana, John Elway and Emmitt Smith, there's been a Mark Rypien, Lynn Bowden and Desmond Howard who took MVP honors.

For every serious game prediction, there's been a Joe Namath guarantee and a Jim McMahon moonshot.

And this year, there's the Shannon Sharpe-Ray Buchanan trash-a-thon.

Here's Thursday's installment:

Sharpe: "Tell Ray to put the eyeliner, the lipstick and the high heels away. I'm not saying he's a cross-dresser, that's just what he looks like.

Buchanan: "I'll tell you, that's an ugly dude. You can't tell me he doesn't look like Mr. Ed."

The Atlanta cornerback, who wore a dog collar to media day because the Falcons are considered underdogs, clearly isn't taking a backseat to the Broncos right end in the dosing department. But that's one of the few areas where defending champion Denver and upstart Atlanta appear equal heading into Sunday's game.

Terrell Davis, last year's most valuable player in the big game — and this season's NFL MVP — knows when asked about the disparity in rating between his defending champions and Atlanta's first-timers.

"People rate you according to your status," said Davis, the fourth 2,000-yard rusher in league history this season, "and if you start to live like that, I think it becomes a problem.

"I know what it takes for me to get ready to play on this level. I always make time to work out. I knew that was the most important thing for me... even when I was on the road, I was working out in hotels. I know where my bread is buttered and it is on the field, not off the field."

"On the field, the Broncos are better known. They have a future Hall of Fame quarterback in John Elway. They have "Romos," intimidating linebacker Bill Woodson.

MIAMI (AP) — The Broncos will win because the Falcons are clearly not taking a backseat to the Broncos tight end in the dosing department. But that's one of the few areas where defending champion Denver and upstart Atlanta appear equal heading into Sunday's game.

Terrell Davis, last year's most valuable player in the big game — and this season's NFL MVP — knows when asked about the disparity in rating between his defending champions and Atlanta's first-timers.

"People rate you according to your status," said Davis, the fourth 2,000-yard rusher in league history this season, "and if you start to live like that, I think it becomes a problem.

"I know what it takes for me to get ready to play on this level. I always make time to work out. I knew that was the most important thing for me... even when I was on the road, I was working out in hotels. I know where my bread is buttered and it is on the field, not off the field."

"On the field, the Broncos are better known. They have a future Hall of Fame quarterback in John Elway. They have "Romos," intimidating linebacker Bill Woodson.

MIAMI (AP) — The Broncos will win because the Falcons are clearly not taking a backseat to the Broncos tight end in the dosing department. But that's one of the few areas where defending champion Denver and upstart Atlanta appear equal heading into Sunday's game.

Terrell Davis, last year's most valuable player in the big game — and this season's NFL MVP — knows when asked about the disparity in rating between his defending champions and Atlanta's first-timers.

"People rate you according to your status," said Davis, the fourth 2,000-yard rusher in league history this season, "and if you start to live like that, I think it becomes a problem.

"I know what it takes for me to get ready to play on this level. I always make time to work out. I knew that was the most important thing for me... even when I was on the road, I was working out in hotels. I know where my bread is buttered and it is on the field, not off the field."

"On the field, the Broncos are better known. They have a future Hall of Fame quarterback in John Elway. They have "Romos," intimidating linebacker Bill Woodson.

MIAMI (AP) — The Broncos will win because the Falcons are clearly not taking a backseat to the Broncos tight end in the dosing department. But that's one of the few areas where defending champion Denver and upstart Atlanta appear equal heading into Sunday's game.

Terrell Davis, last year's most valuable player in the big game — and this season's NFL MVP — knows when asked about the disparity in rating between his defending champions and Atlanta's first-timers.

"People rate you according to your status," said Davis, the fourth 2,000-yard rusher in league history this season, "and if you start to live like that, I think it becomes a problem.

"I know what it takes for me to get ready to play on this level. I always make time to work out. I knew that was the most important thing for me... even when I was on the road, I was working out in hotels. I know where my bread is buttered and it is on the field, not off the field."

"On the field, the Broncos are better known. They have a future Hall of Fame quarterback in John Elway. They have "Romos," intimidating linebacker Bill Woodson.
Some choose not to watch the big game

By Jayme Fulford
Mustang Daily
The roads are empty. The sidewalks are clear. The Cal Poly Rec Center is not open. Yes, it is that time of year again. A day that Americans celebrate by sitting on the couch, eating chips, and drinking beer. Super Bowl Sunday has evolved into a national holiday that does not go unnoticed. With the Falcons, there is a way for all fans to unite on Super Bowl Sunday — with the Falcons, there is a way to do it the "Dirty Bird" way.

"We're starting around noon, and we're going until everyone gets out or goes downtown," Todd Parocco, an industrial technology senior, said.

Barcaccia, a Falcons fan, plans to have about 20 people join him for a barbecue Sunday. But don't expect to see any Falcons fans in.

"I'm a big Falcons fan," he said. "I'm not letting any Falcons fans in."

Most people aren't as enthusiastic however. Anyone who will throw down for a keg will be welcomed.

Agriculture science junior Adam Osh isn't concerned about who team takes home the ring, he's just looking forward to hanging out with about 40 guests at a friendly annual Super Bowl party.

