Press prints 100 years after great quake

Brigette Barbosa

On April 18, 1906 at 5:12 a.m., an entire city shook and crumbled to the ground. In just under a minute, the city of San Francisco was devastated.

The San Francisco earthquake measured approximately 7.8 on the Richter Scale and left more than 3,000 people dead, 225,000 homeless, 28,000 buildings destroyed and over $400 million in monetary loss, according to the United States Geological Survey. But San Francisco was never left without a newspaper.

The Morning Call, the San Francisco Examiner and the San Francisco Chronicle all finished printing the news for April 18 when the earthquake hit. The three papers joined together for one edition and published the paper at the Oakland Tribune.

Today's date marks the 100th anniversary of the great quake and the actual printing press used by the San Francisco Chronicle that day is housed at Cal Poly. The Campbell Country Cylinder Press is still in working condition and is located in the Shakespeare Press Museum in building 26, Room 116.

The museum is home to over a dozen antique pieces of printing equipment, more than 500 fonts of handset type, multiple antique pieces of printing equipment, more than 500 fonts of handset type, multiple

To read the full story, see Printing, page 2.

Rec Center employee honored with Outstanding Student Employee award

Jemma Wilson

Brendan Gail was awarded the Outstanding Student Employee award Thursday at the alumni house patio, where he was honored for the on-going work he has done for the Cal Poly Rec Center.

"It is extremely flattering to have won, I wasn't expecting it at all," Department Head of Graphic Communications Harvey Levinson said.

"It's one of only two working museums went of the Rockies," Students and club members can use the equipment to print wedding invitations, fliers, memos, posters, cards, announcements and much more, he said.

"It is a famous collection," Levinson said. "It has been published about as far away as Russia. People call us up just to say 'Hey, can we see the museum?'"

The museum is accessible to students and tours will be given during open house this weekend. The Friends of Shakespeare Press Museum Club is an active club on campus and is headed by faculty advisor and museum curator Tom Goglio.

"We use it two to three times a year for demo purposes," Goglio said. He said it takes a couple of days to set something up.

"We actually have the printing press used to print the Chronicle, and it is still used," Department Head of Graphic Communications Harvey Levinson said.

"It's one of only two working museums went of the Rockies." Students and club

Though most of San Francisco was destroyed 100 years ago, the Campbell Country Cylinder Press is still in working condition and is housed in the Shakespeare Press Museum.

To read the full story, see Printing, page 2.

'Night run to 'Remember,' raises awareness of sexual assault

Jennifer Hall

The third annual Run to Remember, a 5K run as part of Remember Week and sponsored by The Cal Poly Women's Center, will take place tonight at 7 p.m. to raise awareness about sexual assault and violence in the community.

"Run to Remember gives women and men one night a year where they can run at night and feel safe," said Ruthie Osorio, an English senior and Run to Remember coordinator.

The run originated as a way to fundraise for Remember Week and all the money goes toward preparation for next year's events.

"Run to Remember is important because it provides a safe environment for men and women to run in, it raises awareness about sexual assault and it's fun," said Aimee Williams, a communication senior and Women's Center employee.

Last year, 230 runners participated in the event and this year the Women's Center set a goal of 300 racers.

"It's one of the top events for Greek Week and the weather is finally nice," Osorio said of the goal.

The event will include prizes, music provided by KCPR and food. The $15 fee includes a T-shirt, water bottle and glow stick. Venues in San Luis Obispo donated gift certificates and prizes for the top three finishers.

The first-place finisher will receive a one night stay at La Cuesta Inn. Other prizes include certificates to Jamba Juice, the Rec Center and Linnea's Café.

Students can register for the race at The Mustang Daily, see Runt, page 2.
Printing continued from page 1

Museum dates back to the 1930s when Charles L. Palmer began collecting and restoring historic printing equipment. According to the graphic communications Web site, Palmer was known to his friends as "Shakespeare" and in approximate 30 years, he managed to collect several pieces of historic equipment such as typecases and printing presses used by American printers during the late 1800s.

"A good deal of the original collection is here," Levenson said. The Cal Poly Graphic Communications Department owns all the equipment in the museum, but Levenson said the family is still involved in the project.

Palmer's collection was transferred to Cal Poly beginning in 1956, when the first head of the graphic communications department, Bert Fellows, provided a permanent display location in Cal Poly's new printing department. According to the Web site, Palmer continued to send equipment until his death in 1964. After years of restoration the museum opened to the public on May 24, 1969.