"I don't care who wins the game," he said. "I just want to drink beer. We're starting an hour or two before and going on into the night." Bull, a mechanical engineering senior, is headed to Los Angeles for the big day, to revel with 50 other big Super Bowl fans.

"No keg," Danielle Samaniego, a journalism senior, said. "We're just mixing up whatever anybody brings."

Despite San Luis Obispo's excellent weather, some choose their creative energy into their favorite Super Bowl contender. Dennis Calilh, a psychology senior and Falcons fan, plans to have a small group of friends over for some serious spectating.

"I'm decorating with Falcon colors," she said. "I am so pumped up, I can't wait. I hope the Falcons kick some butt."

PARTY
continued from page 1

and over guests.

"We have 12 televisions, two big-screens and we have recently beefed up the sound system," said De Simone. "One can see a television from every angle of the bar, that's more than any other restaurant here.

Madison's VIP party will start at 2:45 p.m. to 3:45 p.m. If you choose to go to Tortilla Flats to watch the Super Bowl, you can participate in drink specials, a free nacho bar and a raffle.

According to Sam Clark, manager, Tortilla Flats will raffle off a Super Bowl mirror, neon signs, an inflatable football player, and other Super Bowl paraphernalia.

Clark is expecting 130 to 150 people will gather at Tortilla Flats, and there is plenty of food for all.

Tortilla Flats' raffle and party will start at 3 p.m. — all ages are welcome.

Lastly, The Graduate Restaurant is having a "Big Ass Draft Special," according to Scott Smith, manager. The special will include:

ONION DIP

1. Dip Tostada crust, chipped
2. Add Tostadas, pepita or chipped
3. Dry yellow onion, chipped
4. Add Westerhuis' spice sauce
5. Add Chopped green chilies peppers
6. Serve with chips.

SOURCE: The Original Vidalia Onion Cookbook

ARTICHOKE HEART DIPS

4 oz. artichoke hearts
1 8 oz. can cream cheese, melted
1/2 garlic clove, chopped
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/4 tsp. basil

Mix artichoke hearts, cream cheese, garlic and seasonings. Refrigerate and serve with tortilla chips.

Be a Bean Dip a la Dr. Pepper

1 can Kenney Beans
4 oz. Tomato Paste
2 Tbsp. Cilantro
1 Tbsp. Salt
6 Tbsp. Black Pepper
1 clove Garlic, Minced

Combine all ingredients except the 2 Tbsp. in saucepan over to boiling until thickened into a white sauce and add salt. Use as a filling for nachos.

Serve with chips crackers.

Source: Cookier with Dr. Pepper

SALON LUIS AGUIRRE

Superbowl Weekend Party
January 29th—31st

Featuring
Sierra Nevada Brewing Co.
Timeless Brauhaus

Release of
Big Foot Barley Wine

Pint Specials • Food & Beverage Specials
Small Glassware Available

The Best Draft Beer Selection on the Central Coast
570 Higuera Street • San Luis Obispo • 544-7157

PRIZES

PIZZAS

SALON LUIS AGUIRRE

ARABS

RAFFLES

ARTICHOKE HEART DIPS

4 oz. artichoke hearts
1 8 oz. can cream cheese, melted
1/2 garlic clove, chopped
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/4 tsp. basil

Mix artichoke hearts, cream cheese, garlic and seasonings. Refrigerate and serve with tortilla chips.

Be a Bean Dip a la Dr. Pepper

1 can Kenney Beans
4 oz. Tomato Paste
2 Tbsp. Cilantro
1 Tbsp. Salt
6 Tbsp. Black Pepper
1 clove Garlic, Minced

Combine all ingredients except the 2 Tbsp. in saucepan over to boiling until thickened into a white sauce and add salt. Use as a filling for nachos.

Serve with chips crackers.

Source: Cookier with Dr. Pepper

SOME SUPERBOWL WEEKEND SPECIAL

PICK 650 people, who are expected to attend the 3 p.m. party, will have no problem watching the game.

So here is it, a list of ideas that might help to spark up your Super Bowl Sunday. Regardless of which team wins — the Broncos or the Falcons — at least you will be partying in style.

Some choose not to watch the big game

By Jayme Fulford
Mustang Daily

The roads are empty. The sidewalks are clear. The Cal Poly Rec Center is not open. Yes, it is that time of year again. A day that Americans celebrate by sitting on the couch, eating chips, and drinking beer. Super Bowl Sunday has evolved into a national holiday that does not go unnoticed.

With the Falcons, there is a way for all fans to unite on Super Bowl Sunday — with the Falcons, there is a way to do it the "Dirty Bird" way.

"We're starting around noon, and we're going until everyone gets out or goes downtown," Todd Parocco, an industrial technology senior, said.

Barcaccia, a Falcons fan, plans to have about 20 people join him for a barbecue Sunday. But don't expect to see any Falcons fans in.

"I'm a big Falcons fan," he said. "I'm not letting any Falcons fans in."

Most people aren't as enthusiastic however. Anyone who will throw down for a keg will be welcomed.

Agriculture science junior Adam Osh isn't concerned about who team takes home the ring, he's just looking forward to hanging out with about 40 guests at a friendly annual Super Bowl party.

"I don't care who wins the game," he said. "I just want to drink beer. We're starting an hour or two before and going on into the night." Bull, a mechanical engineering senior, is headed to Los Angeles for the big day, to revel with 50 other big Super Bowl fans.