"We have a good diversity of people volunteering," Otero said. The race begins from the Health Center lawn and runs throughout campus where it ends again by the Health Center. Both men and women are invited to participate in the event. "We need both men and women to unite and collaborate for the cause," Otero said.

Run continued from page 1

Women's Center in the University Union or beginning at 6 p.m. prior to tonight's race on the lawn in front of the Health Center. There are over 30 student volunteers helping with the race including members of the Sigma Pi fraternity.

Award continued from page 1

"It had something everyone could enjoy," Guil said.

Last week, Gail won the National Intramural Recreational Sports Association Award, also known as the William Wasson Award, which is currently in the running for the Western Regional Recognition for the outstanding student employee award. He has also won Staff Champion and Employee of the Month several times and is currently the treasurer of the Kbo Phi Lambda honor fraternity.

ASI Associate Director Ron Skamfer nominated Gail for the award based on how Gail has handled such an important position with excellence.

"Brendan has such a huge responsibility and has done an exceptional job, he is a spectacular employee," Skamfer said. "I have a lot of freedom to be creative and work with a great group of people," Gail said.

Gail said he is extremely appreciative of the advisors and staff that have helped him accomplish all that he has. After graduation he hopes to attain his master's degree and pursue recreational work somewhere throughout the state.

"We imagine that the federal government will try to defend this law, but they haven't had any comments on it yet," said Adam Wolf, a staff attorney with the ACLU and lead counsel in the suit. "I don't see a compelling justification that they've had," he said.

When Congress amended the Higher Education Act of 1965 in 1998, a provision was included that disqualified drug offenders, no matter when the offense was committed, from receiving federal financial aid. The amended act added the drug-related question to the FAFSA worksheet, and the policy was broadly interpreted to exclude all drug offenders from receiving financial aid for a period of time determined by the type of offense committed.

But a small provision in the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005, which was signed into law earlier this year, stipulates that students can be restored ineligible for aid only if they commit a drug-related offense while they are receiving student aid.

According to Craig Munsier, director of scholarships and financial aid at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, the law's previous broad interpretation prevented some from understanding in time. "What we intended was that we didn't want students using federal money to buy or market drugs, and so I think we've lived with the law in kind of a misinterpreted way," Munsier said. "Congress has modified it to be more in line with what I think was the original intent."

But the new changes have not changed the stance of those who oppose the law, although some admit the changes are for the better. "It's a huge victory for students from around the country," said Jim Angell, a representative for Students for Sensible Drug Policy. "However, we still remain very concerned about the tremendous threat which is posed throughout college and lose funding year after year."

A report according to a file by the Government Accountability Office, between 2001 and 2004, approximately 100,000 students were denied federal financial aid because of drug offenses, which keep about $340 million in loans from being disbursed. Recently released U.S. Department of Education data shows California had the highest number of aid denials since the provision was enacted — 31,830, or 36 percent of the state's applicants. Texas had the second highest number of denials, with 13,025, or 27 percent of the state's applicants. Vermont had the lowest percentage of denials and lowest number of students who lost aid — 204 applicants, composing 12 percent of the applicant pool.

Because of limited data, the Government Accountability Office report could not determine how the provisions enacted in the Deficit Reduction Act would affect in-estates, but expected the law would lower the numbers of ineligible stu- dents.

$500 cash bonus Special offer for college and trade school students, recent grads and graduate students

May be combined with other offers, on one trip only. Maximum savings based on the type of pavement or lane in the mode you select. Limit one offer per customer. See your local Ford Lincoln Mercury dealer for details. Visit Visit us on or dealer for details.

2006 Ford Fusion

$500 cash bonus
Special Offer for College and Trade School Students, Recent Grads and Graduate Students

Check out the Daily online at: www.mustangdaily.net

ACLU says FAFSA's drug policy unfair to students

Johnny Perez

DAILY MUSTANG (U. NEBRASKA)

LINCOLN, Neb. — A heated debate between civil libertarians, advocates and federal government officials has spilled into the federal court system, and most of it revolves around the 31st question on the U.S. Department of Education's Free Application for Federal Student Aid. Most FAFSA questions deal with personal information and finances, but one asks if applicants have been convicted of possessing or selling illegal drugs. That portion has some questioning the morality — and constitutionality — of a law that denies federal financial aid to student drug offenders for a certain period of time.

Now, the American Civil Liberties Union is pursuing a class-action lawsuit in South Dakota on behalf of three students, the nonprofit organization Students for Sensible Drug Policy and anyone else who claims to have been affected by the law. The ACLU complaint has two primary arguments. The policy violates the equal protection component of the due process clause of the 14th Amendment by alleging "singling out" drug offenders, while other types of offenses go ignored, and the policy violates the double jeopardy clause of the Fifth Amendment. Drug offenders become punished twice for their offenses — once in court and second through their financial aid rescission.

"They're asking drug offenders, from a murderer to a shoplifter, can receive financial aid, an individual who is caught with any amount of a controlled substance ... is automatically denied aid by the federal government," the ACLU complaint argues.

As of yet, the suit hasn't garnered much attention from the government.

"We think the federal government will try to defend this law, but they haven't had any comments on it yet," said Adam Wolf, a staff attorney with the ACLU and lead counsel in the suit. "I don't see a compelling justification that they've had," he said.

When Congress amended the Higher Education Act of 1965 in 1998, a provision was included that disqualified drug offenders, no matter when the offense was committed, from receiving federal financial aid. The amended act added the drug-related question to the FAFSA worksheet, and the policy was broadly interpreted to exclude all drug offenders from receiving financial aid for a period of time determined by the type of offense committed.

But a small provision in the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005, which was signed into law earlier this year, stipulates that students can be restored ineligible for aid only if they commit a drug-related offense while they are receiving student aid.

According to Craig Munsier, director of scholarships and financial aid at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, the law's previous broad interpretation prevented some from understanding in time. "What we intended was that we didn't want students using federal money to buy or market drugs, and so I think we've lived with the law in kind of a misinterpreted way," Munsier said. "Congress has modified it to be more in line with what I think was the original intent."

But the new changes have not changed the stance of those who oppose the law, although some admit the changes are for the better. "It's a huge victory for students from around the country," said Jim Angell, a representative for Students for Sensible Drug Policy. "However, we still remain very concerned about the tremendous threat which is posed throughout college and lose funding year after year."

A report according to a file by the Government Accountability Office, between 2001 and 2004, approximately 100,000 students were denied federal financial aid because of drug offenses, which keep about $340 million in loans from being disbursed. Recently released U.S. Department of Education data shows California had the highest number of aid denials since the provision was enacted — 31,830, or 36 percent of the state's applicants. Texas had the second highest number of denials, with 13,025, or 27 percent of the state's applicants. Vermont had the lowest percentage of denials and lowest number of students who lost aid — 204 applicants, composing 12 percent of the applicant pool.

Because of limited data, the Government Accountability Office report could not determine how the provisions enacted in the Deficit Reduction Act would affect in-estates, but expected the law would lower the numbers of ineligible students.

Solution, bps, and computer program at www.sudoku.com

PUZZLE SPONSORSHIP AVAILABLE

CONTACT MUSTANG DAILY ADVERTISING

(805) 756-1143

Tuesday, April 18, 2006

News editor: Caitlin Donnell • mustangdailynews@gmail.com
WHO SAID THAT?

The first duty of a leader is to make himself be loved withoutour courting love. To be loved without 'playing up' to anyone, even to himself.
— Andre Malraux (1901 - 1976)

We now accept the fact that learning is a lifelong process of keeping abreast of change. And the most pressing task is that every man present his views without penalty; there must be spirit of tolerance in the entire population.
— Albert Einstein

Ablution: The washing of the body or some part of it.

Difflent: Bashful or unassertive

Wordly Wise

State

SANTA CRUZ — Vandals targeted sport utility vehicles, slashing tires and spray-painting messages aimed at owners of the gas guzzlers.

At least six SUVs were damaged during the weekend, police said. Spray-painted messages on the vehicles included "Oil equals Blood" and "Duzell."

Andrea Mazzi, owner of a GMC Yukon, said she saw a group of 30 to 40 young men on bicycles ride away after using a knife to slash her tires late Saturday.

— The Associated Press

SANTA ANA — A homeless man searching through garbage bins for recyclable cans found a missing wallet and had it returned to its owner.

Kim Bogue, who works as a janitor in the city’s government buildings, realized that her wallet was missing last week, and double-checked ever get back the $900 and credit cards inside, she said.