"No keg," Danielle Samaniego, a journalism senior, said. "We're just mixing up whatever anybody brings."

Despite San Luis Obispo's excellent weather, some choose their creative energy into their favorite Super Bowl contender. Dennis Calilh, a psychology senior and Falcons fan, plans to have a small group of friends over for some serious spectating.

"I'm decorating with Falcon colors," she said. "I am so pumped up, I can't wait. I hope the Falcons kick some butt."

PARTY
continued from page 1

and over guests.

"We have 12 televisions, two big-screens and we have recently beefed up the sound system," said De Simone. "One can see a television from every angle of the bar, that's more than any other restaurant here.

Madison's VIP party will start at 2:45 p.m. to 3:45 p.m. If you choose to go to Tortilla Flats to watch the Super Bowl, you can participate in drink specials, a free nacho bar and a raffle.

According to Sam Clark, manager, Tortilla Flats will raffle off a Super Bowl mirror, neon signs, an inflatable football player, and other Super Bowl paraphernalia.

Clark is expecting 130 to 150 people will gather at Tortilla Flats, and there is plenty of food for all.

Tortilla Flats' raffle and party will start at 3 p.m. — all ages are welcome.

Lastly, The Graduate Restaurant is having a "Big Ass Draft Special," according to Scott Smith, manager. The special will include:

ONION DIP

1. Dip Tostada crust, chipped
2. Add Tostadas, pepita or chipped
3. Dry yellow onion, chipped
4. Add Westerhuis' spice sauce
5. Add Chopped green chilies peppers
6. Serve with chips.

SOURCE: The Original Vidalia Onion Cookbook

ARTICHOKE HEART DIPS

4 oz. artichoke hearts
1 8 oz. can cream cheese, melted
1/2 garlic clove, chopped
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/4 tsp. basil

Mix artichoke hearts, cream cheese, garlic and seasonings. Refrigerate and serve with tortilla chips.

Be a Bean Dip a la Dr. Pepper

1 can Kenney Beans
4 oz. Tomato Paste
2 Tbsp. Cilantro
1 Tbsp. Salt
6 Tbsp. Black Pepper
1 clove Garlic, Minced

Combine all ingredients except the 2 Tbsp. in saucepan over to boiling until thickened into a white sauce and add salt. Use as a filling for nachos.

Serve with chips crackers.

Source: Cookier with Dr. Pepper

SALON LUIS AGUIRRE

Superbowl Weekend Party
January 29th—31st

Featuring
Sierra Nevada Brewing Co.
Timeless Brauhaus

Release of
Big Foot Barley Wine

Pint Specials • Food & Beverage Specials
Small Glassware Available

The Best Draft Beer Selection on the Central Coast
570 Higuera Street • San Luis Obispo • 544-7157

PRIZES

PIZZAS

SALON LUIS AGUIRRE

ARABS

RAFFLES

ARTICHOKE HEART DIPS

4 oz. artichoke hearts
1 8 oz. can cream cheese, melted
1/2 garlic clove, chopped
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/4 tsp. basil

Mix artichoke hearts, cream cheese, garlic and seasonings. Refrigerate and serve with tortilla chips.

Be a Bean Dip a la Dr. Pepper

1 can Kenney Beans
4 oz. Tomato Paste
2 Tbsp. Cilantro
1 Tbsp. Salt
6 Tbsp. Black Pepper
1 clove Garlic, Minced

Combine all ingredients except the 2 Tbsp. in saucepan over to boiling until thickened into a white sauce and add salt. Use as a filling for nachos.

Serve with chips crackers.

Source: Cookier with Dr. Pepper

SOME SUPERBOWL WEEKEND SPECIAL

PICK 650 people, who are expected to attend the 3 p.m. party, will have no problem watching the game.

So here is it, a list of ideas that might help to spark up your Super Bowl Sunday. Regardless of which team wins — the Broncos or the Falcons — at least you will be partying in style.
Communication is key to breaking the taboo

This is a warning. I am about to present a phrase which will make most people cringe. Are you ready? SEXUAL HARASSMENT. There, we made it through safely. Who would have thought our course of study would include thisAWFUL term? Why can't we let you continue with your blissful life of guarded phrases and avoided eye contact? Because I had a vision. An epiphany! Well, let's just call it an insight.

The actual source of this inquiry stems from my current involvement in the production of "Oleanna," a play written by David Mamet (performed March 11, 12, and 13 in room 212 of the Theatre building) (what, can't I plug my own show?). The main theme of the play is sexual harassment, specifically between a teacher and a student. Subsequently, my involvement in the play forced some attention upon the feared subject at hand. Here is a summary of my narration.

First, where did sexual harassment come from? Basically when the modern woman achieved a greater degree of dignity she decided freedom from the daily ritual of being treated as a sexual tool was also part of that package (you can breathe now). So no tor it! You can still grab someone's ass if you want to. As assessed in order for anything to rightly commence.

Second, what exactly is sexual harassment? Common answer: ummm, like when you touch someone in a bad place! No! You can do that! Your parents do that! OK, revision.

When you touch a stranger in a bad place? No! Bars, clubs and parties would all vanish if these were illegal. Final revision: Sexual harassment is an unwanted sexual advance. That sounds about right.

Potentially it's a win-win situation. Women are no longer treated as objects and men can still fulfill their sexual desires. I realize there are instances of reverse sexual harassment and that women too have desires but you get the general point. All that is required for honest communication and a reasonable interpretation of actions, words and body language. Each person and situation must be assessed in order for anything to rightly commence.

You might say this is dirtying love with a ridiculous amount of red tape. But that is not the case.

First of all, love is not an issue here if we are discussing sexual activity with strangers. Second, this is simply asking that we treat people as ends in themselves and not as means to an end (as Kant would say).

So what is the point? You can still grab someone's ass if you want to. You can even use a nasty word or two if you like. But you must first determine if it is right with that person. I can almost hear the phones dinging to capture next quarter's "intro to speech communication" class (and it's OK to say whatever you want to the Capture Lady). A side note: Please write opinion letters! If no one writes in, the opinion editor will fill the Opinion pages with advertising and boring letters from other schools. I know you have some standpoint on the world.

Jon Wilson is a philosophy senior.

Opinion

Too much Super Bowl Fever

Super Bowl Sunday. The most hallucinatory, over-hyped day of the year. To many, the Super Bowl is something they wouldn't miss if their lives depended on it. To me, it's insignificant. After all, the way the nation takes it is seriously is just plain silly.

I mean, we're just talking about a game here. It's not exactly an event that determines the fate of the world; nor is it quite the second coming of Christ (or religious preference of your choice). Yet so many people decide to put their lives on hold that you'd think you'd be missing the best party on the planet. People have decided to put their lives on hold that you'd think you'd be missing the best party on the planet.

This hit me like a stiff-arm lariat when I was speaking to a Mustang Daily editor a few days ago. He wanted a story turned in on Friday, instead of Sunday, like usual. I asked him if maybe he had assigned the wrong date. He looked at me like I was the dumbest person on the planet and said with a chuckle, "I'm not coming. It's the Super Bowl." Yes, business will be closed, employers won't come to work, duties will be forgotten, and for what? To see, essentially, a bunch of overpaid big guys crushing into each other and falling over, just so half of them can proclaim, "We crushed into each other and fall over better than anyone else on the earth." Then they will do goofy dances and go to Disney World.

Aside from the lunacy of treating a football game like an holy event, there are a few other problems I have with the Super Bowl. Most prominent among them: the fact that this athletic contest has become a calorie festival for couch potatoes. I'm not sure if the point is to watch the game or to inhale chips and dip. It doesn't really matter, because American quarterbacks get plenty of time to work on building up those love handles either way. Party is good, but sitting around consuming salted pretzels for four hours straight is not so good. Face it, Americans don't need extra inspiration to induce a heart attack.

Speaking of life-threatening situations, the alcohol consumed at Super Bowl parties probably doesn't make the world a safer place either. And I've heard of more than one fight that's broken out between bar patrons when they're disagreed about how the game is going.

(Note: If anyone doesn't believe that the Super Bowl can cause conflicts, one of my roommates looks like he's planning toлем me to blueberry. As I write this.)

I don't mean to criticize anybody for just watching and liking the game. I just want to criticize the overhyped treatment the Super Bowl gets. Really, if it were that great, the whole world would care and not just Americans.

Nonetheless, I hope everyone who decides to give up a few hours of life to watch the game has a good time. Meanwhile, I'll be inhabiting the low traffic and short store lines and enjoying every minute of it.

Chris Hoffman is a journalism senior and a Mustang Daily staff writer.

Mustang Daily

No new fees

Editor:
Hey, what does the administration think we students are? Potted plants? Don't we students vote "no" to increasing student fees? loud enough not so very long ago? Now it comes along with a "survey" (refer to Jan. 25, 1999 article in Mustang Daily regarding student fee), in the hopes that through the back door it may increase our fees.

Fellow students, wake the hell up! We're going to get screwed, and it's not going to feel good. I personally don't care what the Cal Poly Plan is or who the Foundation is — if affordable education is important to you, don't sit there vacuously and accept this. Let's make our voice heard.

Ruth A. Winans is a political science senior.

Letter policy

Fellow students, wake the hell up!

Letters and cartoons and letters reflect the views of their authors and do not necessarily reflect those of Mustang Daily. Mustang Daily encourages comments on editorial policy and university affairs. Letters should be typewritten, double-spaced, signed and include a phone number. They can be mailed, faxed, delivered or e-mailed to opinion@mustangdaily.calpoly.edu.

Opinion

Jon Wilson is a philosophy senior.

Opinion

Too much Super Bowl Fever

Super Bowl Sunday. The most hallucinatory, over-hyped day of the year. To many, the Super Bowl is something they wouldn't miss if their lives depended on it. To me, it's insignificant. After all, the way the nation takes it is seriously is just plain silly.

I mean, we're just talking about a game here. It's not exactly an event that determines the fate of the world; nor is it quite the second coming of Christ (or religious preference of your choice). Yet so many people decide to put their lives on hold that you'd think you'd be missing the best party on the planet. People have decided to put their lives on hold that you'd think you'd be missing the best party on the planet.