— The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Former Gov. George Ryan, who drew international praise when he commuted the sentences of everyone on Illinois’ death row, was convicted of racketeering and fraud Monday in a corruption scandal that ended his political career in 2003. Ryan, 72, stone-faced as the verdict was read, and afterwards, vowed to appeal.

— The Associated Press

PURCELL, Okla. — A group of under 10-year-old girls arranged Monday on first-degree murder charges in the killing of a 10-year-old girl for what authorities said was an elaborate plan to eat human flesh.

Kevin Ray Underwood appeared before McClain County Judge Gary D. Burger, who ordered a not guilty plea for Underwood and assigned him a court-appointed attorney.

— The Associated Press

VERACRUZ, Mexico — A bus carrying Mexican tourists plunged off a nearly 650-foot cliff Monday, killing 43, police said.

The bus was on its way from the western city of Guadalajara to the Gulf coast city of Tabasco following the Easter week holiday. Three people were injured, and authorities said the number of victims could increase.

— The Associated Press

International

PMEN, Iran — Iran’s president has thrown a new wrinkle into the nuclear debate by claiming his country is testing a centrifuge that could be used to more speedily create fuel for power plants or atomic weapons.

Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad told students Wednesday that the Islamic republic was testing the P-2 centrifuge — a more sophisticated type than a previously tested and less-sophisticated type of centrifuge.

— The Associated Press

The Face of Cal Poly

presented by Meet the Editors

Where friends meet and business gets done
Sunday 5-30 - 10
Student Dinner Night
7/2 craft beer & menu items with Student ID
Sunday and Monday 10-2 a.m.
Karaoke

Tuesday Night
80's Night with DJ Payne
Free Tostada Bar 9-10
$1.50 well drinks 9-30, 10-30
$2.50 well drinks 10-30 - close
$2.00 Bud light at night!

Wednesday Night 10 pm
DJ Enertia

Thursday Night 10 pm
DJ Kevlar

Friday Night Fever w/ DJ Jin Ho

Saturday Night 10 pm
The Jin Ho Show w/ DJ Jin Ho

Sunday 3-6
Swing Dance Sunday featuring Sugar Daddy Swing Kings

Coming April 26th
Full Day Affair

www.mustangdaily.net

Assistant news editor: Erick Smith • esmith@calpoly.edu
Online: www.mustangdaily.net

LOW TO NO COST
BIRTH CONTROL

STI screening and treatment
Pap and cancer screening
Minor urgent care
Free birth control pills
Free Condoms
Emergency Contraception

HealthWorks
Affordable Confidential Caring
"Walk Ins Welcome"
San Luis Obispo at University Square
www.healthworksscc.com • phone: 542-0900
Bush's chief of staff invites top aides to leave before impending shake-up

Nedra Pickler
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Signaling a possible shake-up among President Bush's senior aides, the new White House chief of staff told top presidential aides Monday to expect changes that "refresh and re-energize the team." He invited anyone who is thinking of leaving before year's end to do so now.

Joshua Bolten, who took over the top staff job late Friday, did not ask for anyone's resignation in his first Monday morning staff meeting with the president's senior aides, presidential spokesman Scott McClellan said. No one stepped forward to say they would leave, either, McClellan said.

Bolten has Bush's full authority to make changes to the president's staff, which has had a low turnover rate, with many aides serving him for years. Bolten already has had closed door meetings with some top advisers and plans more in the coming 10 days or so to talk about their roles going forward, McClellan said.

McClellan said Bolten told the aides to expect "some changes and adjustments" after he's gone through the process of talking to the staff.

"Josh talked to us and talked about how he is assuming his new position and responsibilities during a challenging time period," McClellan said. "We remain engaged in an ongoing global war on terrorism, and that is of course our highest priority. But there are a number of other priorities that we are working to accomplish as well. And Josh talked about how this will refresh and re-energize the team and for all of us to renew our commitment as we go forward."

Bolten is only Bush's second chief of staff. His predecessor, Andy Card, served Bush for more than five years but resigned amidst tension with Congress, all-time low approval ratings for Bush and calls from Democrats and Republicans to bring in a fresh perspective.

Bolten had served as the president's budget director and will be announcing a replacement for that position soon, McClellan said. The job of domestic policy adviser at the White House is open, as well. Further changes are clearly on the horizon, and Bolten gave top aides the option of leaving first.

"He wanted to make sure he had the team in place that is going to be here for a minimum of the remainder of the year," McClellan said. "And he said if people are thinking about leaving, that now is the time to come to such a decision."