This hit me like a stiff-arm lariat when I was speaking to a Mustang Daily editor a few days ago. He wanted a story turned in on Friday, instead of Sunday, like usual. I asked him if maybe he had assigned the wrong date. He looked at me like I was the dumbest person on the planet and said with a chuckle, "I'm not coming. It's the Super Bowl." Yes, business will be closed, employers won't come to work, duties will be forgotten, and for what? To see, essentially, a bunch of overpaid big guys crushing into each other and falling over, just so half of them can proclaim, "We crushed into each other and fall over better than anyone else on the earth." Then they will do goofy dances and go to Disney World.

Aside from the lunacy of treating a football game like an holy event, there are a few other problems I have with the Super Bowl. Most prominent among them: the fact that this athletic contest has become a calorie festival for couch potatoes. I'm not sure if the point is to watch the game or to inhale chips and dip. It doesn't really matter, because American quarterbacks get plenty of time to work on building up those love handles either way. Party is good, but sitting around consuming salted pretzels for four hours straight is not so good. Face it, Americans don't need extra inspiration to induce a heart attack.

Speaking of life-threatening situations, the alcohol consumed at Super Bowl parties probably doesn't make the world a safer place either. And I've heard of more than one fight that's broken out between bar patrons when they're disagreed about how the game is going.

(Note: If anyone doesn't believe that the Super Bowl can cause conflicts, one of my roommates looks like he's planning to touch me for blueberry. As I write this.)

I don't mean to criticize anybody for just watching and liking the game. I just want to criticize the overhyped treatment the Super Bowl gets. Really, if it were that great, the whole world would care and not just Americans.

Nonetheless, I hope everyone who decides to give up a few hours of life to watch the game has a good time. Meanwhile, I'll be inhabiting the low traffic and short store lines and enjoying every minute of it.

Chris Hoffman is a journalism senior and a Mustang Daily staff writer.

Mustang Daily
Lectures by the P.P.P

Understanding the Professors Preferred Pupil

Editor:

Most Cal Poly students are familiar with this scenario: It's the first lecturing day of one of your classes (after the scheduling nightmare has been resolved), and you calmly take your seat at the back of the crowded room. You don't exactly know why you prefer the back, but fail to switch his ways, apparently ignorant of the hateful stares boring into the back his cranium.

I have shared these same negative feelings towards the illustrious P.P.P (Professor's Preferred Pupil). After a few years in college, I've been driven to focus in on exactly why the average student is still annoyed by these people, as many tend to breach the social web by so much that they really are a hindrance to overall class participation.

On the other hand, I have found a respect for those that have broken themselves free of the social anchor that holds so many intelligent people back. I have enjoyed participating in classes which many people are passionate about a particular subject, where students are willing to communicate their ideas with eloquence checked by a humble demeanor.

After much introspection of this subject, I feel less constrained from speaking up in class. Nevertheless, I still choose to sit near the back when I voice my opinions, as I detect the feeling of 30 people staring at the back of my head while I speak. I explore others to speak up in class when there are more people doing it, class is much more enjoyable.

Chris Schmauch is an art & design senior.

Don't forget about the bare necessities

As I walked into the women's restroom in the first floor of the University Union, I found something so disturbing, I couldn't help but bitch about it. While I should be using this page to sound off about world hunger or the state of the nation, instead I bring to you another travesty - no feminine necessities in the restroom! No tampons, no sanitary napkins, nothing but a condom dispenser.

Now I don't know about you, but at school I find myself in need of a tampon much more often than a condom. Granted, one day I might be rushing to the UU bathroom in the midst of a passionate quickie, though so far I haven't been that fortunate. I don't dismiss the need of women having the freedom and privacy to purchase condoms in restrooms, yet I also demand the right to buy a convenient quarter-worth of protection.

I have been saved many times by those wonderful machines, and it would be nice to have that piece of mind everywhere on campus. The only option right now is to race to the upstairs UU restroom and bar one there. Knowing my luck, it would be closed for cleaning.

There are no compassion theories floating around in my brain, rather I think this was just a simple case of human error. I won't blame this one on 'the man' keeping us down. I'm sure that whoever made the executive decision to install that condom machine assumed the tampon/condom dispenser was already there. Believe me, I searched for it and it is not!

Don't ignore the injustice any longer. This is one mistake that needs immediate attention before another unsuspecting female wandeers into the bathroom looking for comfort. Just don't remove the condom machine to make room for a dispenser — you never can tell when it might come in handy.

Whitney Phaneuf is a journalism junior who understands that 'that time of the month' is not always predictable, hence the need for bathrooms with supplies.

Mustang Daily Valentine's Classified Order Form

Graphic Arts Building Rm. 226, Cal Poly State University
San Luis Obispo, CA 93407
(805) 756-1143 (phone) (805) 756-6784 (fax)

Name

Address

Telephone

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>AD RATES</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Regular 8 point type</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>14 point type</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boldface</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

X

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>(# of lines)</th>
<th>($ per line)</th>
<th>(extra charges)</th>
<th>(Total Due)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

AD DEADLINE IS MONDAY, FEBRUARY 8TH AT 10:00 AM!!!

Ads turned in later than the deadline will be subject to a late fee.

14 pt. type ends here!
Cal Poly Plan

What does it mean to you and the College of Liberal Arts?

Harry Hellenbrand, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, invites College of Liberal Arts’ students to a series of interactive forums to discuss the plan.

All forums will be held in the University Union, Room 220

February 1st
2:00 p.m. - 3:00 p.m.

February 10th
9:00 a.m. - 10:00 a.m.

February 25th
2:00 p.m. - 3:00 p.m.

Mustang Daily

With Walsh, Niners will be Super

A few solid backups will show up late in the coming season.

Terrell Owens has already proven he's the receiver of the Niners' future. J.J. Stokes could be deadly if he start every game. There's only one problem — Jerry Rice. I challenge Rice to do one of two things — either retire at the end of this season or take a huge pay cut and give Walsh some precious cap room.

Even when Bryant Young returns from his injury, the Niners will need some help on the defensive line. When Young went down, they lost their entire pass rush. Draft picks would be wisely spent on some linemen, who excel when brought through the system, much like Dana Stubblefield and Young.

Linebacker is another position in pretty good shape. Ken Norton Jr., Warrick and Anthony Peterson will continue to provide solid play.

The most troubled part of the team is the secondary. They’ve played adequately before, but many other seasons were plac kicker Morten Anderson, who made his reputation in New Orleans. quarterback Steve McNair, who seems to have been a tack to all of the league’s recent greats, and defenders Eugene Robinson and Coryell Beckham, who made it to the Super Bowl with other teams.

Do that worry Atlanta? Heck no. “People will know all about us,” Tuggle said, “if we win on Sunday.”

Harry Hellenbrand, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, invites College of Liberal Arts’ students to a series of interactive forums to discuss the plan.

All forums will be held in the University Union, Room 220

February 1st
2:00 p.m. - 3:00 p.m.

February 10th
9:00 a.m. - 10:00 a.m.

February 25th
2:00 p.m. - 3:00 p.m.

Watch Your News cast! Catch C.P.T.V. this week for the latest on:

The Poly Plan Peer Health Cal Poly Sports

Off campus: Sat. and Sun. from 8 - 9 a.m. on Charter channel 6
On campus: Fri. at 8:30 p.m. on channel 16

ADULT CABARET
Exotic Dancers

Featuring the Central Coast's Most Beautiful Ladies

MONDAY
College Night "Free Admission" with valid I.D.

WEDNESDAY
Amateur Night Come in and see beautiful ladies on stage for the first time competing for prizes

SANTA MARIA, 505 S. BROADWAY
Santa Maria #349-9335

CLIP & SAVE
ALWAYS HIRING DANCERS APPLICANTS IN PERSON MAKE $$$ WILL TRAVEL AND FLEXIBLE HOURS OR TRY AMATEUR NIGHT WED.

SPEARMIN T
ADULT CABARETS

6 Friday, January 29, 1999

If anyone can do it, Bill Walsh can.

For the 49ers to get back to the Super Bowl, a combination of free agents, draft picks and salary cap maneuvering will need to be made by the Niners' new general manager.

He's built the team before, through a series of deals and trades in the early 1980s, but now he's got a much tougher task ahead.

The Niners are a veteran-heavy team. The experience they bring is great, but they lose quickness. Steve Young, of course, is the exception to this rule, so he seems to get better with age.

A quarterback for the future needs to be one of the first priorities for Walsh's front office. Jim Druckenmiller doesn't seem to cut it, so another quarterback needs to be brought in.

The backfield is set, as long as Garrison Hearst recovers from his injury suffered in the Atlanta loss. Having Terry Kirby and Marcus Allen to lean on also gives the Niners a potent running attack.

 Offensive linemen have always been tough to get in San Francisco, but the line doesn’t need much help.

Matt Sterling

continued from page 2

Romanski, whose antics—spitting, slamming on opponents—gave him a recognizable image, even if it doesn’t match his true persona.

They have Sharpe, the runaway winner of the NFL’s award for Most Valuable Receiver. Remember, the reason that Steve Young is so good is that he can catch the ball for a while under the greatest quarterback ever, Joe Montana, where Walsh could do some of his magic through either draft or free agency.

The Niners aren’t that far from getting back to the Super Bowl, but additions must be made at crucial positions. With Walsh at the helm, the Niners could be holding up another Lombardi trophy as soon as next January.

BRONCOS
continued from page 2

until then, but a kicking career was born.

He converted none of 11 field goals that season, including two game-winners, one of which was a 52-yarder that remains a school record.

Emanuel went on to Hawaii, where, in his first college game, his last-minute kick upset Iowa. He was named All-American, and his 79 field goals were one shy of the NCAA record.

Drafted by the Denver Broncos in the third round in 1993, Emanuel has continued to mount.

Emanuel boasts a franchise-best 781 field-goal percentage (157 of 201), and this season he ran his consecutive field goal streak to 18, before having a kick blocked on Dec. 6. He has made his last 235 extra point kicks and has made 259 of 280, the career percentage (92.6) in NFL history.

His 51-yard field goal, the second-longest in Super Bowl history, helped the Broncos beat Green Bay 31-24 last January. Last Oct. 25, he matched the longest field goal in league history, booting a 63-yarder to tie the 26-year-old record set by Tom Dempsey.

Next month, he will head to his second Pro Bowl.

Emanuel credits much of his success to the development of the young booters.

Emanuel and the organization have been a model of longevity, routinely making the Pro Bowl.

“Try to go over in my mind every possible situation that might happen,” he said. “You don’t want to be surprised by anything. I go over different wind conditions, rain, different hash marks, going both directions."