McClellan would not comment on whether plans to continue working at the White House.

"I never speculate about personnel measures," McClellan said, repeating his standard reply to questions about staff changes with a smile.

Palestinian bomber blows himself up near Tel Aviv eatery; 9 others killed

Daniel Robinson
ASSOCIATED PRESS

TEL AVIV, Israel — A Palestinian suicide bomber blew himself up outside a fast-food restaurant in a bustling area of Tel Aviv during the Passover holiday Monday, killing nine other people and wounding dozens in the deadliest Palestinian attack in more than a year.

The new Palestinian government, led by Hamas, called the attack a legitimate response to Israeli "aggression," Israel said it held Hamas ultimately responsible — even though a militant group, Islamic Jihad, claimed responsibility and — and would respond "as necessary."

"We shall continue to use all means at our disposal to prevent every other attempt," Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert said.

Islamic defense chiefs were to consult later Monday, but security officials said a possible reoccupation of Gaza, the base of the new Hamas government, was not being considered.

The White House strongly condemned the attack, calling it "a despicable act of terror for which there is no excuse or justification."

A security guard posted outside the restaurant, the target of a suicide bombing in January, prevented Monday's bomber from entering the building, police said.

It was the first suicide attack in Israel since the Hamas militant group took over the Palestinian government last 1 1/2 weeks ago. Hamas, which has killed hundreds of Israelis in attacks, has largely observed a cease-fire since February 2005.

Islamic Jihad, which is believed to be funded in part by Iran and refuses to observe a cease-fire, claimed responsibility in a telephone call to The Associated Press. The group identified the bomber as Sami Hammad, 21, from the West Bank village of Arabah.

In a video released by the group, Hammad said the bombing was dedicated to the thousands of Palestinian prisoners in Israeli jails.

"I carry out this operation in response to the massacre committed by the Zionist enemy against our people and brothers in the West Bank and Gaza," he said in the video.

"There will be more such operations with the will of God. I dedicate this operation to prisoners." Hammad was dressed in black and had tattoos on his arms. He read a yellow Quranic verses written on it.

Hammad's family said he had studied social work in a distance-learning program but was forced to quit because of money problems. His mother, Samiya, said she saw him warning signs her son was involved with a militant group.

"He's been working for a week as a waiter at a park. I thought he really went to work," she said.

After learning of the bombing, family members began moving furniture and belongings out of their home, fearing it would be demolished by the Israeli military.

Islamic Jihad has claimed responsibility for all six of the previous suicide attacks inside Israel since the cease-fire was declared. On Sunday, the group pledged to carry out more attacks.

The response by Hamas leaders represented a sharp departure from the previous Palestinian leadership's immediate condemnations of such attacks.

"We think that this operation ... is a direct result of the policy of the occupation and the brutal aggression and siege committed against our people," said the Hamas interior minister, spokesman for the Hamas-led Interior Ministry.

Hamas spokesman Mahmoud Ramahi, secretary of the Palestinian legislature, told the British Broadcasting Corp. the bombing "is a reaction from some Palestinians against the Israeli politics."

The only one responsible for these acts is the Israeli government," he said.

Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas, of the rival Fatah Party, condemned the bombing, calling it a "terrorist attack." He said he ordered the Palestinian security forces to try to prevent more attacks.

"These kinds of attacks harm the Palestinian interest, and we as an authorities and government must move to stop it," he said. "We will not stop pursuing anyone who carries out such attacks."

The bomber attack at about 1:40 p.m. at "The Mayor Palafel" restaurant, which was targeted in a Jan. 19 attack that wounded 20 people. The restaurant is in the New Shevaatar neighborhood near Tel Aviv's central bus station, which was crowded with holiday travelers.
Jandy Jones
MERIDIAN, ID. — When three grown men challenged a Little League baseball team for rights to play on the field, no one knew what they were getting themselves into:

The little league team thought it had the game in the bag until Gus, played by Rob Schneider, hit one out of the park. Gus continued to hit home runs and pitch nothing but strikes. The Little League team lost.

Gus’ team consisted of himself and two older guys that had never played baseball. Ritchie, played by David Spade, and Clark, played by Jon Heder.

“The Benchwarmers” is a tale of nerds playing baseball instead of sitting on the bench.