“Then I try to work in my mind through visualization routine he performed every Friday before a game. The adrenaline is always cranking.”

When the Niners眇 new general manager, Ken Norton Jr., Winfred Tubbs and Anthony Peterson will continue to provide solid play.

With Walsh at the helm, the Niners could be holding up another Lombardi trophy as soon as next January.
By Andy Castagnola

Mustang Daily

I’ve sat through 18 weeks of mediocrity. Sunday after Sunday of big-money giving low-quality performances. It’s disheartening, to be sure.

But this Sunday my ship will finally come in. The cream of advertising’s top will shine for 29 total minutes. This is the Super Bowl of commercials.

Millions of dollars, 150 of them, will change hands from advertisers to the Fox television network for Sunday air time. Fox wants $1.6 million for 15 seconds of ads during the game. At the Fox prime time.

It’s not always advantageous to be there.” Swarts said about advertising during the Super Bowl. “You have to think about what your message is and see if that’s the best avenue.

Even without some regulars, 7 percent of Americans will flip on the game just to watch commercials, according to a survey by Eister and Associates. Thirty-three percent of people who watched them on Sunday work Monday.

I, on the other hand, watch because the Super Bowl is my Christmas. People spend bucket loads of money so that I have something to play with for 30 seconds.

“Like Bud, few companies will have surprises for Sunday. M&M’s has a new Crispy character, Victoria’s Secret models have a new online fashion show and Domino’s have gone barbecue.

On Saturday, Apple Computer gave away a toy for its commercial. HAL, the talking computer from ‘2001: A Space Odyssey,’ will converse with a guy named Dave. Apparently, Dave bought a Mac, which saved him from the YMCA page, and now he’s worried that Dave likes his Mac better.

2001, the World Wrestling Federation raised the price for its commercial, too. The ad shows a typical day at WWF headquarters. Bodies fly through windows and computer keyboards. The Undertaker, Stone Cold Steve Austin and 150 of my favorites didn’t even surprise us. Everyone knows the Undertaker.

“Money continued from page 2

Well according to the NFL, the cost of the Vince Lombardi Trophy, awarded to Sunday’s victor is $10,000. And those rings the players always talk about winning cost $5,000 per ring, before adjustments and increases in gold and diamonds.

The NFL also pays for the much less expensive rings for the losing team. According to a survey by Eisner and Associates, 33 percent of fans always talk about winning the Super Bowl.

The tower will control air traffic above golf courses located on the property. Even the stadium is spending a small fortune for football fans. The Federal Aviation Administration has built a temporary tower which will allow the flight control tower to be dismantled.

tent for its commercial. HAL, the talking computer from ‘2001: A Space Odyssey,’ will converse with a guy named Dave.

Apple Computers gave away the newest Crispy character, Victoria’s Secret models have a new online fashion show and Domino’s have gone barbecue.

The NFL also pays for the much less expensive rings for the losing team. According to a survey by Eisner and Associates, 33 percent of fans always talk about winning the Super Bowl.

The NFL distributes the rights for the Super Bowl between Fox and CBS, which will pair the game just to watch commercials, according to a survey by Eister and Associates. Thirty-three percent of people who watched them on Sunday work Monday.

I, on the other hand, watch because the Super Bowl is my Christmas. People spend bucket loads of money so that I have something to play with for 30 seconds.

“Like Bud, few companies will have surprises for Sunday. M&M’s has a new Crispy character, Victoria’s Secret models have a new online fashion show and Domino’s have gone barbecue...”

ATLANTA continued from page 2

Yesterday was a good day for me. I didn’t have a drink... or even a desire.” Mathis, who had a team-high 13 TDs and 75 receptions for 1,280 yards this season, made his arrival here.

“Tarrance Mathis, who had a team-high 13 TDs and 75 receptions for 1,280 yards this season, made his arrival here. Mathis, 31, grew up in Stone Mountain, Ga., and learned responsibility at a very young age. He raised his two sisters while his mother worked to keep the family together.

Tarrance Mathis would get his sisters dressed and off to school, then personally would make sure they returned home safely at night. Now he’s taking care of himself. And at the Super Bowl, he has let us all know.

“Tarrance Mathis, who had a team-high 13 TDs and 75 receptions for 1,280 yards this season, made his arrival here. Mathis, 31, grew up in Stone Mountain, Ga., and learned responsibility at a very young age. He raised his two sisters while his mother worked to keep the family together.

Tarrance Mathis would get his sisters dressed and off to school, then personally would make sure they returned home safely at night. Now he’s taking care of himself. And at the Super Bowl, he has let us all know.

“Tarrance Mathis, who had a team-high 13 TDs and 75 receptions for 1,280 yards this season, made his arrival here. Mathis, 31, grew up in Stone Mountain, Ga., and learned responsibility at a very young age. He raised his two sisters while his mother worked to keep the family together.

Tarrance Mathis would get his sisters dressed and off to school, then personally would make sure they returned home safely at night. Now he’s taking care of himself. And at the Super Bowl, he has let us all know.

Falcons Rushing Offense
Jamal Anderson led the NFC with 1,846 yards and set an NFL record with 415 carries. The Falcons will force the ball to Anderson in attempt to control the game and the clock.