When Gus’ team, affectionately dubbed the Benchwarmers, is asked by Mel, played by Jon Lovitz, to play in a tournament where the winner gets a brand-new baseball field, Gus and his friends agree.

The three-man team eventually grows in popularity and is supported by children who never got to play baseball.

Determined to win the big game, Mel gets his friend Reggie Jackson, played by himself, to teach the Benchwarmers how to hit, catch and run. Jackson’s teachings include hot-potato catching, ding-dong ditch and mailbox smashing.

The semifinal game proves to be a challenge when the other team brings in a Dominican Republican player to pitch and hit against the Benchwarmers. The Benchwarmers overcome their challenger and win on to the big game.

Right before the big game, fans discover that Gus used to be a bully. Gus’ fame begins to decline until he redeems himself in more ways than one.

The ending will leave viewers laughing and talking about the heart-warming change of the bullying Little Leaguers.

The director, Dennis Dugan, did an excellent job creating laugh-out-loud scenes and keeping the audience guessing with his office box hit.

The movie in its first week and has already grossed $19 million, making it to No. 2 in the list of top movies just in its first week-end April 7.

This movie includes more than just funny scenes and bullying. Dugan manages to include morals in his story. The Benchwarmers emphasize the effects of bullying and how nothing good comes of it.

The first scene shows Gus watching three children, who were playing baseball, getting picked on by an older Little League team. He intercedes after Nelson, Mel’s son, gets pinned and tortured.

After watching the children play baseball, Gus was inspired to gather his friends to play. When Clark, Gus and Ritchie go back to the field to play, they are confronted by the Little League bullies. This is when the challenge for the field begins.

Nelson witnessed the Benchwarmers slaughter the Little League team and told his father, Mel, who is then inspired to start his tournament of little leaguers and three older guys.

“The Benchwarmers” isn’t about revenge. It is about giving all children a chance to play baseball and not sit in the dugout.

The baseball comedy will leave audiences asking and reciting lines from the movie much like Heder’s debut movie “Napoleon Dynamite.”

Q: What do your daughters (ages 19, 16 and 13) think about your work?
A: My youngest daughter has seen some things, like when I hosted the (2002 Winter) Olympics, but she has not seen any of the dirty things. My 16-year-old actually watched my stand-up at the Laugh Factory (a comedy club)! His 16th birthday. My 19-year-old, on her graduation, went to see me host the (2020 Winter) Olympics, but she has not seen any of the dirty things. My 16-year-old actually watched my stand-up at the Laugh Factory (a comedy club)! His 16th birthday. My 19-year-old, on her graduation, went to see me host the (2020 Winter) Olympics, but she has not seen any of the dirty things. My 16-year-old actually watched my stand-up at the Laugh Factory (a comedy club)!

Q: Do you regret having done the show?
A: I was working 80 hours a week (between “Full House” and “America’s Funniest Home Videos”). I was going nuts. I felt like I was funny but didn’t feel funny on the shows. But then I just went, “Shut up, it’s like the giving tree. You’re lucky, and this is a good job.”

Q: You’ve said you were doing this type of comedy when you were on “Full House.” Was it hard for you to keep the rancho-tastes separate from “Full House”?
A: I started my comedy when I was 17, and I had wild jokes from the start. In fact, my first joke was, “I have the brain of a German sheepdog and the body of a 16-year-old boy. They are in my car. Do you want to see them?” But the show changed me. I felt like my voice was tainted because I had to serve that audience. If I cursed, it would have been a big deal in my stand-up back then. Everything I do now is R-rated.

Q: You’ve hosted the (2002 Winter) Olympics, but she has not seen any of the dirty things. My 16-year-old actually watched my stand-up at the Laugh Factory (a comedy club)!

Q: Is it hard for you to break out of that Danny Tanner typecasting?
A: I’ve hosted the (2002 Winter) Olympics, but she has not seen any of the dirty things. My 16-year-old actually watched my stand-up at the Laugh Factory (a comedy club)!

Q: What do you do with your girls (ages 19, 16 and 13) think about your work?
A: My youngest daughter has seen some things, like when I hosted the (2002 Winter) Olympics, but she has not seen any of the dirty things. My 16-year-old actually watched my stand-up at the Laugh Factory (a comedy club)! His 16th birthday. My 19-year-old, on her graduation, went to see me host the (2020 Winter) Olympics, but she has not seen any of the dirty things. My 16-year-old actually watched my stand-up at the Laugh Factory (a comedy club)!

Q: Do you still keep in touch with the rest of the cast from “Full House”?
A: All the time. We went to dinner in Malibu. There were 14 of us and people were just looking at us. They were probably thinking, “What is with these people?”

Bob Saget on ‘Full House’ and then some

Ketu Patel
DAILY MUSTANG (NORTHWESTERN U.

EVANSTON, Ill. — Q: Why do you rip on the Danny Tanner persona in your stand-up?
A: After doing “The Aristocrats” and “Entourage,” it’s been pretty easy. I also did a play in New York (“Privilege”). That gave me a lot of confidence. Doing theater and movies generally will do that. I get offered a lot of things, I can host all these terrible game shows, but I don’t want to do that.

Q: Do you still keep in touch with the rest of the cast from “Full House”?
A: All the time. We went to dinner in Malibu. There were 14 of us and people were just looking at us. They were probably thinking, “What is with these people?”

Q: You’ve said you were doing this type of comedy when you were on “Full House.” Was it hard for you to keep the ranch-tastes separate from “Full House”?
A: I started my comedy when I was 17, and I had wild jokes from the start. In fact, my first joke was, “I have the brain of a German sheepdog and the body of a 16-year-old boy. They are in my car. Do you want to see them?” But the show changed me. I felt like my voice was tainted because I had to serve that audience. If I cursed, it would have been a big deal in my stand-up back then. Everything I do now is R-rated.
EDITORIAL STAFF

editor in chief: Dan Watson managing editor: Kristen Otto news editor: Scott Shiltz assistant news editor: Erick Smith sports editor: Frank Strand assistant sports editor: Chris Gunn divisum sporting editor: Maricel Mendoza assistant dividends editor Nick Corry
photo editor: Sheila Scholz
photographers Tom Sanders, Brennan Angel, Whitney Guenter, Nick Camacho design editor: Louise Doby assistant design editor: Jessica Grewealt copy editors: Jonas Frieda, Kristen Marschik online editor Ryan Charrand ad director: Tago Bures office manager: Jonelle Venema ad designers Lassonia Johnson, Tiffany Mine, Alan Navarro, Jacob Zuckerman, Jenny Delm, Jessica Grewealt
advertising representatives Liz Carbery, Jennifer Collins, Linda Smith, Lucy Beesom, Phong Yung, Alcinda Dore, Amber Freeman, Emily Horakah, Rachel Oshibana, Jamie Ranom ad layout manager: Cere Chen clerical assistant: Laura Cho facuity advisor: George Ramos
general manager: Paul Bittik

WRITE A LETTER

Mustang Daily reserves the right to edit letters for grammar, profanities and length. Letters, commentaries and cartoons do not represent the views of the Mustang Daily. Please limit length to 250 words. Letters should include the writer's full name, phone number, major and class standing. Letters must be on a Cal Poly e-mail account. Do not send letters as an attachment. Please send the text in the body of the e-mail.

By e-mail: mustangdaily@gmail.com
By mail: Letters to the Editor Building 26, Room 226 Cal Poly, SLO, CA 93407

CORRECTIONS

The Mustang Daily staff takes pride in publishing a daily newspaper for the Cal Poly campus and the neighboring community. We appreciate your readership and are thankful for your careful reading. Please send your correction suggestions to mustangdaily@gmail.com

NOTICE

The Mustang Daily is a "designated public forum." All current editors have full authority to make all content decisions without censure or advance approval.

April 18, 2006
Volume LXXIX, No. 115/2206 Mustang Daily

"Hey, you screwed me."
Stadium
continued from page 8
Construction started in September 2005 and it took eight to nine weeks to take it down. Meanwhile, the contractors will be cleaning up and making some last touches.

"It’s been a pretty typical job," Judd said, but added, "It took a while to get the driveway set up with Union Pacific Railway." Students and residents now have a clear pathway from the Mustang Village apartments across the railroad tracks to campus.

Coach
continued from page 8
Soccer, as well as in Austria.

Even though his professional playing career was over, Holocher remained passionate about the game and soccer and the way it is played. He said that coaching became a natural next step, since, even as a player, he possessed coaching tendencies and has always loved figuring out how games are won. At 28 years old, Holocher found himself the men’s head soccer coach at UC Santa Cruz, where he remained for one year.

"Developing the UC Santa Cruz program was special," Holocher says. "I loved improving the fortunes of that program."