Broncos Passing Defense
Led by linebackers John Mobley and Bill Romanowski, the rush defense ranks third in the NFL giving up only 3.6 yards per carry.

Advantage:
FALCONS. Jamal Anderson carries the load for his team. While this should prove a good matchup, the Falcons committinig to the run will eventually wear the Broncos defense down.

Falcons Passing Offense
Chris Chandler will get the ball to receivers Tony Martin and Terrence Mathis, who combined for 130 receptions and over 2,200 yards. Mathis acts as a possession receiver while Martin can stretch the defense with his speed.

Broncos Passing Defense
If the Broncos have a weakness, this is it. While the pass rush is an ordinary 15th in sacks, the secondary can easily be exploited as they yielded 228 pass yards per game (26th in the NFL).

Advantage:
FALCONS. Due to the amount of running by Anderson, Chris Chandler will be able to free the already lackluster secondary on play action. Look for the Atlanta receivers to get behind the defense.

Falcons Rushing Defense
The heart and soul of the defense allowed a stingy 75.2 rushing yards per game. The second ranked run defense is led by ILB Jesse Tuggle and DT Travis Hall.

Broncos Rushing Offense
Terrell Davis. The running back, with the help of a bullish offensive line, became only the fourth member of the 2,000 yard club. Davis did it by averaging 5.1 yards per carry and scoring 21 times.

Advantage:
BRONCOS. No one has been able to stop Terrell Davis this year, and there is no reason to believe the Falcons will be the first.

Falcons Passing Defense
While CB Ray Buchanan frequently runs his man, he should quiet down as his pass defense allowed 212.7 yards per game (21st in the NFL).

Broncos Passing Offense
Future Hall of Famer John Elway looks to get his second Super Bowl ring in perhaps his last game. Elway will get the ball to receivers Rod Smith and Ed McCaffrey which will force the mismatch of a linebacker on TE Shannon Sharpe (64 receptions, 768 yards, 10 TDs).

Advantage:
BRONCOS. With Atlanta's defense close to the line to stop Davis, John Elway will be able to pick the weak secondary clean by spreading the ball to his receivers, Sharpe, and Davis on screens.

Falcons Special Teams
WR Tim Dwight is a dangerous kickoff returner and punt returner, ranking 25th in punt return average and dead last in punt return average.

Broncos Special Teams
K Jason Elam is money inside the fifty and CB Darren Gordon threatens to run back any punt. The Broncos also rank 6th in kickoff returns and P Tom Rouen is 7th best in punting.

Advantage:
BRONCOS. Both teams have explosive returners and accurate kickers, the punting game will be key, as it will provide Denver with better field position.

Falcons Coaching
Dan Reeves has turned a traditionally laughable Atlanta team into a contender. But, when it comes to the Super Bowl, Reeves is 0-3.

Broncos Coaching
Mike Shanahan simply knows how to win. He has a Super Bowl ring as a head coach with the Broncos after winning as an assistant with the 49ers.

Advantage:
BRONCOS. When it comes to the big game, Mike Shanahan has proven himself a winner while Dan Reeves has not.

Final Super Bowl overview analysis

BEST VEGAS BET: Mike Shanahan is 10-0 ATS as a head coach. Over 200 yards rushing in the Super Bowl. But, when it comes to the big game, Mike Shanahan simply knows how to win. He has a Super Bowl ring as a head coach with the Broncos after winning as an assistant with the 49ers.

BEST VEGAS BET: Total Falcons points scored versus Maryland's Steve Francis' total points minus against Wake Forest on Saturday.

Take Francis over Atlanta at $110 to win $100. The Falcons won't score more than 20 while Francis, who averaged 16.2 pg and 5-5 apg, goes against a weak Demon Deacon team.

KEY MATCHUP: Dan Reeves' weak heart versus the high powered Denver offense.

Coach Reeves may not be able to take the shock of witnessing a superior Broncos offense tear apart his defense. Remember to bring your pills, coach.

THE BOTTOM LINE: The Broncos have done it before; the Falcons have not. The Broncos seem to be quietly preparing for the big game while the Falcons have made a spectacle of themselves. Don't blow it, Dirty Birds. You may not get back — just ask Dan Marino.

Sports

Yesterday's Answer
In 1968, Carl Yastrzemski batted .301 for the lowest average ever to win a batting title.

Today's Question
Who holds the NFL record for most Super Bowl appearances?

Please submit answer to: johro@plymail.calpoly.edu

Please include your name.

Quotes

"Atlanta in the upset. Dan Reeves has got too much luck going for him. He's predestined."
— Lennis Cowell, wrestling coach

"I'd like to see someone shut up Shannon Sharpe. I'm going with Atlanta by 10."
— Jason Sullivan, Sports Information Director

"Denver by six. I want to see Terrell get MVP."
— Mike Wozniak, junior guard

"I will not make a prediction since sugering is against NCAA regulations. It should be a great game, though."
— John McCutcheon, Athletic Director

Schedule

Today
Women's swimming at Pepperline at 1:30 p.m.
Wrestling vs. Fresno State in Mott Gym at 7 p.m.

Saturday
Men's basketball vs. Cal State Fullerton in Mott Gym at 2 p.m.
Women's basketball at Cal State Fullerton at 2 p.m.

Sunday
Wrestling at Arizona State at 5 p.m.