It was this desire to "develop something great," as well as the natural beauty of San Luis Obispo that brought Holocher to Cal Poly. Holocher feels the same type of excitement with the Cal Poly players as he did at UCSC. His eventual goal as men’s head coach is to "create a nationally-regarded program, and (to) compete in and win a NCAA championship."

In the short-term, Holocher seeks to improve his team by developing the individual players. Holocher says, "People learn a lot about life from any good organization." Holocher says, "Learning how to budget time, taking care of one’s body and learning the discipline it takes to be successful," are all benefits of the soccer program, he says. He hopes to attract players who, besides having a love for soccer, also value the effort it takes to become effective on the field. Holocher also makes it clear that he wants to use the Cal Poly Men’s soccer program to give back to the community. He remembers being amazed as a young child by the speed and effort of the professional soccer players he saw play, and hopes to encourage the players on his team to mentor the young soccer enthusiasts in the community.

"Cal Poly is the highest level of sport in this area," he says, "All of the (sports) teams are looking to be role models." He hopes to reach out to the youth soccer players of San Luis Obispo and demonstrate to them the "value of education, friendship and compassion, shown through athletic endeavor." All in all, Holocher desires to develop the Cal Poly men’s soccer team into a program that the players will leave remembering as one of the best experiences of their lives, as athletes and as people. It is with this emphasis on maturing individuals and well-rounded players that Holocher hopes to turn the team into a "nationally respected program."
The future of Mustang Stadium is becoming clearer by the day as construction continues on the visiting side bleachers.

Lauren Zahnert
MUSTANG DAILY

The Spanos Stadium renovation remains on schedule to be finished for the fall 2006 season, according to project manager Perry Judd.

"They're moving right along on the concrete structure," Judd said.

With the recent rains, football coach Rich Ellerson is not sure whether or not the stadium will be ready for opening day. He said the construction team is optimistic, but not certain. Ellerson has helped with fundraising and crisis management for this project.

"It's exciting, it's been a long time coming. A lot of people have been dreaming about this for a long time," Ellerson said.

Currently construction on the west side of the stadium is taking place at the 25-foot deck where the highest bleacher seats will be. They are also working on the elevator towers.

"It gets more and more impressive as time goes on," Judd said.

Above the bleacher seats will be eight skybox-suites, a pressroom and radio and television booths. An additional 1,500 seats will bring the total available seating to 10,000.

The stadium will be steel-framed concrete, with Spanish-tile roofing and stucco finish.

A memorial plaza will also be added where Parking Lot C-1 is now located, just south of the stadium. The plaza will be dedicated to the 16 football players, a graduate student assistant and a Mustang booster who died in a plane crash in 1960.

Judd said the cost has stayed within the $21.5 million budget. Alex G. Spanos, Richard O'Neill and others provided much of the support for the stadium through donations. Cal Poly President Warren J. Baker expressed gratitude towards Spanos in an interview with the athletics department last fall.

"We are very grateful to Alex G. Spanos for making it possible, through his generosity, for us to undertake long-needed improvements in this critically important venue for athletic, community and other university events," Judd said.

"It's going to be a gorgeous facility. When it's all done it's really going to be a tremendous addition to the university. It will be something the community will take notice of when they come to games." see Stadium, page 7

New coach sees instant opportunity

BRENNAN ANGEL MUSTANG DAILY

To most, it would seem sufficient to describe Paul Holocher's career with numbers. He was a two-time All-American college soccer player, spent seven years as a professional player and seven years as a coach at UC Santa Cruz. As head coach, he had an overall 109-24-8 team record, his team was nationally-ranked No. 2 in 2005 and made five NCAA playoff appearances in seven years. And there are many more impressive numbers on his resume.

But for Holocher, Cal Poly's new men's soccer coach, these statistics represent only part of the success he has seen to date. He finds a deeper, more personal satisfaction in the unique process of developing young teams into solid, respected programs, as well as from using the lessons of soccer to grow players into strong, well-rounded individuals.

Holocher's career began as many others do, as a young player at the high school and college levels. However, he soon progressed further than most players would dare to dream.

During his outstanding college career at Santa Clara University, Holocher led the Broncos, to a NCAA Division I championship in 1990. He also became the school's career-leading scorer, and eventually was inducted into the university's athletic hall of fame.

After his time there, Holocher advanced to the professional level of soccer, and played for the American Professional Soccer League and Major League Soccer.